'Nuisance' Law Zoning System Sought for City

MOVE TO INVOKE NUISANCE ITEMS OF CODE LAUNCHED

Councilman Russell Will Ask Council Monday To Act on Measure Providing "Teeth."

OLD ZONING LAW KILLED BY COURTS

Right of City To Deny Permits for Undesirable Buildings Would Be Tried Out.

An effort to enforce the Atlanta zoning ordinance via the nuisance route will be inaugurated Monday in city council when Horace Russell, councilman from the ninth ward, introduces a measure designed to give "teeth" to the zoning law by application of the nuisance provisions of the city code. This was learned Saturday when Mr. Russell said that he would present such a proposal.

The city's zoning law recently was held unconstitutional by the supreme court and the Russell measure is designed to enforce the provisions by another method.

The ordinance will set out that any building constructed in violation of the Atlanta zoning code be declared a nuisance and further provides for application of the principles of the law governing a nuisance to abate such structures.

Appeal may be had to the board of zoning appeals and to council and a hearing will be conducted to determine whether the proposed structure is a nuisance. If it is found that it is a nuisance, the building inspector will refuse to issue a permit. If, on the other hand, it is found that the structure would not constitute a nuisance, the permit would be issued, it is said.

In the new move, the city seeks to take advantage of the power of the city charter and laws which provide that the city has a right to abate a nuisance. A provision of the proposed ordinance would allow anyone not pleased with the result of hearings by the appeals board or the city council the right to appeal to superior courts.

TWO GOVERNORS AND TRINKLE GET GOLD MEDALS

New York, June 5.—(AP)—Two governors and one former governor will be awarded gold medals this year by the national committee on prisons and prison labor for outstanding work in furthering the establishment of industries in the penal institutions of America. They are Governor Smith, of New York; Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, and former Governor Trinkle, of Virginia.

Announcement of the awards was made today by Dr. E. S. Withim, executive director of the committee. The medals will be presented at the annual meeting of the committee at Hathard Dell farm, Ardsley, the country estate of Adolph Lewisohn, honorary president.

Louis Beck Retires;

:: VETERAN IN HARNESS FOR PAST 60 YEARS ::

Gives Workers Stock

BY LOY WARWICK.

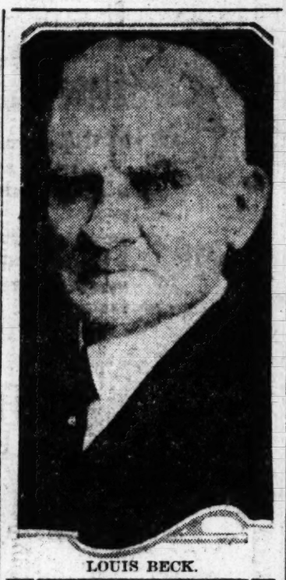

Louis Beck worked at the same job for 60 years. He is through now. His resignation has been turned in and reluctantly accepted by the board of directors of Beck and Gregg Hardware company.

It will be remembered that Mr. Beck retired from active business about six years ago, putting his protege, Will Parker, at the head of the company. A few years later Mr. Parker died and Mr. Beck took on the harness again.

But this time he has burned bridges behind him. He has disposed of the last dollar's worth of interest in the great business, a generous portion of which he gave to men who have worked with him, some of them since they were "boys in knee pants," as a reward for their loyal service.

Yet, with all of it, it is possible that Mr. Beck will be found each day at his desk. It is entirely probable that he will be on hand when anything important comes up at the store; when anybody needs any help or advice that Mr. Beck may have at his disposal. Officially, however, Mr. Beck has retired, ending a service in one business which has extended over a period longer than the life of the average man.

Louis Beck faced the serious and somewhat doubtful business of keeping soul and body together as an orphan boy. At 16 years of age he marched off to war in a gray uniform, and a year later, the conflict ended, leaving him standing alone, a bit hungry, with the business of conquering a world before him. He spent a year on the old Beck plantation in Newton county.

BARTEL TO FORM POLISH CABINET

Finance Portfolio Is Only One Causing Trouble. Regimental Bands To Honor New President.

Warsaw, June 5.—(AP)—President Moscicki tonight entrusted Professor Bartel with the formation of a new cabinet. Bartel has been head of the interim cabinet, but is absent from Warsaw at present. The new ministry can not be organized therefore until Tuesday.

Only the finance portfolio is causdifficulty. The most probable candidate for this office is M. Klarner, a prominent banker and former minister of commerce and industry in the Grabski cabinet. It is thought likely that the present acting minister of foreign affairs, M. Zalewski will be retained. When former Premier Count Skrzynski was proposed for the foreign affairs office, Marshal Pilsudski objected.

A message from Posen reports that the local troops there are preparing to send out regimental bands throughout the city in honor of the new president. This is considered by the authorities in Warsaw as indicative of a vital change in public sentiment.

POLICE MATRON HURT BY LID OF ICE BOX

Police Matron Mrs. N. P. Shellnut, 58, of 920 Highland avenue, was treated at Grady hospital early Saturday night for a slight brain concussion caused, she stated, when the lid of an ice box fell on her. Mrs. Shellnut said she was leaning over the box to get something when the lid suddenly slipped from its catch and struck her.

COOLIDGE SILENT ON APPOINTMENT

President in Quandary As Result of Opposition To Tilson; Sam Purvis To Get Marshal Post.

Washington, June 5.—(Special.)—President Coolidge is still hesitating over the nomination of a federal judge for the new middle district in Georgia, under pressure from forces seeking the appointment of W. J. Tilson, Atlanta lawyer, and those just as stoutly opposing it.

He called Senators Harris and George to the white house today for a conference but both senators declined to discuss what transpired during their talk with the president. Their position in opposition to Tilson's appointment remains unchanged.

"We are still hopeful that Tilson will not be appointed," Harris said.

Strong pressure for the Atlanta lawyer's nomination is being brought to bear by Ben Davis, of Atlanta, negro republican national committeeman, who has been here for several days.

Akerman Withdrawn.

Sam Purvis, of Ocilla, who is supported by Davis and his wing of the republican party in Georgia, has supplanted Walter Akerman, of Cartersville, as the nominee for the position of marshal of the new district, it was learned today. A commission for his appointment was sent to the white house last night by Attorney General Sargent and that for Akerman was withdrawn.

This change has no bearing on the situation as regards the judgeship, and is looked upon merely as a move to satisfy the new republican organization in the state.

The Georgia senators are not interfering in the appointment of other officials for the new district except to insist that they shall be competent and able men, but are concerning themselves with the judgeship appointment, around which the new district largely will revolve.

The nomination of a marshal, district attorney and other minor offices are expected to go up early next week, probably Monday or Tuesday in order that machinery may be set up so that the new district can function. As it is now, there is no machinery, and no business can be transacted.

Deaver Assured.

The nomination of Bascom S. Deaver, Macon attorney, as assistant district attorney, is virtually assured. He is now assistant district attorney for the southern district.

The president is in a quandary over the judgeship nomination, as a result of opposition which has been aroused against Tilson in which some republicans have joined. His record in the past as regards federal judgeship appointments is being recalled to him.

CANADIAN SEARCH FAILS TO REVEAL MISSING PASTOR

Report Mrs. Aimee McPherson Had Been Located in Edmonton Exploded by Investigation.

MOTHER CONTINUES $25,000 REWARD

Capt. Herman Cline Returns Without Ormiston; Reiterates Belief Woman Was Drowned.

Los Angeles, June 5.—(AP)—Advices that Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson has been found at Edmonson, Canada, stirred Los Angeles officials and followers of the missing evangelist for a brief time today, but investigation exploded the report.

Officials tonight were no nearer a solution of the mystery than they were 18 days ago when the Angelus Temple pastor disappeared at Santa Monica beach and was reported drowned. Despite varied reports that Mrs. McPherson has been seen alive, all clues developed have played out upon investigation.

Canada Probe Fails.

After 12 hours of running down reports from California, Edmonson police declared tonight that no evidence showed that Mrs. McPherson had entered Canada since her disappearance.

Detective Middleton, of Edmonton, who signed himself as an "international detective," started the activity by telegraphing to Los Angeles that two young men had seen Mrs. McPherson at Le Duc, and that she had driven into Edmonton, 20 miles distant.

The woman whom Middleton had declared to be Mrs. McPherson was identified at the Corona hotel in Edmonton as Mrs. Blanche T. Potter, of Los Angeles, an employee of a portrait-making concern.

Miss Zelma Argue, a life-long acquaintance of Mrs. McPherson, visited Mrs. Potter and announced that Mrs. Potter was not Mrs. McPherson.

Renews Reward Offer.

Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of the evangelist today renewed her offer of a $25,000 reward for information which would lead to the return of Mrs. McPherson, safe and unharmed. This offer was to have been withdrawn at midnight tonight but is to remain standing until midnight Saturday, June 12. The renewal, Mrs. Kennedy declared, was not in any hope that Mrs. McPherson would be located but as a challenge to those who had openly expressed the conviction that the temple pastor is alive, a voluntary or involuntary absentee.

Captain Herman Cline, chief of detectives, who went to San Francisco three days ago in search of Kenneth G. Ormiston, radio operator and close friend of Mrs. McPherson, returned today without Ormiston. Cline reiterated his belief that Mrs. McPherson had been drowned.

OGLETHORPE MAN SUCCUMBS TO FALL INTO 40-FOOT WELL

Athens, Ga., June 5.—(AP)—Lonnie Drake, Oglethorpe county farmer, died here today from the effects of an injury received when he fell into a well near Crawford.

Drake was said to have stepped into the well as he approached an abandoned house this morning, dropping 40 feet.

He is survived by his widow and four children.

EVELYN NESBIT TODAY

At the top is Thaw, as he appears today, and his mother, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, who has not yet been told of the reports that Harry and Evelyn Nesbit are planning remarriage. Below, Thaw, as he appeared years ago at his trial for killing Stanford White, and a recent picture of Evelyn. Evelyn announced the remarriage plans. Thaw denied the reports as soon as he reached Philadelphia.

BY UNITED NEWS.

Evelyn Nesbit announced last night in Atlanta City, following 24 hours in which she had seen much of Harry Thaw, her former husband, that they had been reconciled and would be remarried.

Returning to Philadelphia, Thaw denied that he intended to be married again, although he said his feelings toward Miss Nesbit were most friendly.

"It's all fixed up," said Evelyn early in the evening.

"Nothing of the sort," said Harry late in the evening.

Evelyn could not be reached for comment on the denial.

HARRY DENIES REPORT HE INTENDS TO MARRY.

Philadelphia, June 5.—Harry K. Thaw arrived here tonight from Atlantic City, N. J., and told the United News that while he had the most kindly feelings towards Evelyn Nesbit he had no intention of marrying again.

He seemed to consider the announcement made earlier in the evening at Atlantic City by Miss Nesbit that she and Thaw planned to marry and once more live together, as remarkable and not entirely serious. In fact, he contradicted reports from Atlantic City that he had heard the announcement.

"I have no intention of marrying again," he said.

Thaw seemed in fine humor.

He volunteered that he had visited with Miss Nesbit this afternoon.

"But you don't plan to marry again?" he was asked.

"No, it's just the other way," he

State To Sue For Signature Of Gwinnett

To Intervene in Litigation Over Name of Declaration Signer.

The state of Georgia will intervene in a suit brought to collect $22,500 for a signature of Button Gwinnett, one of the first governors of this state, when the case comes to trial in Philadelphia soon and an attempt will be made to bring this signature back to this state, it was announced Saturday by Attorney General George M. Napier.

Recently this signature was sold for $22,500 by the Manning estate of New York to the Rosenbach company, of Philadelphia, a company which collects rare works of art and antiques. The Rosenbach company had not paid for the signature when it received a notice from Attorney General Napier that the signature was removed from the office of the secretary of state of Georgia fifteen years ago and is the property of this state.

Button Gwinnett's signature was attached to a will of Joseph Stanley, of Augusta. The will was probated December 24, 1771, and together with many other wills of that period became the property of the state. These wills were made and probated prior to the creation of the office of county ordinary and became state property.

As one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence the signature of Button Gwinnett became exceedingly valuable because there are but few in existence. When Attorney General Napier first read of the recent sale of this signature he at once notified the Rosenbach company that the signature was the property of the state of Georgia. The will in question was listed together with other wills in a compilation completed more than fifteen years ago.

Attorney General Napier received a letter from a firm of Philadelphia lawyers Saturday stating that the Rosenbach company had not paid the Manning estate for the signature and asked him to intervene in the suit brought to collect the $22,500 brought by the Manning estate.

FOES ARE SCORED IN WITTY ADDRESS BY LLOYD GEORGE

Welshman Declares He Has Been Suddenly 'Assailed by Angry Bull of Ex-Communication.'

"ROTTEN QUIBBLE" BLAMED FOR ROW

"You Cannot Found But You Can Founder a Party on Personal Squabbles," He Asserts.

Manchester, England, June 5.—(AP) Completely unrepentant and refusing to be expelled from the liberal party, David Lloyd George, chairman of the parliamentary section of the party, addressed an enthusiastic meeting at the Manchester Reform club today. In a brilliant fighting speech, packed with laughter, provoking points and gibes at his opponents, Lloyd George declared:

"I was walking peacably along my path when suddenly I was assailed by an angry bull of ex-communication."

He paused, and said seriously: "I apologize to the holy office; it never condemned any one unheard."

Attended "Shadow Cabinet."

Demanding that if there must be a split, it should be on "a real quarrel, not a rotten quibble," Lloyd George proceeded: "I attended the meetings of the shadow cabinet—God help me—more often than any other of Lord Oxford's colleagues. I never had a personal difference with him during the whole of that time. The first disagreement was over this one cabinet and I am turned out for what?

"What is the impression conveyed by these facts—that there is something behind them?"

Mr. Lloyd George delighted his audience by quotations from panegyrics passed upon him at one time or another by those who now are trying to expel him, aiming especially at Sir John Simon, whom gossip mentions as the intended next chairman of the liberal party in the house of commons if the attack upon Lloyd George is successful.

Replies to Letters.

The former premier's speech was in reply to the recent letter written by Lord Oxford and Asquith, leader of the liberal party, to Sir Godfrey Collins, chief liberal whip, virtually reading Lloyd George out of the party.

Continuing his speech, Lloyd George attributed much of the present cabal to William R. Pringle, a former liberal member of parliament, who had criticized the liberal chairman.

Again refusing to be forced out of the liberal party he announced himself determined to fight to the last on the great principle of conciliation in dealing with millions of British workmen. Incidentally, in the course of his speech, Lloyd George claimed sole credit for putting through Irish home rule, and added: "I don't mind telling you that I sacrificed my premiership to carry through the home rule."

OVERMAN LEADING ROBERT REYNOLDS

Early Returns Show North Carolina Senator More Than Two to One Ahead in Contest.

Raleigh, N. C., June 5.—(AP)—Senator Lee S. Overman, seeking renomination on the democratic ticket over Robert R. Reynolds, of Asheville, had more than a two-to-one lead late tonight in the returns reported from today's primary.

With 179 precincts reported out of 1,717, Overman had 16,610 votes to 7,475 for Reynolds. The returns were from widely separated sections of the state and represented 21 out of the 100 counties. Reynolds was leading in only two counties, Hertford and Wake.

In the congressional race from the ninth district the incumbent, A. L. Bulwinkle, had swamped his opponent, J. A. Dimmette on the basis of the early returns for the democratic nomination. With 29 of 223 precincts reported, Bulwinkle had 3,926 votes to 68 for his opponent.

A number of state officials also were nominated.

TEMPLE POLICE CHIEF DECLARES HE SAW GUNMAN

Writes Beavers Man Answering Wilson's Description Was Visitor at His Home in February.

WAS SEEN LATER ON MITCHELL ST.

Detectives Here Redouble Efforts To Capture Man Who Fired Shot in Tragic Holdup.

Jack Wilson, Chicago gunman, whose pistol snuffed out the life of William H. Cheek in a daring hold-up of a Peachtree road grocery last December, is believed to be in Atlanta.

After having pressed a tireless search throughout the country for the leader of the bandit gang said to have fired the shot which took the merchant's life in the presence of his wife and children, Atlanta police now are scouring this city in quest of the fugitive.

Acting on a "tip" from E. D. Dewberry, chief of police at Temple, Ga., they believe that Wilson again is prowling around the scene of his master crime. In fact, they have information that Wilson has been seen within the recent past on Mitchell street.

Writes to Beavers.

Chief Dewberry wrote Chief of Police James L. Beavers Saturday that a man giving the name of Claude E. Cash came to his home on February 17 and stayed for some time. During his stay in Temple, Cash received numerous letters from Washington, D. C., under the name of Dan Benell Carlos, and a part of the mail came by special delivery, the communication stated.

His suspicions aroused, Chief Dewberry inquired into the matter, but Cash, alias Carlos, explained that he was in trouble about another man's wife and was using the alias in order to conceal his presence in Temple.

Suspecting that Cash, or Carlos, was Jack Wilson, the Temple chief wrote for a description of the hunted slayer. After this reached him, Chief Dewberry was more firmly convinced that his boarder was Wilson.

Cash, alias Carlos, left Temple for Atlanta, it was stated, on March 23, and has been seen since that time on Mitchell street by a Temple resident who was visiting here. After being seen on the street, no trace of him has been found.

Sensational Crime.

The killing of Cheek, one of the most cold-blooded murders in Georgia's history, attracted nation-wide interest, and heavy rewards have been posted for the capture of Wilson.

M. M. Gore, Theodore R. Berry and Ruby Jones, confessed participants to the killing, soon were apprehended by county and city officials. Gore was found guilty of murder in the first degree, and given a death sentence in the electric chair in Milledgeville, but his case has been appealed.

Berry was found guilty of murder but was recommended to mercy of the court and was given life sentence, which he now is serving.

Ruby Jones was tried as an accessory in the case and was given a long sentence, which she now is serving.

:: SAN ANTONIO SELECTED FOR 1928 MEET ::

Named on Clubwomen Survey

Atlantic City, N. J., June 5.—(AP)—After a meeting of the executive board of General Federation of Women's clubs, today, Mrs. John D. Sherman, of Estes Park, Colorado, president, announced that San Antonio, Texas, had been selected for the 1928 conclave. The biennial council, which is made up of the directors, department chairmen, and one delegate from each of the state federations, will convene in Grand Rapids, Mich., in 1927. The exact date will be set later.

Although the sessions of the general federation were concluded last night, Mrs. Sherman and the other executives will not finish up their business until tomorrow.

Mrs. Sherman announced that the survey of American homes, which was the keynote of this convention, would be continued, and named as a committee to handle the fund for the work Mrs. Robert Burdette, of Pasadena, Cal.; Mrs. Florence Florre, Cleburne, Texas; Mrs. Samuel Martin Inman, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Jessie Spafford, Rockford, Ill.; Mrs. Joshua Hodgins, Marinette, Wis. Two others will be appointed later.

Other appointments announced by the executive board today included Mrs. William Alvord, Detroit, Mich., chairman of the department of American citizenship; Mrs. Magie Barry, College Station, Texas, chairman department of American homes; Mrs. William Blackman, Orlando, Fla., chairman department of applied education; Mrs. L. A. Miller, Colorado Springs, Colorado, chairman fine arts; Mrs. Frederick Weitz, Des Moines, Iowa, chairman press and publicity.

Sunday Thoughts

It matters little what you do on Sunday, the automobile will play an important part in your thoughts.

If you possess an automobile you are sure to use it; if you don't own one, you will sit on your front porch and see hundreds of them go by.

And you might as well have one of your own. Advertisements in today's Constitution offer you a multitude of chances to acquire that indispensible necessity of today.

There are low-priced cars, medium-priced cars and high-priced cars—one that will match any purse, either in new machines or good used cars. You may buy and pay as you ride. You will eventually, why not now?

20 ARE ARRESTED IN BOMBING PLOT

Montivideo, Uruguay, June 5.—(AP)—Twenty men whom the police charge with being radicals, are under detention and have been put through a severe grilling without, however, yielding any definite clews to the persons who bombed the American legation here yesterday. All deny knowledge of the outrage which was committed while policemen, placed there since a similar plot against the American embassy in Buenos Aires, were guarding the legation.

Police think the plotters fled in an automobile as soon as the bomb exploded. Several persons claim to have seen a small car speed off after the explosion.

St. Johns, Newfoundland.—Final figures on the Newfoundland sealing season, just concluded, show a total catch of 205,548 pelts, the largest number in fourteen years. The steamer "Beothic," formerly the "Lake Como," set the season's record for a single vessel, with 48,000 pelts, the second largest catch ever brought into port here.

SHE WILL DANCE IN NEW YORK

Miss Charleston, Goes North

Future laurels as a dancing star will be sought by Miss Trinx Jackson, pretty Atlanta girl, winner of The Constitution-Publix Theaters "Charleston Beauty Tournament" held in May at the Howard theater, who will leave Atlanta Monday for New York where she will appear as one of the principals in the John Murray Anderson production of "Charleston" the week of June 13 at the Rivoli theater.

After a spirited contest with three score attractive girls from Atlanta and other southern cities Miss Jackson won first prize in the contest which consisted of a twelve weeks' contract with the "Charleston" production which will appear in twelve Publix treaters in leading cities of the country. Miss Jackson will join eleven other girls who won similar contests in their home cities who will appear with her in the "Charleston" production.

Elaborate plans for the entertainment of the twelve winners have been completed by the Publix Theater corporation. They will be quartered while in New York at the Hotel McAlpin. The girls will be taken for a visit to the Paramount studios to see how moving pictures are made. They will meet such stars as Richard (Dick) Dix, Bebe Daniels, Adolphe Menjou, Louise Brooks and will watch D. W. Griffiths make part of a new picture.

The girls will be received by Mayor James J. Walker, of Greater New York and also will be guests of Gilda Gray, noted dancer. They will be taken for a sightseeing tour of New York and will visit Coney Island, the Statue of Liberty, stock exchange and other points of interest.

After the New York engagement, the "Charleston" production will be presented in Boston, Buffalo, Detroit, three Publix theaters in Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Memphis, Dallas and Atlanta. The show will be presented in Atlanta the week of September 5.

When the "Charleston" attraction comes to Atlanta Miss Jackson will act as hostess to the visiting girls as representative of The Constitution, the newspaper sponsoring the contest in this city.

Opportunity is ahead of Miss Jackson to become a star either as a dancer or as a screen star. If tests show her adaptable to the screen she will be given engagements at the close of the tour with the Paramount corporation. She also will have opportunities for permanent work as a dancer. She will be known as "Miss Charleston from Dixie" in the John Murray Anderson production which will make the twelve weeks' tour.

Immense crowds witnessed the Charleston Beauty tournament at the Howard theater in May under the auspices of The Constitution and several attendance records at the theater were shattered. The contest provided Miss Jackson with a contract worth $900 in cash and an opportunity to take up a stage career as her profession.

LILLIAN GISH DENIES KNOWING HARRIMAN

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, June 5.—A complete and emphatic denial that she ever met or received a communication from William Averill Harriman, young banking and steamship magnate, was made today at the Ambassador hotel by Lillian Gish.

The statement, made through her secretary, Phyllis Moir, supplemented one given out Friday when the film star arrived with her sick mother on the Mauretania.

She was questioned at that time concerning intimations made at the trial for perjury of Charles H. Duell that Harriman's support of the Duell film enterprises involved more than a business relationship between the banker and the actress.

Duell is on trial in the United States district court for perjury growing out of an action brought by him in the federal court to enjoin Lillian from leaving his employ. He testified he did not advise the star to sign a modification of her contract.

It was that testimony which subsequently resulted in his indictment.

Miss Gish stated today through Miss Moir that she had no knowledge of any financial support from Harriman to Inspiration Pictures, Inc., the firm which starred Lillian in "Romola" and "The White Sister."

Miss Gish's denial of acquaintance with Harriman, the "angel" of Duell's film concern, was corroborated from sources close to the banker himself. It was learned Walter Camp, Jr., and Harriman were the main inspiration in Inspiration Pictures, but that their interest was fired only by a desire to make money and through a wish to star Miss Gish.

It was said Harriman had never met Lillian and Camp had met her only recently.

RUMANIAN QUEEN DECIDES TO BAR PICTURE ON ADS

Bucharest, June 5.—(AP)—Queen Marie, who permitted the use of her likeness in an American cosmetic advertisement recently, has decided not to do so again. The fee received by the queen was turned over to charities.

Public action of the picture led dozens of other American companies to seek photographs but the use of her majesty's likeness for advertising purposes caused so much criticism among Rumanians that the queen decided she could no longer permit it.

DALLAS BOY HONORED BY EMORY STUDENTS

Emory University, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—Willard C. Hay, of Dallas, Ga., has been chosen president of the School of Liberal Arts by the liberal arts council at Emory. Hay is a prominent member of the present junior class, is president of the Epworth League of Wesley Memorial Church, and is a talented member of the Emory concert orchestra. He will assume his new duties with the opening of the fall term at Emory.

Man Who Shot Woman Is Slain By Posses' Shots

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Pontiac, Mich., June 5.—Justice dealt swiftly with Paul Siko today and as a result he is dead with 30 bullet wounds in his body.

Mrs. John F. Clark, 26 years old, his victim, is in Pontiac city hospital, recovering from wounds received at Siko's hands when she refused his attentions. Siko shot her, Mrs. Clark said, when she declined to go into her tent home alone with him.

The shooting occurred at the Clark camp at Perry and Orion roads, three miles north of Pontiac.

Siko was killed by a posse under Sheriff Frank Schram and Chief Deputy S. D. Adams, after he had taken refuge in a swamp near the scene of his attack upon Mrs. Clark. When found he was buried to the hips in mire with an emptied pistol in his hand. By his side was a cartridge box in which were three unexploded shells.

According to Mrs. Clark the man's attack upon her was unexpected. She said she and her husband always had been friendly with Siko and that they had known him two years.

PLANE TO CARRY 50 PASSENGERS, 10 TONS OF MAIL

New York, June 5.—(AP)—Plans for construction of a giant airplane to carry 50 passengers and 10 tons of mail in a coastwise service from New York to California were announced here today by Captain Hugo Sunstedt, Swedish ace.

When fully loaded the craft, which will have a wing surface of 3,000 square feet, will weight 20 tons and will be able to attain a speed of 120 miles per hour, Captain Sunstedt said.

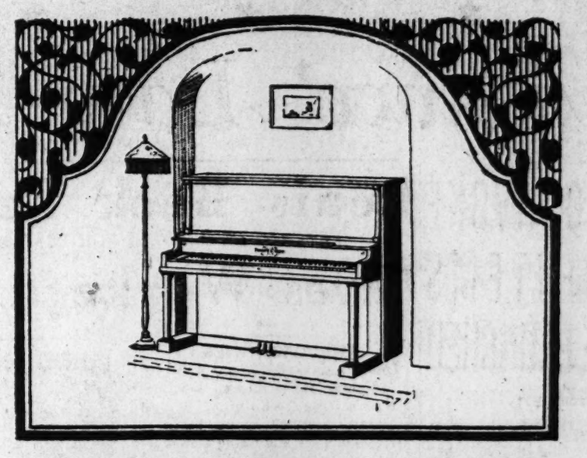

GEORGIA PREPARES FOR COMMENCEMENT

Athens, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—To properly care for the large crowds which are expected to attend the baccalaureate sermon by Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, June 13, and the baccalaureate address by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, June 16, these gatherings of the 125th annual commencement of the University of Georgia will be held in Woodruff hall rather than the chapel, where they have been held in former years, it is announced by Chancellor Charles M. Snelling.

Woodruff Hall has a seating capacity of above 5,000 whereas the chapel seats barely 1,000. The facts that in former years so many have been turned away from the chapel for lack of seats, and that Bishop Candler and Secretary Hoover are expected to draw such large audiences from all parts of the state caused officials of the university to depart from an age-old custom of having the graduation exercises in the historic chapel, Chancellor Snelling explains.

Chancellor Snelling also calls special attention to the Monday, June 14, program of commencement. On this day, in the morning [illegible] day exercises will be held, [illegible] time representatives of the [illegible] branches of the university f[illegible] the state will be on the prog[illegible] the afternoon, William Lenh[illegible]Pherson, an editor of The New [illegible]ork Herald-Tribune, will deliver the Phi Beta Kappa address.

The gathering of the board of trustees on Thursday, June 10, marks the opening of the university commencement. Exercises continue through Wednesday, June 16, graduation day. Tuesday, June 15, is alumni day, at which time Sanders McDaniel, Atlanta lawyer, will deliver the alumni oration. An alumni luncheon follows the address. All classes ending in the year one and six have reunions this year.

Georgia Baptist Hospital Raises $40,000 in Drive

Atlanta's campaign for Greater Georgia Baptist Hospital is rounding into shape with encouraging prospects, it was announced Saturday. At a meeting of the first relay of workers at the Winecoff hotel more than $40,000 was reported. The first relay of workers will make another report Tuesday afternoon at the campaign headquarters, 205 Palmer building.

Staff members of the hospital and a small group of Baptists have subscribed the sum and during the present week the workers will call on 1,000 persons and will make a report on the week's work at a meeting Friday evening the the Winecoff. It is expected that a substantial part of the $250,000, which is the goal of this hospital, will be subscribed by Friday night. Following the appeal to these thousand persons, a third relay of workers will call on some 10,000 additional friends of the hospital.

"We are very much encouraged with the progress of the campaign," stated Dr. Arch C. Cree, general superintendent of the hospital. "I believe we will raise this money in Atlanta without any of the usual high pressure methods," he continued.

Eugene R. Black, general chairman of the campaign, and W. W. Orr, chairman of the first relay of workers, both expressed their confidence in the ultimate outcome of the appeal.

"This institution has proved its worth by its thirteen years of service to the people of Atlanta and Georgia," said Mr. Black, "and now we are called on for the first time to unite in furthering the service of the hospital by putting some of our Atlanta money into its enlargement. Every dollar we put in the hospital will bring three dollars to Atlanta and, more than that, it will be an investment in Christian service which cannot be estimated in terms of material gains. This institution and its staff of physicians have already contributed nearly $400,000 in free service to our less fortunate citizens. The present effort will double its ability to serve."

The first unit of the new hospital is nearing completion. It is the plan of the hospital authorities to occupy the new building during the summer. One of the purposes of the Atlanta campaign is to add a wing for space in the hospital. So great is the demand for beds at present that patients are occupying the executive offices in the present building. Several patients have been turned away every day for the past month because of lack of space.

"We are counting on the friends of the hospital to take advantage of this opportunity to give their money and we are also counting on them to give their time. We can use a number of additional workers in this second relay this week and I hope that we may have many volunteer workers Monday. Please report at campaign headquarters," said Dr. E. E. George in discussing the matter Saturday.

BANDITS STEAL $34,250 PAYROLL

Nashville, Tenn., June 5.—(AP)—Two men in a dilapidated touring car held up an automobile carrying the mail and a $34,250 payroll for the Dupont Rayon company at Old Hickory today.

The robbery occurred shortly after 6 o'clock near a filling station on the Lebanon pike. The robbers took the key from the mail car and drove off toward Lebanon, according to the driver.

The money was being sent to the Old Hickory branch of the Fourth and First National bank from the Federal Reserve bank here, according to officials of the branch, as mail matter. It was insured.

The mail and payroll were being carried in a bus operating between Nashville and Old Hickory. The robbers cut open the mail pouches and took only the registered mail. The payrool money taken included $2,000 in $20 bills; $12,000 in tens; $12,000 in fives and $7,000 in ones, and $1,250 in silver.

The money, according to federal reserve bank officials, was turned over to the postoffice Friday afternoon.

10 WHIP STROKES AND TWO YEARS GIVEN TO THIEF

Montreal, June 5.—Ten strokes with a prison whip and two years in the penitentiary comprise the penalty assessed today by Canada against D. J. Davis, an American who crossed the border to raid a jewelry store.

The prisoner will receive five strokes as soon as his physical condition is certified after he is admitted to prison. Ten days before he is released five more strokes will crease his bared back.

First Woman in Georgia To Graduate in Medicine

MISS LOREE FLORENCE.

Augusta, Ga., June 5.—(Special.) Among the graduates of the medical department of the University of Georgia, who received their degrees here was Miss Loree Florence, of Athens, Ga., who has the distinction of being the first woman to receive a degree from the state medical college, or to receive a doctor of medicine degree from any institution in the state of Georgia, it is believed.

Four years ago when Miss Florence entered the medical college here, she was blazing a trail where no other woman had trod. The road seemed to be a hard one, but she had the determination and the courage, and now she has finished her course with a wonderful record. She came to the medical college immediately after taking two years at the University of Georgia in Athens toward the bachelor of science in medicine, which is required of those entering the medical school.

Prior to entering the university she secured her bachelor of arts degree at Shorter college, Rome. Because of her high record, Miss Florence will be eligible for the Alpha Omega Alpha, national honorary fraternity recently installed at the medical college, and which corresponds to Phi Beta Kappa in its particular field of scholastic attainments.

Miss Florence is to continue her studies in internship in Philadelphia, it is understood.

FORD ASKS REPEAL OF TRAFFIC PLAN

A councilmanic fight against the York traffic plan and a set of proposed amendments whereby it is said the plan will be made more effective loomed for Monday's session of city council Saturday, when Alderman Charles M. Ford of the tenth, stated that he would launch a battle to repeal the whole system.

The original plan called for nonparking on one side of down-town traffic arteries and the proposed amendments provide for one-hour parking on both sides of all streets affected from 9 o'clock in the mornings until 4 o'clock in the afternoons, and for non-parking on one side of the street from 7 to 9 o'clock in the mornings and from 4 to 7 o'clock in the afternoons.

Proposed amendments mapped out by Councilman York, author of the York plan, and representatives of merchants, motor clubs and private citizens, are expected to be offered to council at the meeting Monday, and this is expected to be the signal for Mr. Ford's attack. Mr. Ford will insist that the plan, which was put into effect on four Atlanta streets about two weeks ago, be abandoned and that the half-hour parking provision be enforced.

Saturday Mr. Ford exhibited a number letters and a petition bearing the signatures of about 50 merchants which asked that the York plan be repealed.

The June finance sheet containing about $60,000 in extra appropriations in addition to the regular running expenses of the city, may meet opposition from some quarters, but it was predicted that the entire sheet will pass.

Increases in the salaries of city employees amounting to about $1,500 annually is one of the items of the list.

Council also will be asked to approve expenditure of $44,353.80 for five new street paving projects, which were passed favorably Friday by the street committee of council, and six minor sewerage projects approved by the sewer committees.

ELKS' BAND TO PLAY AT LAKEWOOD TODAY

The Elks' Royal Purple band, with John T. Lee conducting, will present a free public concert in the grandstand at Lakewood Amusement park from 3 to 5 o'clock this afternoon, it was announced Saturday by Oscar Mills, secretary of the Southeastern Fair association and manager of the park.

Miss Jessie Reese Calvert, soprano and member of the Atlanta Light Opera company, will sing four popular numbers in addition to the band program. Her selections will be "Kiss Me Again," "Cottage Small by the Waterfall," "Mother Machree" and "Remember."

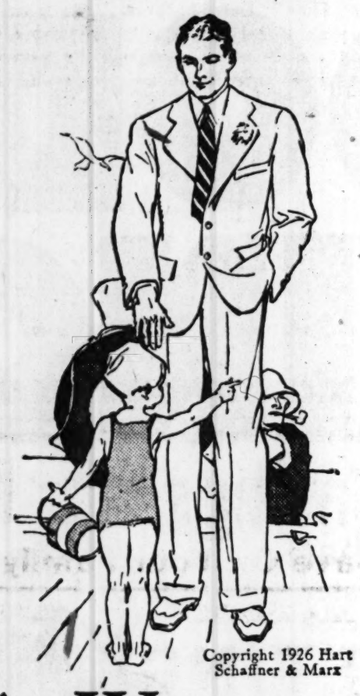

Hour of Organ Music To Be Presented Today By Dr. Charles Sheldon

Dr. Charles A. Sheldon, city organist, will present an hour of organ music at the city auditorium Sunday afternoon, beginning at 3:30 o'clock. The program will consist of a variety of master selections from many nations and the concert will be free to the public.

The program follows:

Emory Graduates of 1886 Gather for Reunion Here

Thirty members of the 1886 graduation class of old Emory college, of Oxford, Ga., from which has grown the great Emory university of today, will gather in Atlanta today for one of the largest class reunions, in proportion to the total number of graduates of that year ever held at Emory, it is said.

There were 38 men who received diplomas at Emory college in 1886, the largest class turned out by that institution up to that time. Only 10 men have died during the 40 years that have elapsed, leaving 28 living members of the original list of graduates. Twenty-five of these have signified their intention of being present at the reunion this year and in addition 5 members of the class who did not graduate will attend, making 30 in all.

Atlanta members of the Emory class of 1886 are Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech; Robert L. Avary; the Rev. Wilds L. Pierce, presiding elder of the North Atlanta district of the M. E. Church, South; Jack B. Stewart; W. S. Stevens and L. B. Robeson.

All members of the class are expected to reach Atlanta not later than this afternoon and there will be a preliminary meeting tonight at the Robert Fulton hotel.

Program Mapped Out.

Monday morning the class will attend in a body the alumni exercises at Emory university and mingle with other alumni on the campus and attend the alumni dinner of the university.

Monday night, visiting members of the class will be guests of the Atlanta alumni at a dinner at the Biltmore hotel. Dr. John F. Bonnell, the only living member of the faculty of Emory college which taught this class, will be present at the dinner. No one will be present except members of the class and Dr. Bonnell. Each man will be expected to tell the class, briefly, what he has been doing during the last 40 years and will be allowed five minutes in which to do it.

Tuesday morning the Dixie Coach "John B. Gordon" will be in front of the Robert Fulton hotel to take members of the class to Oxford, via Stone Mountain, where the Confederate memorial will be inspected. They will reach Oxford about 11 o'clock and spend the day on the campus of the old college. They will gather around the old class tree, sing class songs, read the history and prophecy of the class written 40 years ago, and perhaps have the class poem read. At this time there will be memorial services for the 10 members who have been called by death. On this trip the class will be the guest of the Atlanta alumni. While in Oxford the class will be the guest of R. L. Paine at dinner. Mr. Paine lives in Oxford, and is professor of mathematics at Emory academy.

The class will return to Atlanta Tuesday afternoon and will disband at the Robert Fulton hotel Tuesday night.

:: THREE 'CHUTE DROPS SCHEDULED AT LAKEWOOD ::

The success of a three-parachute drop from a balloon at Lakewood park Sunday afternoon will settle Atlanta's bid for establishment of the Walter Jewell summer school of aeronautics here this month, it was announced Friday by Oscar Mills, secretary of the Southeastern Fair association and manager of the park, following a conference of city officials and civic leaders with the noted aeronaut. The parachute drop will give Mr. Jewell data he requires concerning air currents over the proposed site at Lakewood park.

Mr. Jewell stated after an inspection of the site, which had been selected last year for the mooring place of the ill-fated Shenandoah, that he believed atmospheric conditions would be favorable for the demonstration of balloon control and parachute jumping which will be an important part of the school's activity.

The conformation of the land around the Southeastern Fair grounds, in which Lakewood park is located, would normally give a "smooth" air condition for several thousand feet up, he said. The pilots of the A. B. McMullen company, which is rushing an aviation field to completion a few hundred yards from the proposed balloon school site, found atmospheric conditions better for heavier-than-air flying machines in that locality than any other of the dozen or more sites around Atlanta which were considered for the purpose. Even more favorable conditions will be necessary for the balloon school, Mr. Jewell stated, because lighter-than-air craft are more sensitive to air currents.

Mr. Jewell said that his test Sunday afternoon would be made with one balloon and three parachutes, enabling him to make three separate drops from one strata of air to another and study the effect of the winds at varying altitudes. Sunday was selected as the time for the test as a concession to the Lakewood park management which asked that it be made then to enable the Sunday afternoon musical concert crowd to see it.

"Nearly 20,000 people usually come out to Lakewood for the music Sunday afternoons and we thought that if Mr. Jewell is going to make a test which will savor of the spectacular, it might as well be made when our guests can see it," Mr. Mills said.

40% Bigger Output to Meet Heavy Demand for Franklin Sedan $2790
New Price F.O.B. Factory

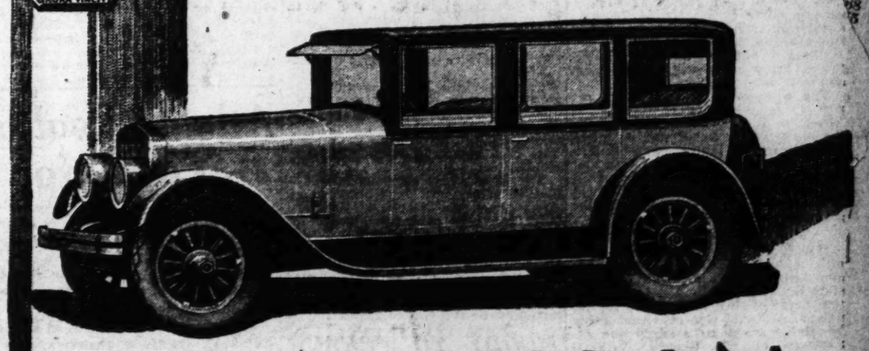

Nothing shows the stored-up favor for the Franklin better than the rush of sales which greeted the new prices, forcing this great jump in production. Approximately two-thirds of the demand centers on the Sedan.

Ride in the Franklin, and you will discover that it is always more comfortable. Drive it, and you will find that it is always safer and less tiring to handle. Take care of it, and you will learn that it makes less work. Own it, and you will appreciate its complete freedom from cooling troubles.

What this means in sustained speed over the road is shown by its long list of road records. What it means in economy is proved by owners' cost-sheets. And what it means in endurance is clear from this: 75% of all Franklins built in 25 years are still in use.

The Franklin standard of style and quality is as high as that of its performance. There is no phase of ownership in which it does not give supreme satisfaction. Let us send a trial car to your door.

All Franklin prices include full equipment, even to spare tire, tube, cover and lock. Only tax and transportation are extra. Your old car can be applied in trade, and budget payment plan arranged.

SEABOARD TO PUSH WORK IN FLORIDA

Tampa, Fla., June 5.—(AP)—S. Davies Warfield, president of the Seaboard Air Line railway, after an exhaustive study of conditions in Florida, announced here today his railroad will proceed with all its developments, not changing its original plans, comprehensive as they were, in the slightest.

Mr. Warfield arrived here last night and was in conference with representatives of several interests today. The conferences concerned development work of the railroad, including a port terminal here, and the development of Indiantown on the east coast.

Ready to Start.

The company is ready to start on its plans for the development of Indiantown and the acreage it owns surrounding it, Mr. Warfield said. Plans for the railroad developments, which will make it the division point for the Miami extension, are practically complete and much of the improvement has been staked out. As part of the work, the agricultural development of 10,000 acres will be carried out in connection with 10,000 acres owned by Arthur Brisbane.

The Seaboard has not purchased an interest in the townsite of Naples, as reported, Mr. Warfield said. The Investment and Securities Company of Florida, which includes many stockholders of the Seaboard, purchased an interest in the townsite to develop it in the interest of the traffic of the railroad, he explained.

The Seaboard is continuing on its plan to extend a third line down the west coast, but the present construction program, totaling 600 miles, is taking the immediate attention of the company, Mr. Warfield said.

Renewed Activity.

Florida is on the verge of renewed activity, in Mr. Warfield's opinion. Readjustment, he believes, will have taken place by next winter and the istate will reenter a period of activity even surpassing that of last summer and fall.

"I have just gone over the east coast, the interior and the west coast, and I am surprised to find conditions so favorable as they are," Mr. Warfield said. "The business of the railroad indicates an increase over last year. I certainly found nothing in the situation to make the Seaboard hold up what it had set out to do.

"I believe the setback in real estate was the best thing that could have happened either for the raidroad business or other business. It gave everybody an opportunity to stop and see where they were."

COOLIDGE MAY VISIT KENNESAW

Marietta, Ga., June 5.—(Special.) Representatives of the Marietta Chamber of Commerce will leave for Washington early this week to call upon President Coolidge and urge his acceptance of Marietta's invitation to attend the big Blue and Gray reunion here on June 26, the anniversary of the hottest day's fighting in the battle of Kennesaw mountain, in 1864. Vice President Dawes; Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the house of representatives; Secretary of War Davis, and other officials will be extended an invitation, and it is believed the president and several others will accept.

The Marietta committee, which will call first on the Georgia senators and representatives, who will accompany the delegation to the white house, will be composed of M. D. Hodges, chairman; Mayor Edward R. Hunt, Judge N. A. Morris, Major J. G. Giles, Campbell Wallace, Fred Morris and others.

Elaborate Program.

The Marietta Chamber of Commerce is holding meetings of its committees daily to make detailed plans for the big celebration on Saturday, June 26, which will include a military parade, a barbecue for invited guests, elaborate decorations from the public square to the foot of Kennesaw mountain—a mile away on the Dixie highway—and speaking by distinguished orators on a platform erected at the base of the mountain, on a spot where scores of soldiers of both armies fell in a hand-to-hand fight.

Every survivor of the battle of Kennesaw mountain, on both sides of the conflict, is invited to attend the reunion as the guest of the chamber of commerce and the various organizations cooperating in the celebration, and they will be provided with meals and lodging. Leon Williams, secretary of the chamber, is endeavoring to locate as many of these veterans as possible in order to send them personal invitations.

The big celebration is intended largely to demonstrate the interest shown by Georgia citizens in the proposed creation of a great national military memorial park, which will include Kennesaw mountain and its environs. The bill authorizing a survey of the territory by a commission already has passed both houses of congress by unanimous vote, and the commission appointed. Its members have accepted an invitation to attend the celebration as guests of honor.

The official commission, which will survey the mountain and decide upon its possibilities as a national military park, is composed of Major General John L. Clem, a retired veteran of the Union army and known as "the Drummer Boy of Shiloh;" Former Governor Nat E. Harris, of Georgia, a veteran of Kennesaw on the Confederate side, and Lieutenant Colonel William P. Stokey, of the United States army engineering corps, now stationed in Atlanta.

The commission will make its report to the secretary of war before November 1, and if it is favorable to the park project a bill will be introduced providing for an appropriation for the purchase of the mountain and its improvement. The land is owned by the Kennesaw Mountain Battlefield association and will be offered the government at a nominal figure.

To Invite Governors.

Governor Clifford Walker will send official invitations to the governors and their military attaches in every state in the Union, and it is expected that many of them will attend the reunion. Adjutant General Charles Cox has been asked to arrange the attendance of the Georgia National Guard, and there will be detachments of United States troops.

"The proposed National Military Memorial park is not a Marietta project, but state-wide and nation-wide," said Senator Harris, of Georgia, in urging the appropriation for the preliminary survey. "It will be the first government memorial to the heroes of both sides of the war between the states."

Three great American concert stars will be presented to local audiences by the Atlanta Music club this fall, it was announced Saturday by Mrs. Cliff V. Hatcher, president.

Dusolina Giannini, sensational young American concert soprano, will be presented in the American group on the civic concert series in addition to Rosa Ponselle, Metropolitan opera prima donna on October 14, and Albert Spalding, brilliant American violinist on October 28. Giannini will sing at the city auditorium March 8.

Completing the fall season series will be Mischa Levitski, composer and pianist, who will make his first southern appearance in concert November 24 at the city auditorium, and a symphony orchestra, tentatively selected as the Detroit Symphony conducted by Ossip Gabrilowitsch, in its first Atlanta appearance Tuesday, May 4, during National Music Week.

The series will be opened on Saturday afternoon, December 5, by Robert Schmitz, noted French pianist-composer, followed by the Flonzaley quartet in its twelfth Atlanta appearance on January 29, and Louis Graveure, baritone, on February 12.

First Appearance Here.

The music club will introduce Levitski, Giannini, Gabrilowitsch and Schmitz for first appearances in Atlanta, undertaking the premiere in line with its announced policy of giving Atlanta the best in music regardless of financial considerations.

Levitski is considered one of the brilliant young geniuses of the musical world. He began his concert career with a tour of Belgium and Germany in 1913 at the age of 15 years. During the first three years of the war he continued his concert activities in Europe, making his American debut in New York October 17, 1916, at the age of 18, and winning instant fame as a pianist of great genius. He has made seven appearances in concert in New York each season since his debut. Hundreds were turned away for lack of space in Aeolian hall during last season's concerts. He has made nine coast-to-coast concert tours of America, two of Australia and New Zealand and one through the Orient,, in addition to four tours through Europe. His record of return engagements includes more than 70 in New York, 17 in Chicago, 13 in Sydney, Australia, 10 in Melbourne, Australia, 19 with the New York Symphony orchestra in America, indicating the popularity he has won wherever he has played.

Giannini, another native born American artist on the concert course, is one of the notable American artists who succeeded in storming European musical centers before attempting to launch a career at home. Her operatic debut was made in Germany, where her first Berlin appearance brought 36 curtain calls before she was allowed to retire. Returning to America she was in such great demand for concert that she refused operatic engagements. Her voice was trained by her father, a tenor who sang opposite Patti, and Sembrich.

Orchestra Ranked High.

The Detroit Symphony orchestra, under the leadership of Ossip Gabrilowitsch, famous pianist-conductor, has been ranked as the leader among American symphonies. Its last southern appearance, in the Spartanburg music festival during May of this year, drew thousands of music lovers from surrounding states to hear it. A delegation from Atlanta, including Mrs. DeLos Hill, former president of the Atlanta Music club, attended the concerts.

E. Robert Schmitz, the pianist who opens the series, has met with equal success in concert tours of France, where he was born and secured his early training, in other European countries and in America.

Other artists on the course have been heard in Atlanta before and rank among the most popular.

Although the concert course does not open until October 14, the music club is enrolling subscribing members now who will receive choice of seats for all concerts in the order in which their memberships are enrolled. The subscribing members, who pay $15 for the season, receive tickets to all concerts without further charge. Expectations that the auditorium will be entirely sold out for the Ponselle and Spalding concerts at the opening of the season has stimulated enrollment of subscribing members since their engagements were announced last month.

Capital Finds Itself

:: THOUSANDS SEE SIGHTS OF WASHINGTON ::

Tourist Center of U. S.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, June 5.—The national capital is wakin gup to find itself the tourist center of the United States, its eyes being opened by the largest crowd of visitors who ever came here, and accordingly is throwing off its ancient dignity and preparing to go after the business in the best booster manner.

In addition to the usual spring and summer trade in tourists, which is always thriving but unnoted because of its regularity, the city finds itself entertaining thousands of extra visitors at this time who have dropped off on their way to the sesqui-centennial and the Shriners' convention in Philadelphia.

In fear that some of the tourists to other places nearby may overlook the capital—almost a groundless fear—the local convention bureau has taken upon itself to invite them especially, and is rallying to its support various other organizations, including the board of trade, the Washington real estate board and the chamber of commerce.

The wonders of the capitay city have been here so long that they are taken for granted. People live here for years and never climb the Washington monument or visit the capitol. But the boosters are discovering that these things are really here, and in meeting after meeting have pictured them in glowing terms of the newcomer.

When representatives of the capital go to the national realty convention in Tulsa, Okla., next week, they will wear oversize badges describing Washington as "Your Capital City." This inaugurates the first campaign to advertise the capital in a big way since Major L'Enfant laid out a city among the swamps along the Potomac.

For several weeks, visitors have been coming and going, thousands and thousands of them, whole trainloads of school children, carloads of families, busses filled to overflowing with veritable townships and villages on a sightseeing tour. It's the biggest tourist season the capital ever saw.

"They all want to see young Bob La Follette and Senator Borah and Senator Jim Reed—and of course, Dawes and Longworth," a guide said.

Some of the school children get bored occasionally despite the wonders of the national capital. One young girl in a party which sat in the senate gallery the other day took out pen and paper and wrote a letter looking up only to listen to a girl friend and never to see what was going on down below.

And the youngsters—they are more interested in secret service men at the white house than the president.

But the guides, even, don't know it all, and are willing to learn.

"Mrs. Richard Croker, who was an Indian, you know, told me all about Chief Sequoia whose statue stands here," a guide confessed.

ESKIMO RELICS SOUGHT BY SON OF ROCKEFELLER

New York, June 5.—(AP)—An expedition headed by William A. Rockefeller, son of the late William G. Rockefeller, has set out in search of Eskimo relics and specimens of bird and animal life in the sub-arctic regions.

The group, consisting of two men besides Mr. Rockefeller, left here quietly last Tuesday. Today they were reported approaching Mattice, on the Missinaibi river, in Ontario.

With Mr. Rockefeller, who is understood to be financing the expedition, are John T. Rowland, historian and navigator, a close friend of Mr. Rockefeller, and Raymond B. Potter, ornithologist of the American Museum of Natural History, which is to be the recipient of whatever specimens of bird life Mr. Rockefeller's expedition brings back.

The expedition is under the auspices of the American Geographical society of New York, of which both Rockefeller and Rowland are fellows.

Irma Returns To Aid Durkin In Life Fight

Chicago, June 5.—(AP)—Irma Sullivan Durkin, the village belle of Cornell, Ill., has returned to the side of her sheik husband, Martin Durkin, indicted for murder, and "will stick to him to the end."

Durkin, charged with the slaying of a federal officer, has been deserted by his sweetheart Betty Werner, his first wife, and comforted only by his mother here since his trial opened this week. Only two jurors have been tentatively accepted.

Efforts to annul the marriage of Durkin to the Cornell beauty have so far failed and the girl says she will not do anything about the marriage until after the trial, "and maybe not then."

Durkin was captured by a band of federal agents at St. Louis a few months ago while en route here from Los Angeles.

WOMAN IS KILLED AS CAR OVERTURNS

Columbia, Tenn., June 5.—(AP)—Mrs. Guy Pinkleton, 18, was instantly killed and her mother, Mrs. Dora Jones, seriously injured this afternoon when their car, driven by John L. Jones, 12-year-old son of Mrs. Jones, overturned on a curve eight miles from here. The boy said the steering wheel failed to function.

TROOPS SEARCHING FOR MISSING CHILD

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Newark, N. J., June 4.—While state troopers and constabulary in scores of resorts in the Pocono mountains of Pennsylvania and New Jersey were on the lookout for little Monica Kearney, 6, her father, Patrick Kearney, author and playwright, tonight took drastic steps to bring about her return to him. He went with his attorney, E. C. Rowe, to confer with Prosecutor Bigelow, of Essex county, regarding the issuance of a warrant charging kidnaping against Monica's mother, now the wife of George Alexander Porterfield, of London. Such a warrant, it was indicated, may be issued Monday if the child is not recovered by then.

Monica disappeared Wednesday from the home of Mrs. Porterfield's father, Walter B. Day, at Glen Ridge, N. J.—five days after the child's mother returned from a two years' sojourn abroad.

This morning Kearney obtained a writ of habeas corpus directing Day, Mrs. Anna Day and Mrs. Porterfield to produce Monica in the Newark chancery court on Tuesday.

Al Smith's Daughter Marries

:: CARDINAL HAYES PERFORMS CEREMONY ::

New York State Police Head

Albany, N. Y., June 5.—(AP)—With the blessing of Pope Pius XI, the marriage of Emily Josephine Smith, elder of Governor Alfred E. Smith's daughters, to Major John Adams Warner, commandant of the state constabulary, was solemnized by Patrick Cardinal Hayes in the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception today. The religious ceremonial was most elaborate.

Fifteen hundred guests witnessed the cathedral ceremony, and more than 1,000 attended the reception and breakfast.

The scarlet, white and gold vestments of the clergy within the chancel, the flickering flames of hundreds of candles, the brilliant uniforms of the military and naval officers present, and the gorgeous arrangement of flowers made the cathedral service one of extreme beauty, while the ancient liturgy of the Catholic church chanted by a choir from New York made the nuptial mass a ceremony both colorful and deeply impressive.

Glynn, 5-year-old cousin of the bride, was flower girl. The bride was escorted to the altar rail on the arm of her father. Her sister, Catherine, was bridesmaid. Andrew J. Warner, brother of the groom, was best man.

The cardinal wore a scarlet cassock and biretta. After kneeling in prayer at the cardinal's altar in the center of the chancel, he rose and was robed in a cope, or cloth of gold, donned his mitre and took the crosier of his office. He then took up his station in front of the altar, after which the bridal party approached the altar and the cardinal performed the marriage service.

The nuptial mass was celebrated by Monsignor Joseph A. Delaney, rector of the cathedral parish, and after it the cardinal delivered the papal benediction.

The couple received more than 1,000 guests at the executive mansion. Afterward breakfast was served, the bride and groom, with their immediate families and intimate friends, being served privately in a room on the second floor. Tables were set in every other available room and on the spacious verandas for the guests.

Late in the afternoon Major and Mrs. Warner departed on a honeymoon trip by automobile.

Merger of Bell And Cumberland Lines Reported

New Orleans, June 6—(AP)—The Times Picayune says today that the consodilidation of the Cumberland Telephone and Telegraph Company, Inc., with the Suothern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company became known today through the announcement that the latter company was to increase its capital stock from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000. No public offering is involved, the story says.

Southern Bell Telephone owns and operates toll lines and all Bell telephone exchanges in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama, Cumberland Telephone performs similar services in Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee and in parts of Kentucky.

The American Telephone and Telegraph company, the story says, owns all the Southern stock and a large amount of the Cumberland stock. The two companies involved in the merger have been operating as one for many months.

The Cumberland company has $34,999,900 of common stock outstanding. After a new $50,000,000 of Southern stock has been exchanged, share for share, there will be a balance of nearly $16,000,000 stock left in the Southern treasury. This would probably be used, the Times Picayune says, to reimburse the American Telephone and Telegraph company for $11,377,626, which it has advanced to the two companies.

MOODY TO PREACH "SECOND COMING" SERMON TONIGHT

"The Second Coming of Christ" will be the subject of the revival sermon by the Rev. George Moody at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the tent tabernacle at the intersection of Peters, Whitehall and Park streets.

The Saturday night service, marking the end of the first week since the services were resumed in the reconstructed tent, was closed with a congregational prayer service for success of the revival in which more than 500 members of six denominations knelt in the sawdust around the altar.

The evangelist preached on the inspiration of religion in daily life as a source of happiness and encouragement for success.

Atlanta Realtors Depart Today for Tulsa Meeting

J. R. Smith, president of the Atlanta Real Estate board, stated Saturday that final arrangements have been made for the local delegates to attend the convention of the national association in Tulsa this week.

The convention committee, of which Frank C. Owens is chairman, completed the arrangements and the delegation will leave this afternoon and go by way of Birmingham, Memphis and Springfield, arriving in Tulsa Monday night.

Those who made reservations are: Frank Adair, H. H. Robinson, W. H. Toole, Jr., Edw. M. Chapman, J. C. Baldwin, all of the Adair Realty & Trust company, and A. S. Adams, of the A. S. Adams-Cates Co.; Ward Wight, of the Ward Wight Co.; J. R. Smith, of J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin; Frank C. Owens, of the Draper-Owens Co.; John J. Thompson, of the John J. Thompson Co.; Dana Beiser, of the Atlanta Trust Co.; H. A. Minor and A. J. McBride, of the Columbia Trust & Realty Co.

A. S. Adams, president of the Georgia Real Estate association, and also vice president of the national body, states that the boards at Macon, Columbus, Savannah, Albany and Augusta plan to send delegations.

Ward Wight is assistant to the vice president of the southern district, and J. R. Smith is national delegate. The three delegates named from the Atlanta board are John J. Thompson, Frank C. Owens, and Henry H. Robinson.

The Atlantans will be gone about nine days.

Women seem to have made all the recent records for long lives. During the last year the oldest person reported in England was a married woman of 104; in North America, a French-Canadian woman, Charlotte Nava-, who died in her 110th year. The first census of Persia is said to have revealed a peasant woman who is 146 years old and has a young son of 117.

MORTUARY

MISS MARY E. BROWN.

Miss Mary E. Brown, of 501 Lakewood avenue, died Saturday at a private hospital. She is survived by three brothers, Rowland H. Brown, of Altoona, Pa., and R. L. and Hall Brown, and a nephew, P. S. Brown. H. M. Patterson & Son in charge.

By the way—

"SUMMER is with us and the vacation spirit is in the air."

Swimming pools, golf links, outdoor tea dances and parties of all kinds are beckoning to us. The difficulty is to find time enough to enjoy these things and gather up the renewed vigor which comes from this outdoor life that is nowhere more pleasant than in Atlanta.

True enough, our employees are now beginning to take their summer vacations which we are happy to be able to give them, but in addition to this, we feel that five days a week during the hot summer months is enough for a retail store, both for our customers and for our employees.

We will therefore close the store all day on all the Saturdays during July and August, believing that this will be appreciated by those who shop and by those who serve and that they will enjoy their week-ends equally if Saturday carries no thought of buying or selling."

(Since the store will be closed on Monday, July 5, we will remain open all day Saturday, July 3)

300 TECH SENIORS GRADUATE MONDAY

More than 300 Georgia Tech seniors Monday morning will appear in the academic procession for diplomas from the school's ten departments. Walter F. George, United States senator from Georgia, will give the baccalaureate address and Dr. M. L. Brittain, president, will present the diplomas.

Colonel Earle D'Arcy Pearce, commandant, will act for the government in the naming of those for commissions in the officers' reserve corps while L. A. Downs, president of the Central of Georgia railway, will present certificates to five of the Co-op students who have completed their five years' work in the shops of the railroad while students of Tech. Dr. Charles F. Daniel will offer the invocation.

The five co-op students, the first to graduate in such a manner from the railway, are: J. H. Grayson, Blounstown, Fla.; C. S. Gardner, of Macon; C. O. Johnson, C. F. Waite, of Savannah, and C. E. Durden, of Stillmore.

Today at 10 o'clock at the First Presbyterian church Dr. J. Sprole Lyons, pastor, will preach the commencement sermon. Dr. Charles F. Sheddon, city organist, has arranged for the prelude an original college organ selection.

The board of trustees met in their annual session Saturday morning for the transaction of business for the year.

For several days the senior class has been carrying out a big social schedule, beginning with the senior banquet at the Biltmore Wednesday night and continuing through the Pan-Hellenic dance Monday night. "Coon" Sanders' Kansas City "Nighthawks" are furnishing music for all social affairs.

Thursday night the junior prom was held in the college gymnasium.

Friday afternoon Dr. and Mrs. Brittain, assisted by 12 Atlanta girls, entertained the seniors at the home of the president. The reception was followed by a tea-dance at Gerber's.

The senior hop took place Friday night and the class members enjoyed their dansant Saturday afternoon and Saturday night at the college german.

Pan-Hellenics of the campus will gather Monday night for the big social occasion of the college year. All dances for the afternoon were at Gerber's and the evening dances at the Georgia Tech gymnasium on the college campus.

The girls assisting Dr. and Mrs. Brittain in the receiving line for the president's reception were Misses Helena Callaway, Virginia Brittain, Jeannette Bailey, Martha Maddox, Anne Spalding, Nell Clayton, Ruth McMillan, Sophie Street, Virginia White, Josephine Hollis, Marion Wolf and Frances Spalding.

Baby Health Centers.

Baby health centers will be held this week as follows: Luckie street school, Tuesday at 2 p. m.; Fair street school, Wednesday at 2 p.m.; Forrest avenue school, Thursday at 2 p. m.; James L. Key school, Friday at 2 p. m

COOLIDGE ATTENDS HODGES MARRIAGE

Washington, June 5.—(AP)—Motoring into Maryland, the President and Mrs. Coolidge attended the wedding of William V. Hodges, treasurer of the republican national committee, and Mrs. Charles Thomas Lowndes, late today.

The ceremony, performed at Glenelg manor in Howard county, 35 miles from Washington, also was attended by a number of government officials, including Senator Butler, of Massachusetts, chairman of the republican national committee, and several other senators as well as members of the house.

Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, of Kentucky, vice chairman of the national committee, accompanied the President and Mrs. Coolidge to the wedding, as did Secretary and Mrs. Sanders. They remained after the ceremony for the reception, and upon leaving the President and Mrs. Coolidge posed for a photograph with the bride and groom.

Mr. Hodges succeeded the late Fred W. Upham, of Chicago, as treasurer of the committee, and is a resident of Denver. His bride was formerly Miss Catherine Beasley, of Princeton, N. J.

U. S. WILL PROFIT BY BRITISH BAN ON FRESH MEATS

Chicago, June 5.—(AP)—Prohibition of fresh meats by Great Britain from other European countries will be reflected by purchase in the United States, Everett C. Brown, president of the Chicago Live Stock exchange, said today. The embargo resulted from the discovery of the foot and mouth disease in the hog carcasses of the Netherlands. The order also prohibits cattle and sheep, and fresh and refrigerated meats, but does not fully cover cured bacon and hams.

As a result of the embargo, Mr. Brown believes increased earnings will be shown the live stock producer.

CLEAR AND WARMER TODAY IS FORECAST

Rains for Atlanta and Georgia are over for the present and today the skies will be clear and the thermometer will climb a little higher than in the past three days, C. F. von Herrmann, chief of the Atlanta branch of the United States weather bureau, said Saturday night.

While only .25 inches of rain was recorded at the Atlanta weather bureau during the past two days, Mr. von Herrmann said that reports from other parts of the state indicated that the rains were general and were heavier than in Atlanta. Only the northeastern portion of the state did not receive considerable rain, he said.

The coolest weather recorded in Atlanta in more than a week was recorded Saturday when the lowest was 62 degrees and the maximum was 77 degrees. Temperatures will range from 62 to 81 degrees today, the weatherman predicted.

POPULATION GROWING AT FEDERAL PRISON

Atlanta broke another record last month, when 317 federal prisoners were received at the Atlanta federal penitentiary, it was announced Saturday by John W. Snook, warden. The highest numbr received previous to May of this year was in December, 1925, when 294 offenders were admitted and the next to this was in April, 1925, when 293 were received.

The total prison population Saturday hit the 3,200 mark, only 64 short of the highest number ever incarcerated at the institution at one time, and it was predicted that the month of June will push the total number to new high levels.

Democratic Executive Body Will Lay Plans for Election

Plans for conducting Georgia's political campaign for 1926, in which a governor, United States senator, and many state house officers will be nominated, will be formed at a meeting of the state democratic executive committee at a meeting to be held in Atlanta Wednesday.

The committee was called to meet at the Ansley hotel at 11 o'clock Wednesday, by Chairman G. E. Maddox, of Rome, who completed the personnel of the committee during the week by appointing 36 members from the state-at-large, two men and one woman being appointed from each congressional district. The committee will set a date for holding the primaries, fix entrance fees for candidates, fix a period in which candidates for various state offices may qualify, fix a date for the state convention, frame rules to govern the primaries and transact other routine matters in connection with the election.

Following are the members of the state democratic executive committee:

300 Cars Peaches Expected To Move Within Next Week

Macon, Ga., June 5.—(AP)—Fifteen cars of peaches were shipped out of the fruit belt today, the heaviest single day movement since the season opened. Growers anticipate a movement of 300 cars during the coming week.

Prices are advancing as the shipments increase, peaches bringing $5.50 in New York today, according to telegraph reports.

The Georgia Peach Growers' exchange announced tonight that it has sold a number of cars of peaches for delivery the first of the coming week at $3 a crate, F. O. B.

Uneedas have been moving for several days. There will be continued shipment of this variety during the week, and also a sprinkling of Arp Beauties, Early Rose, Queen of Dixie, and Red Birds. Carmens may start by the end of the week. The big rush in the peach packing centers will be well under way during the coming week and will continue until the close of the season.

MONTEZUMA CLUB TELLS THE WORLD OF MACON COUNTY

One of the most interesting civic advertising folders ever produced in Georgia has just been published by the Montezuma Kiwanis club, extoiling attractions and prosperity of the city of Montezuma and Macon county. The booklet, entitled "Telling the World," bears on its front cover the pictures of two of Montezuma's loveliest girls, Miss Ione McKenzie and Miss Claudia Dykes, each personifying one of the peaches, both human and horticultural, for which Macon county is famous.

The foreword states: "Susrounded by fertile lands, with its many business interests, Montezuma is a veritable 'paradise of opportunities' for the homeseeker."

Consul Howard Bucknell

:: ATLANTAN TALKS OF DUTIES IN SHANGHAI ::

On Short Visit to Family

On account of certain policies of the American government men in the consular service aren't allowed to speak freely, sometimes not all, on foreign qestions—

Which is why this interview with Howard Bucknell, Jr., consul to Shanghai, former Atlantan and son of Howard Bucknell, prominent Atlanta physician, won't contain any expert testimony on the subject of riots, starvation and foreign missions.

He did talk of Shanghai, however, declaring that it was a beautiful city, possessing in its international quarter all conveniences, comforts, streetcars and department stores common to the average large American, English or French city.

There are many Americans and other "foreigners" in Shanghai, Mr. Bucknell said. The town, which he says is about the size of Philadelphia, sans the sesqui-centennial, is called the "Paris of the East," and is quite a gay place. As every true student of geography knows, Shanghai is one of the most important ports on its side of the globe, and on account of the immense shipping and trading, occupation for numerous foreigners is afforded.

Is Court Member.

Mr. Bucknell is a member of the Chinese assessor's court, which is a tribunal created to deal with native offenders when some international interest is involved. If a Chinaman killed an American; if he stole an American's dress suit; if the American wished to sue him for $3,000,000—any case—would come under the jurisdiction of the court of which Mr. Bucknell is a member. The court has the power to impose the death penalty.

Chinese murderers are either shot or beheaded. Mr. Bucknell says that two headsmen, or rather, two beheadsmen, are attached to each company of soldiers. They carry great long knives, with short handles, which takes off a head with one whack.

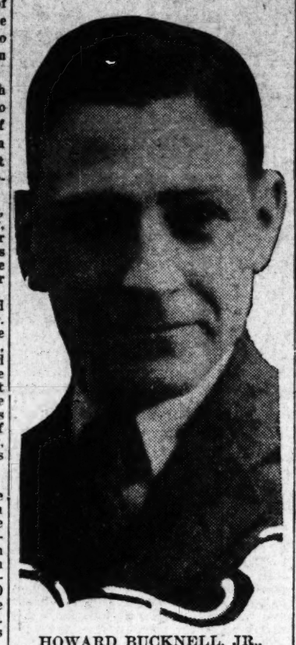

The youth of China is leaning toward English dress, he says, deserting the honorable and rather picturesque costumes of their ancestors. This is due largely to the fact that so many of them are employed in foreign concerns, and, too, they declare the modern clothes to be of greater comfort. Mr. Bucknell's modish suit was tailored in Shanghai.

Leaves Here Soon.

After a stay of several days here Mr. Bucknell will leave with Mrs. Bucknell, and their young son, who are accompanying him on the trip, for the Adirondacks. They will return to Shanghai in about a month.

Mr. Bucknell, while an Atlantan, in practically every sense of the word, has been away from the city a great deal. He was a student at Tech High school for a while; spent three years at the University of Georgia, leaving there to join the army during the war.

Following discharge from the service, he went to Shanghai to study the Chinese language and prepare for the important post which he now occupies.

HOWARD BUCKNELL, JR., American consul to Shanghai, who is visiting his father here.

Vinson Explains A&P Changes In Closing Hour

B. F. Vinson, vice president of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, has announced that their stores in the city of Atlanta will close each Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock until further notice. He appeals to the public of Atlanta to cooperate in making this holiday possible for store employees.

"It has long been a practice of this great company," he said, "to persistently make progressive moves to better the working conditions of employees. This action was taken, believing that the good people of Atlanta fully appreciate the extent to which the tea company's employees try to serve their customers, and are willing to arrange their purchases so as to help the store employees enjoy this weekly half holiday.

"This, in no way, affects the vacations of the managers," he continued, "who have been with the tea company for a period of one year or more. This move is an additional proof of the interest the tea company takes in its employees. It was just a few months ago that announcements of free insurance for all employees was made. It was only a few months before when the company made an announcement that employees were permitted to take a financial interest in the company.

"We await with interest the next move of the tea company, wondering what else is possible for a company like this to do further in the interest of its employees," Mr. Vinson concluded.

PLAN TO DEVELOP NORTH GEORGIA MOUNTAIN RESORT

Formation of a $100,000 corporation to develop a north Georgia mountain resort city was disclosed Saturday when application for charter for the Nacoochee Valley Development company was filed in Fulton superior court.

The petitioners were L. B. Eschbach, Grover C. Long and Attorney Alvin Richards, the latter representing Messrs. Eschbach and Long and unnamed Atlanta capital.

Purchase of a tract of upwards of 1,000 acres in Nacoochee valley, including Lake Lavonia, was announced several days ago by Mesrs. Long and Eschbach. They propose to develop a resort city with streets, electric lights, water and other city improvements. Upwards of $50,00 has already been expended on the lake and other improvements, it is stated.

The application for charter asks authority to build and maintain public utilities and to develop and sell the property. Messrs. Long and Eschbach, formerly of Melbourne, Fla., are at the Cecil hotel.

KEMPER RESIGNS AS LOCAL AGENT OF PACIFIC LINES

Frederick J. Kemper, Atlanta, general agent of the Missouri Pacific railway lines sincle the close of the world war, has resigned his position and left the city Saturday to make his temporary home in Cincinnati. No successor to Mr. Kemper is yet announced by the railway officials.

The many friends of Mr. Kemper throughout the southeast deeply regret his departure as he has been active in affairs of the Traffic club of Atlanta, serving as chairman of the membership committee.

Negro Leader To Speak.

Dr. L. K. Williams, of Chicago, Ill., president of the National Baptist convention, the largest negro denomination in the world, will deliver an address at 8 o'clock Friday night, June 18, at the city auditorium, it was announced Saturday. A musical program will also be given.

BOARD TO CHOOSE ASSISTANT CHIEF

Selection of an assistant chief of police to fill the place now occupied by Acting Asistant Chief of Police C. P. Connally is slated to take place at a special call meeting of the police committee of council at the police station at 7:30 o'clock Monday night, it was announced Saturday by William B. Hartsfield, chairman of the committee.

Although it is reported that Captain Grover C. Fain has the support of a majority of the members of the committee, Acting Chief Connally, Captain A. J. Holcomb and former Chief of Detectives Lamar Pool have been mentioned prominently for the post and a lively tilt in the session is expected.

The Atlanta Council of Women has gone on record as opposing Captain Fain and Holcomb and it has insisted that the committee pledge itself to vote for the man whom Chief James L. Beavers will nominate for the position.

After Chief Beavers has nominated six times without concurrence by the committee the board then will have the right to elect an assistant of its own choosing without the chief's consent.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO GO TO B. Y. P. U. MEETING

A special train will be chartered to take delegates from North Georgia to the thirty-fifth annual state B. Y. P. U. convention in Macon, June 16, officials of the organization announced Saturday. A large delegation of B. Y. P. U. workers from Atlanta churches will attend.

Prominent Baptist ministers and laymen from all parts of the south will attend the convention and such leaders as Frank H. Leavell, executive secretary of the interboard commission of the Southern Baptist convention, will deliver addresses. Program plans are in charge of Edwin S. Preston, state secretary.

Gravure Section Shows Prize Grain Fields of Georgia

Fertile fields of golden grain—wheat, swaying to and fro in the gentle breeses of summer, are reproduced in the gravure section of today's Constitution.

The grain was grown on the Piedmont Pedigreed Seed farm on route 14, near Commerce, owned and managed by J. O. M. Smith, well-known scientific farmer. Experiment station records, performance in the fields, recommendations of agriculturists and testimonials of growers proclaim Piedmont Pedigreed Seed farm one of the most progressive in the south.

For the past 25 years the farm has been planted in cotton and crops that make feed for the men and their families who work the land. For every two acres planted in cotton, three are planted in grains and foodstuffs.

The farm sells feed and seed instead of buying them and has averaged making a bale of cotton per acre for the past 25 years.

Mr. Smith in commenting on his farm states: "If it would pay any one to plant all cotton instead of rotating as we do, it would take at least one-third more labor and soon take the whole place to make as much cotton as two acres in every does now, and instead of selling feed we'd have to buy it."

In addition to cotton and wheat the products of the farm include two-eared corn, fulghum oats and brabham peas.

WHITEFOORD BAPTIST TO HOLD "TAG DAY"

With a view of raising funds to aid in the erection of Whitefoord Avenue Baptist church, at Whitefoord avenue and Meridian street, members of the congregation will stage "tag day" on the streets of Atlanta Monday.

The church was organized last summer by George W. Adolphus, who is serving as pastor. About 150 women have volunteered their services to make the program Monday a success.

WEST END CHURCH PLANS VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL

The fourth annual daily vacation Bible school, conducted by the West End Presbyterian church, will open June 7 and continue for four weeks, closing July 2.

The school again will be in charge of Mrs. Thomas S. Mays and a corps of teachers. As in the past, all children of West End regardless of church affiliations, have been invited to attend. Classes are conducted every morning from 9 to 12 o'clock. Rev. E. L. Flanagan is the pastor of the church.

Library To Offer Summer Reading Course for Children

Although most school children are prone to throw their books in a corner and wish them well until September when school "turns out," a unique plan for summer reading for school children and grown-ups will be offered at the Carnegie library. The Library Travel club will be organized and a selected list of noted authors of different parts of the world, will be furnished each member.

The tickets for the three trips will cost only two cents and each holder will be entitled to all privileges of the books. The three trips offered are "See America First," "A Trip to Europe," and "A Trip Around the World."

COSTA SUCCESSFUL IN PORTUGAL REVOLT

Lisbon, June 5.—General Gomes Costa is expected tomorrow to enter the capital in triumph at the head of 15,000 men as a result of the revolutionary move he initiated at Braga last week.

It was announced today that the government had decreed dissolution of the parliament.

General Costa rebelled last week with the support of his Braga garrison. The government announced troops had been dispatched against Costa and that there was no dissatisfaction elsewhere. These optimistic governmental pronouncements apparently were exaggerated.

114 GERMAN PRIESTS LEAVE FOR AMERICA

Berlin, June 5.—One hundred and fourteen Catholic priests sailed today for the United States, en route to the eucharistic congress in Chicago.

At 7:30, the New High Entertainers will appear for the first time in quite awhile at WDBE, having gone through a little period of re-organization and will offer a half-hour of real harmony. Included in the personelle of the New High Entertainers are, John Clotworthy, tenor and manager; Tom Trent, tenor and lead; W. F. Davis, baritone; and Tom Cobb, bass.

LOUIS BECK RETIRES; WORKERS GET STOCK

cation afforded by country schools of the period, untrained in anything save drawing beads on the visors of blue caps and a knowledge of plowing and familiarity with other farm chores gained through actual hard experience, he arrived in Atlanta in the year 1886 and began working at a job which lasted 60 years.

And during the years which have followed Mr. Beck has not forgotten the almost insurmountable obstacles which stood in his path as an orphan, penniless and unequipped. Several hundreds of worthy boys and girls, faced with pretty much the same discouraging problems which were his as a boy, have since been educated and made ready for life with funds provided by this same Mr. Beck.

Mr. Beck appointed trustees for the management of his contributions of this kind, instead of donating the money to the schools themselves. It is for the use of any boy or girl worthy of the opportunity. There is the Emory university fund of $50,000; the Georgia Teach fund of $25,000; the Wesleyan college fund of $25,000; the Y. W. C. A. fund for educating worthy girls in commercial pursuits, which amounts to $10,000; he established an orphanage fund, which serves regardless of creed of denomination, of $25,000; a fund of $10,000 has been set aside for superannuated preachers of the North Georgia Methodist conference; a fund for the Tallulah Falls Industrial school amounts to $15,000—and there are others, some of which no one knows about except Mr. Beck himself.

Had to Rise at Dawn.

His first job required 17-year-old Louis Beck to arise before the break of dawn, sweep out the little hardware store of Tommey and Stewart, on Whitehall street at the location now occupied by the Chamberlin-Johnson-DuHose company, bring in water from the well in back and during winter months build the fires, after which he had absolutely nothing to do all day but run errands, clerk in the store, keep the fire going, bring in more water and sweep out again at night. Atlanta had no water system then, and coal was not used for fuel.

Louis Beck stuck to it and in 1870 the little store saw fit to make the sign on the front read, "Tommey, Stewart and Beck." In 1872 the business was moved from Whitehall street to the corner of Decatur and Pryor streets, in front of the old Kimball house. In 1878 Mr. Stewart retired and his interest was purchased by William A. Gregg and Louis Beck. The firm became Tommey, Gregg and Beck. Two years after Mr. Tommey retired and the shingle over the door read Beck and Gregg company.

The first mercantile store to be incorporated in the south and the fourth to be incorporated in the United States came about when Bill Gregg and Louis Beck got their charter, and the business became the Beck and Gregg Hardware company. This startled the "old heads" about town, who were surprised to see a couple of young upstarts do something practically unheard of and certainly beyond the realm of reason of that time. But the incorporation prospered from the start.

Almost nation-wide interest was attracted by the incorporation and representatives of many firms came to borrow the by-laws and rules of the Beck and Gregg Hardware company. There were only two copies, both inscribed by Mr. Gregg, who was a wonderful penman. The copy which was used to "lend out" was worn out in short order. It would be hard to say how many businesses, some of which still are alive today, were chartered on the pattern designed by Beck and Gregg.

When Mr. Beck tendered his resignation to the board of directors a few days ago, it was with a deal of difficulty that he convinced the board that it should be accepted. Under the by-laws no man who has no financial interest in the business can hold an official position. So Mr. Beck disposed of all of his stock, a large portion of which, as has already been mentioned, was given to faithful members of the organization. His resignation was accepted, but—

Will Continue at Desk.

The board adopted resolutions requesting Mr. Beck to keep his desk and his office in the same old place, and to spend as much time there as he conscientiously could. He is going to do that, because, as he says, "when I come down town I've got to go somewhere and I don't know of any place I'd rather go."

Mr. Beck has been a subscriber to The Consitution since its first issue. He is one of the few men alive today who were on that first small subscription list.

He has been identified with virtually every important move in the advancement of Atlanta's good since he first was graduated from his position as handy boy for Tommey and Stewart. He was one of the founders of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and is one of its oldest ex-presidents.

Atlanta and the world can use all the men it can get like Louis Beck.

Only on one occasion has he ever deviated from the policy of appointing a man who resided in the district. The Georgia senators are insisting that he adhere to this policy in this case. In Louisiana, the president appointed a democrat as federal judge, because he was unable to find a republican within the district whom he regarded as qualified, though there were numbers of possible republican nominees in the other districts of the state.

The president is loath to face a fight on an appointment, particularly in view of his trouble with appointments this year, and because of the approaching end of the session. A fight over a nomination would endanger the legislative program.

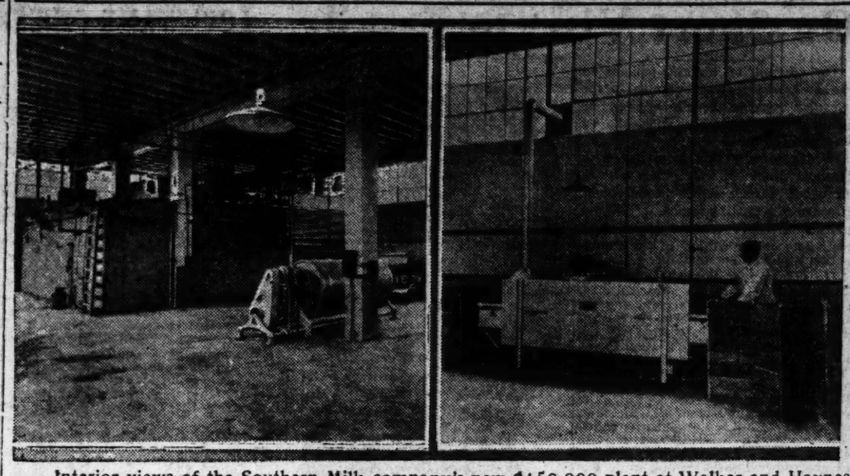

Harris says that the chances of defeating confirmation of Tilson are good.

LEAGUE COUNCIL TO MEET MONDAY ON NEW MEMBERS

Geneva, June 5.—The League of Nations council will meet Monday in the first session since the disappointing meeting of the second week in March which ended with failure to admit Germany to League of Nations membership.

Brazil and Spain blocked Germany's entrance three months ago by insisting that if Germany were given a permanent place, they, too, should have one. Severe pressure will be exerted on Spain and Brazil in next week's meeting to persuade them to accept the recently adopted project whereby three new non-permanent seats could be created, one for South America, one for Poland, and one for China.

Southern Milk Company Opens Modern Plant

Interior views of the Southern Milk company's new $150,000 plant at Walker and Haynes streets. The picture on the left shows the cooling system, where the milk first enters the pasteurization process, after which it is marketed under the trade name of "Pedigree Milk and Pedigree Dairy Products." The picture on the right shows one section of the bottling process, where the milk in sealed bottles is placed in cases ready to be distributed to the public.

An expenditure of more than $150,000 is represented in the recently completed plant of the Southern Cream and Milk company at Walker and Haynes streets. The plant is modern in every respect and contains up-to-date equipment for pasteurizing milk.

Pasteurized products of the company are marketed under the trade name of "Pedigree Milk and Pedigree Dairy Products." Milk received at the plant enters a spotlessly clean building, where every inch of floor and wall space is easily cleaned. Every provision known to dairy science against uncleanliness and unsanitary conditions have been made by the concern.

"The safety of pasteurized milk is well known," officials of the company point out, "and scores of the nation's most noted bacteriologists and milk authorities declare pasteurization to be the most outstanding protective feature ever introduced into the dairy industry.

"From the time milk enters the plant until it is delivered to the consumer 'Pedigree Milk' does not come in contact with human hands. Every operation in the plant is performed by machinery, the milk being carried from the process machines to the bottles in pipes which are cleaned and scalded twice daily."

The officials have issued an invitation to all Atlantans to visit the plant, where each visitor is given a big glass of fresh sweet milk "right out of the cooler." While the company recently came to Atlanta, it has been engaged in the milk business in the south for a number of years. General offices were moved to Atlanta from Richmond, Va., several months ago and branches are maintained in Richmond, Va., and Jacksonville, Fla.

REMARRIAGE PLAN IS DENIED BY HARRY

answered. "Why, I don't plan to get married at all."

Frank Johnston, Thaw's lawyer, also denied Miss Nesbit's statement that there had been a reconciliation and that there would be a remarriage. Johnston declared that neither Harry nor Evelyn would marry the other again. He said he had driven to Atlantic City with Harry to see Thaw's former wife in connection with the story that Russell Thaw, her 15-year-old son, was involved in hotel-beating charges in Chicago.

EVELYN NESBIT ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR REMARRIAGE.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 5.—Blistered in the limelight of publicity for the past 20 hectic years of their lives apart, Harry K. Thaw and Evelyn Nesbit have staged the most remarkable reconciliation of the decade and are going to be remarried.

Evelyn made this announcement in her apartment on Vermont avenue tonight after spending three hours in seclusion with Thaw during the afternoon. It was not verbally confirmed by the Pittsburgh millionaire, but he stood by the while with his attorney, Frank Johnston, as if to signify his agreement.

"Everything is all fixed up now," said Evelyn happily. "Harry and I are going to live together again. We will get married as soon as I can sell my home."

Russell Is Present.

Her 15-year-old son, Russell, also was present as Evelyn told of the reconciliation and hugged his mother affectionately as she finished.

Charges brought against Russell in Chicago may have been responsible for the reunion of Harry and Evelyn, who had been separated for 20 years since the murder of Stanford White, during which period each has attempted suicide once or twice and whose fortunes, good and bad, have many times brought them again into the headlines of the newspapers.

Russell got into the limelight on his own account a few days ago when the Congress hotel of Chicago charged that he had left its roof without paying a large bill incurred in entertaining himself and girl friends. The management of the hotel billed both Harry and Evelyn.

Dine at Hotel.

Last night the famous couple, long estranged and now middle-aged, dined together with Russell and Johnston at the Ambassador hotel. Thaw had come on from Philadelphia and it was said they were together to join in emphatic denial that Russell had been in Chicago since January, but Evelyn announced subsequently that "we have buried the hatchet and decided not to fight any more."

This afternoon the pair went from the Ambassador hotel to Evelyn's apartment, pulled the shades, locked the doors, and stayed there three hours. Laughter was occasionally heard outside from within.

Emerging, Thaw declared he was leaving for New York, but he was present two or three hours later when Evelyn made the announcement that "everything is now all fixed up."

The announcement had followed Harry's arrival in Atlantic City yesterday and the sudden appearance of Evelyn, her son, Russell, and Thaw to an exclusive cafe here last night.

Then this afternoon Evely and Harry spent three secluded hours together in Miss Nesbit's apartment here, after which Thaw left, aparently in high spirits, announcing he was going to the Pennsylvania station and would leave for New York immediately.

Apparently this announcement merely was a ruse to throw the public from the trail and his limousine was awaiting him a few blocks away. He had transferred to it from a taxicab in which he had left Miss Nesbit's home.

Announcement Made.

He and his attorney had returned and been joined by Evelyn, the three going for a long ride through the suburbs of Atlantic City. Then they returned to Evelyn's apartment, where the announcement was made.

Evelyn wore a leopard skin coat, tan wool stockings, tan slippers, and a pink and white batik silk dress. On her arms hung several bracelets. When she got out of the automobile her face was very rosy and her hair was blown slightly across her face. After making the statement she visited a few minutes with Russell and then sent two telegrams, the first to Frank Florentine, assistant manager of the Congress hotel in Chicago, which read:

"It is criminal of you to sue libel on a 15-year-old schoolboy. Russell has not left Atlantic City since last January. We will take immediate steps in this matter. Evelyn Nesbit."

The second telegram, addressed to Barney Franklin, owner of the Moulin Rouge in Chicago, where Evelyn appeared as a dancer. He is said to live at the Congress hotel in Chicago. The telegram read:

"Russell positively has not been in Chicago since last January the fifth. Assuring you I will take immediate steps against Congress hotel. Mr. Thaw will help in this. Evelyn Nesbit."

Evelyn said later that Thaw would not appear in her premier in a cafe here Monday night but that he would be here some time later next week.

Rivals Stillman Case.

In many respects the reconciliation of Harry and Evelyn as announced by the latter is even more remarkable than the recent reconciliation of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Stillman.

Their romance goes back more than 20 years and in the meantime, both have aged through a period in which they separately encountered adversity, occasional streaks of better fortune, and even the peril of death. Evelyn was once known as the most perfect artist's model in America.

Both have managed to keep in the public eye, however—Thaw most recently through his eccentric excursions into Broadway night life since his release from a sanitarium in Philadelphia after a jury found him sane less than two years ago and Evelyn most spectacularly when she attempted suicide in Chicago early last January.

They were married in April, 1905, when Evelyn was 20 and Harry was known as a gay blade in the night life of two continents. Fourteen months later came the famous murder of Stanford White, the wealthy and brilliant architect whom Thaw shot on the old Madison Square Garden roof, after learning of White's relations with his wife.

Evelyn, who had confessed to her husband incidents which occurred prior to her marriage, became the center of worldwide attention. She went on the witness stand when Thaw was tried for murder and repeated these confessions.

Saved From Chair.

Probably it was only Evelyn's disclosure of her past to the world that saved Thaw from the electric chair.

Even before their marriage, however. Thaw had mistreated her in Paris at a time when she was touring Europe with him, Evelyn charged. She had returned to America and told White of this and he had circulated stories attacking Thaw's reputation.

But Thaw had an income of $80,000 a year and despite their pre-marital difficulties, they were married. Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw accepted her son's choice, introduced her into society and schooled her in foreign languages.

The first murder trial began a legal battle lasting nine years. It lasted 67 days and probably was the most sensational trial up to that time. The second trial resulted in his sentence to the asylum for the criminal insane at Matteawan. Attempts to free him from Matteawan ended in disappointment. Thaw escaped in 1913, but was recaptured. After his first sanity trial in New York in 1915, he was set free, but in 1917 he was indicted again on a charge of kidnaping Frederick Gump, of Kansas City. It was alleged that he had tied the boy to a bed and had beaten and misused him.

Found in Home.

After a nation-wide search for Harry, detectives located him at a private home in Philadelphia. Breaking in they found he had attempted suicide, having slashed his throat and wrists.

He was recommitted to an asylum, again being found insane, but his lawyers obtained another sanity trial in March, 1924, at Philadelphia, and he has been free ever since.

During the early period of Thaw's legal battles, first for life and then for freedom, Evelyn lived quietly while the Thaw family supplied her with funds on condition that her name be kept out of the newspapers.

Finally Thaw obtained a divorce and Evelyn went to Europe to pursue her art studies. In 1912 she returned with baby Russell, who she said was Thaw's son and she sued unsuccessfully for support from the Thaw fortune for the child. Returning to the stage, she first became the dancing partner of Jack Clifford. She had filed a petition in bankruptcy and married Clifford. Her marriage to Clifford was of short duration.

Evelyn Opens Tea Room.

Opening a tearoom in New York in 1920, Evelyn failed to meet the rent, and was evicted, whereupon she made the first of her two attempts at suicide by poison. Some time after recovering she gave a party to celebrate the falsity of the report that she had committed suicide by jumping into the Potomac river.

Soon afterward she went into cabaret work as an entertainer at Atlantic City and she has made her headquarters there with Russell ever since, now and then being reported engaged to someone other than Thaw.

She regained some of her former popularity and from time to time filled engagements in various parts of the country. She was appearing at a Chicago cabaret last New Year's, when began a party which culminated for Evelyn in her second attempt at suicide. It was feared for a time that this attempt would prove fatal.

THAW'S MOTHER NOT INFORMED.

Pittsburgh, June 5.—The news of Evelyn Nesbit's announcement of a reconciliation with Harry K. Thaw did not reach Thaw's aged mother tonight.

Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, 84, retired early and servants at the home refused to disturb her when informed by the United Press of latest developments in the case. Mrs. Thaw's secretary could not be reached.

Mrs. Thaw, prominent for her charity work here, has been confined to her home since June 21, 1925, as a result of an incomplete fractured hip sustained when she fell down the steps of the Third Presbyterian church.

Harry has spent much of his time during the past year at the bedside of his mother. When Evelyn Nesbit attempted to commit suicide in Chicago last January, Thaw for the first time admitted he was aiding her financially. He had been sending her $10 a day for some time, he said.

BIG MERCHANDISE SWINDLE CHARGED

Norfolk, Va., June 5.—(AP)—What is alleged by post office inspectors to be a million-dollar merchandise swindle in North Carolina was revealed here today with the announcement that 12 persons already had been arrested on charges of using the mails to defraud and that many more names had been presented to a federal grand jury with the expectations that a large number of additional arrests would be made.

Ramifications of the plot spread through the entire eastern North Carolina section, including principal cities, according to post office inspectors. Using as the basis of their alleged scheme establishment of stores in North Carolina under names almost identical with those of reputable establishments, the swindlers are alleged to have obtained merchandise from hundreds of wholesale jobbers totalling $1,000,000 in value. The merchandise included almost everything from clothing to automobile tires and in one case a $2,200 diamond.

The plot, according to the government agents, became known after firms in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities had presented bills for large amounts to old established customers in the south and learned that the goods had not been ordered by them, but had been shipped to stores with similar names.

The investigators said they expected to broaden the scope of their inquiry and that indications are it would extend as far as Wisconsin.

'YELLOW NATIVE' BIGGEST MENACE,

Chicago, June 5.—(AP)—War veterans of the second division who won undying fame in the historic battle of Belleau Wood in June, 1918, today stood in silence in a small patch of woodland in the Cook county forest preserve, near here, while a new "Belleau Wood" was dedicated.

The memorial was dedicated to the memory of members of the "Fighting Second" who gave their lives in the war.

Major General John A. Lejeune, commandant of the marine corps; Major General James G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America, and Lieutenant Colonel Hanford MacNider, assistant secretary of war and president of the Second Division association, took part in the ceremonies.

Declaring that so-called "reds" are not really dangerous, Colonel MacNider said that the real danger lies in the native "yellows." The "reds" are usually foreigners who can be cured by education, experience and information, but the native "yellows" are the defeatists of our national life, he said.

"What they need more than anything else is a good course in American history, properly administered—the kind of history that was written at Belleau, Soissons, St. Mihiel, Blac Mont and the Argonne."

Recalling war experiences to his fellow veterans, MacNider added:

"Here in this new Belleau Wood stand with us a great shadowy legion—the men of the second who did not come back—four thousand American boys. Whenever we of the second gather together, unseen, unheard, they gather with us.

"All through life he will march beside you. Your citizenship must count double. He died that you and your children might enjoy American citizenship.

"We who have seen American citizenship exemplified under every adversity know what its worth can be. We shall be unworthy of our trust if we do not teach that conception of citizenship to our sons and if we do not insist that that which we shall leave them shall be kept inviolate."

The entire cabinet of the past year's officers was reelected today. Colonel MacNider again became president. Major General Preston Brown was assigned as chairman of the committee to prepare the history of the division's deeds in France. Major General James G. Harboard was named chairman of the committee to raise funds and erect the division's national monument.

With St. Louis and San Antonio delegates contending for the 1927 meeting, final action was deferred to a later date.

Gate City Guard Rea
:: FAMOUS OLD OUTFIT TO INVADE PHILADELPHIA :: For "Invasion of East"

Unruly and fretting under the rigid drill schedule ordered by Drill Master Charlie Thompson, members of Atlanta's famous Gate City Guard Saturday night were "rar'in to go" in the on-to-Philadelphia program which is set for June 12-16.

The old Atlanta military organization, now a cog in the 122nd infantry regiment, national guard, has been invited to participate in the mammoth military program during the sesquicentennial week after next, in which famous military outfits of each of the thirteen original colonies will participate.

During the past 30 days two nights each week have been devoted to special drills for the occasion, new uniforms of somber Confederate gray were ordered and each member was drilled especially in some feature of the program by Major Charlie Thompson, late of football fame at the University of Georgia.

Major General Johnson Hagood, Adjutant General Charles H. Cox, Colonel J. M. Kimbrough, Colonel Eugene Oberdorfer, Major Thompson, Major Thompson, Major Gerald P. O'Keefe, Captain Robert E. Ennis, Captain Harry A. Heins, Captain Ed Greene, Captain L. O. Moseley, Captain Frank Maloney, Captain B. T. Huiett, Captain Frank Kopf and more than a score other Atlantans are members and will make the trip to Philadelphia as Atlanta's and Georgia's representatives in the spectacular military pageant.

Major Thompson, when not drilling guard members, is overseeing training features of a battalion of the 122nd infantry, is spending Monday and Friday nights with Gate City Guardsmen in preparation for the trip, and members assert that he is relentless in his demands upon guardsmen as when he held the whip-hand of the Georgia football team as captain—only a few short years ago.

At any rate, Major Thompson is anxious for the Atlanta outfit to make a fine showing, and guardsmen unite in saying that if the organization falls below par it will not be the drill master's fault.

So—on to Philly!

LEADERS PLANNING TO REOPEN PROBE

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., June 5.—With the pending removal of Will Colvin from his office as chairman of the state pardon and parole board viewed as the outstanding achievement of the special crime grand jury, the authorities today laid plans for continuing the investigation of the beer war general lawlessness and the murder of Assistant State's Attorney William H. McSwiggin.

As they were working, Hary Eugene Kelley, president of the Union League club, issued a statement, in which he offered to lead a separate grand jury investigation into the death of McSwiggin, and into politico-criminal combines and boasted that if given the opportunity he would find out who murdered the young prosecutor.

Colvin's removal from the state service was anounced late Friday by Attorney General Carlstrom, who stated before the grand jury and after having conferred with Governor Small, that he was authorized to state that "within thirty days, Will Colvin will leave the state service."

Colvin Will Quit.

Governor Small said that Colvin probably would resign. It was common knowledge about town today that Colvin's resignation already has been demanded by Governor Small, that it now is in his possession, and that the governor awaits only the decision of his political sponsors upon a successor.

The challenge issued by Mr. Kelley, who is leading counsel for Judge Daniel P. Trude in the latter's ballot recount petition against Joseph P. Savage, is as follows:

"The special grand jury impanelled a month ago by the criminal court upon the petition of the state's attorney, Robert E. Crowe, for the purpose of investigating the murder of one of Mr. Crowe's assistants, William H. McSwiggin, made its final report today.

"The report is an indictment of the sincerity and intelligence of the people of Cook county. It has apparently been gotten up to save Mr. Crowe's political necessities, though I have no doubt the individual grand jurors were not aware of this use of them, and are probably not to be blamed for a document which is so ridiculous as to be scandalous.

"If Mr. Crowe will ask anyone of several judges of the circuit and superior courts whom I am willing to name upon his request, to call a special grand jury for the investigation of offenses committed against the law in Cook county, and if the court impaneling the special grand jury will name me as a special state's attorney with power to direct that grand jury, I will find out why he was murdered. I will find out why Mr. Crowe's special grand jury has not ascertained these facts. I will find out who is protecting the beer runners in Cook county, and why, and I will ascertain why the state's attorney's office is utterly incompetent to cope with the present criminal situation in Cook county.

"If Mr. Crowe is in earnest, and really desires my help in disclosing the basis of the criminal situation in Cook county, he can have it, and my services will cost Cook county nothing. I challenge him to accept this proposition."

ANOTHER CAVE-IN OCCURS ON STREET IN BIRMINGHAM

Birmingham, Ala., June 5.—(AP)—Another cave-in on Birmingham's south side was today reported to the city engineer, who immediately covered the aperture with crossties. The surface indentation was three by fifteen feet, the break running from the mouth of an alley under the sidewalk into Twenty-seventh street, between Third and Fourth avenues.

Children were at play near the spot when the surface crumbled.

A series of similar caves were reported within the last year to the city engineers. Expert opinion said that erosion of limestone caused the break and that there was nothing seriously wrong with underlying strata.

TALIESEN SIEGE COMES TO CLOSE

Spring Green, Wis., June 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—Mrs. Mirian Noel Wright, exhausted in her unrelenting fight to enter Taliesen, the palatial hilltop bungalow here of her architect husband, Frank Lloyd Wright, today temporarily abandoned her efforts upon the advice of physicians and attorneys, and announced her intention of returning to Chicago to rest.

Mrs. Wright, refused admittance to her home, following failure of a divorce suit settlement plan proposed by her husband is determined to "go home and stay there" she asserts, as she has "no other home."

Mr. Wright today sent her, through attorneys, $125 which will temporarily provide for her. He also offered to pay for her expenses in a sanitarium while she recovers her health, but Mrs. Wright, who lived in the home of the architect ten years before she married him, remains undecided.

Two attempts to enter the bungalow failed Thursday night, and her tirade upon guards and caretakers there, and exertion in throwing rocks at signs, caused a nervous and mental ailment, physicians said, which only rest can aid.

Early today she complained of heart attacks, expressing the belief she was dying, but Dr. Frank Nee Gould finds nor organic ailment.

Mrs. Wright remains firm in her determination to give her husband no peace, and prevent him from living with Mme. Olga Montenegrin, dancer, who is sought on a warrant charging a statutory offense.

Wright has expressed opinion that it might be necessary for him to have Mrs. Wright given a sanity test.

Hubby Silent For 14 Years, Charges Wife

New York, June 5.—Millard F. Hamsley has lived with his wife for 14 years without communicating with her except through the children, Mrs. Hattie Hamsley charges in a suit for separation.

Hamsley is head of an iron works bearing his name. Mrs. Hamsley says in her petition that he is a rich man and makes more than $20,000 a year, but "as far as I am concerned, he is a miser."

"For over 20 years,' complained Mrs. Hamsley, "my husband has subjected me to many brutalities and particularly during the latter part of our married life. He is a morose and has not spoken to me for 14 years.

"Whatever information he desired to convey to me he did through the children. We have seven. He has not really given me any of his society for the past 14 years. He comes and goes as he likes."

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Folks

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity." It never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

If past fifty, buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

Women Demand Equal Rights On Police Force

Paris, June 5.—(AP)—Domestic science and religion were voted by the International Women's Suffrage Alliance this afternoon as unsuitable subjects for discussion by feminists. The demands for creation of policewomen in all countries and equal rights for women aviators occupied the delegates.

Commandant Mary Alle, chief of the British "Bobbyettes," in full regalia with mannish haircut, military boots and monocle, outlined the cause of the policewomen and seconded a resolution, which was unanimously passed, demanding that policewomen be appointed in all countries with the full status and powers of policemen. They would be employed particularly in cases relating to women, children and young persons.

The minority desire to censure the international labor bureau of the League of Nations for its policy of protective legislation regarding women in industry, took the form of a resolution, which was twice redrafted before it was passed. The resolution read:

"The International Women's Suffrage Alliance congress holds that any international system of differential legislation based on sex, in spite of any temporary advantage, may develop into a very real tyranny, because of the segregation of women workers and by the imposition of fresh handicaps on their capacity as wage earners."

The wording of the resolution was protested by the German, Italian, Austrian, United States and Swiss delegations, but the United States finally voted for it.

BODY OF AMERICAN SAILOR IS FOUND FLOATING IN SEA

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Havre, June 5.—The body of an American sailor, E. Tuckay, from the United States ship Pittsburgh was found floating last night in the harbor near the quay at Lamande. The body bore no marks of violence and at the inquest it was decided the death was caused by accidental drowning. The sum of $3.50 was found in his pocket.

His identity was established by the disc on his wrist. The body is in the morgue pending an investigation.

Another American sailor returning aboard the Pittsburgh was saved from drowning by a Havre citizen, M. Emil De Bris, who saw the bluejacket fall overboard.

$147,000 Paving Contract Is Awarded For Second Unit of Avondale Estates

Above are shown two attractive homes recently completed at Avondale Estates. Top, 23 Dartmouth avenue, which was purchased by Grover C. Kingdon, formerly of Lakeland, Fla., at a cost of $10,800. Below, 10 Dartmouth avenue, which was bought by P. B. Hicks, an executive of the Atlanta branch of the F. W. Woolworth company.

The Meador Construction company of Atlanta Saturday was awarded a contract for paving and complete improvement of seven miles of street frontage in the second unit of Avondale Estates, Atlanta's new suburban city, involving expenditure of $147,000.

The contract calls for laying sidewalks, curbing, water mains and sewerage, in addition to paving the streets. The work was begun immediately with preliminary surveys, excavations and grading already effected. Plans called for completion of the project by fall, giving to the beautiful lake section of Avondale Estates a complete equipment of paving. The street frontage completely improved, including the entire first and second units.

Plans to open a third unit with an additional seven miles of street frontage by early fall are being considered by John H. Byrley, general manager of Avondale Estates. This arrangement will be necessary, he said, to supply the demand for homesites in the new suburb.

This demand is reflected in a record of sales totaling more than $1,000,000 in the first and second units, since the tract was opened to the public—sales that are reported as continuing at a rate of more than $2,500,000 a year.

As a direct result of this situation, the $1,000,000 building program for the year, which contemplates the erection of 100 to 200 homes by the Flagler company, Charles H. Black, Hoke N. Smith and other builders, has been placed on a heavier schedule, and 12 homes were under construction in the new suburb Saturday. The Flagler company's minimum schedule calls for the start of two home building projects each week, a number subject to increase as the demand justifies.

The most impressive detail of the building program now under way is the extension of the business block to be completed July 15, which will provide with existing facilities space for 17 business establishments. An indication of the substantial growth of Avondale Estates is to be seen in the circumstance of tenants already having been selected out of numerous applicants for the additional store space.

The extension of the business block will maintain in every detail the old English design that has made of the Avondale shopping district the most picturesque of commercial centers.

It is this design, the dominant note of construction in the new suburban city, that has been applied to the casino and bath house being built upon the shelving beach at the head of Lake Avondale, which likewise is to be completed July 15. The same design will mark the ice distributing plant which the Consumers company will erect in Avondale Estates on land leased for a term of years on the Stone Mountain highway at the north of the business block.

This plant will serve at retail and wholesale the growing community of Avondale Estates and other communities in the eastern portion of DeKalb county along the Stone Mountain and Covington roads.

TWO BIRMINGHAM NEWSPAPER MEN ARE GIVEN FINES

Birmingham, Ala., June 5.—(AP)—Charles A. Fell, managing editor of the Birmingham News, and J. C. Clark, secretary of the News company, were each fined $50 and costs in police court today on a charge of possessing liquor.

COOLIDGE LEARNS HOW TO SHOOT MARBLES GAME

Washington, June 5.—President Coolidge brushed up on his knowledge of the ancient game of marbles today.

His instructor was Francis Kau, champion marble shooter of Hawaii, who got down on his hands and knees on the thick rug in the executive office and showed the president his championship holds and his favorite shots. Coolidge displayed great interest, and wished him luck in the coming national tournament at Atlantic City, where the youngster will match his prowess against the best marble artists in the United States.

Francis is an American citizen, having been born in American territory, but both of his parents are full-blooded Chinese.

THIEVES LOOT LIQUOR CELLAR OF DRY LEADER

Hagerstown, Md., June 5.—Thieves filched 130 gallons of liquor from the cellar of Raymond J. Funkhauser, president of the Washington County Law and Order league, and one of the most active anti-prohibition leaders in western Maryland.

The liquor did not belong to him. It was a haul from bootleggers and was stored in his basement by dry agents. Funkhauser fired four times at the thieves, but his aim was bad.

County Commissioners Asked To Barbecue at Garden Hills

In honor of the board of commissioners of Fulton county, directors of Garden Hills corporation will give a barbecue Saturday afternoon, June 19, at Sunny Brook park in Garden Hills, officials of the company announced Saturday.

In addition to the guests of honor, who will be Paul S. Etheridge, Virlyn B. Moore, Edwin S. Johnson, Walter B. Stewart and George M. Hope, special guests will be Mayor Walter A. Sims and members of city council.

Fully 4,000 have been invited to participate in the celebration. A band concert by one of Atlanta's leading musical organizations will enliven the occasion with martial airs. Barbecue specialists known for their wizardry with viands over the pit and for their creation of rare sauces and Brunswick stew have been engaged to prepare the feast.

Sunny Brook park will prove a unique and delightful setting for such an event. Within its cooling shadows will be erected long tables from which the county fathers and their friends will be served.

Designed and created by William E. Gordon, celebrated landscape architect, of Leeds, England, Sunny Brook park, has been declared one of the most attractive spots of its kind in the south. As a community recreation park and as a children's playground it is said to have been made complete in every respect, with an abundance of equipment and with the addition of picturesque ornamentations to the natural woodland beauty. Swings and summer houses, in which are ferns and baskets of other foliage, bespeak a welcoming greeting to the visitor.

To delight the children are every type of playground amusement devices and young and old find interest in the hutches of rabbits, cotes of fan-tail pigeons, collection of guinea pigs and squirrel houses.

Through the park flows a brook of purest crystal water lined with ferns and moss and broken at intervals with five wading pools for children.

Farmer Finds Body Of Infant in Well On Thomaston Farm

Thomaston, Ga., June 5.—(AP)—Coroner J. L. Baker and a jury are investigating the finding of a ten-day-old infant's body in a well near this city. Doctors testified that the child was alive when thrown into the well.

The discovery was made on the property of Oscar Page, three miles from town. Charles Collins, tenant in possession, reported to the sheriff that his children in drawing a bucket of water from the well, found a baby's limb in the bucket.

The deputies dragged the well and pulled up the rest of the body, which was clothed.

UPSON GROWERS SELL CARLOAD OF PEACHES

Thomaston, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—Upson county's first car of peaches this season was shipped Friday, a car of Mayflowers being loaded by J. J. Moore & Sons and J. T. Barron, Jr. The car brought $2.75 a crate at the station.

The rains have greatly helped the fruit in this county and it is certain now that nearly 1,500 cars will be shipped during the season. The fruit this year is fine and attractive.

REVISION OF DAWES PLAN IS PROPOSED

Berlin, June 5.—Revision of the Dawes plan will be discussed here next month with arrival in Berlin of Benjamin Strong, governor of the United States Federal Reserve bank, and Gerrard B. Winston, under-secretary of the treasury, according to reports in semiofficial German sources.

The two American officials are traveling in Europe now. It is understood their visit to Berlin is the result of a serious conflict between S. Parker Gilbert, agent-general for reparations, and the German government.

In Sunday's issue of the Industrie Und Handels Zeitung, a semiofficial organ, it is suggested that through a revision of the Dawes plan, the allies hope to obtain revision of their war debt settlements with the United States.

The controversy between Gilbert and the German government arose from a protest which Germany made against making cash reparations transfers to the allies during the current year. Gilbert retorted that the transfer committee alone was empowered to decide that problem, indicating meanwhile his intention to transfer cash to the allies in the next few months.

The German government is said to have pointed out that such cash payments would not endanger the stability of German currency, as the allies already had received such large deliveries in kind that the balance to be paid in cash is small. Nevertheless, the government fears the precedent would be bad and believe the move might necessitate new German loans abroad.

FALSE REGISTRATION CHARGED IN FLORIDA

Tampa, Fla., June 5.—(AP)—Sheriff L. M. Hires, of Hillsborough county, announced tonight he has more than 100 affidavits in connection with false registration, and will place a deputy at each ballot box in the city precincts during the primary election Tuesday to see that the boxes are not "stuffed."

In a statement tonight the sheriff said a check of the registration list revealed a number of false names and addresses. Some of the addresses given, he said, are vacant lots and others do not exist. He explained it is the sheriff's duty to see that an honest election is carried out, and if necessary he will deputize additional officers. He did not say by whom the affidavits were sworn.

THOUGHT MALARIA STILL IN SYSTEM

Until Dodson's Liver Tone Drove Out Quarts of Sour Bile and Other Poisons.

There are entire sections where everyone seems to think they have malaria. Others believe they never fully got the malarial poison out of their systems.

Arnold Whiteson says: "For years I took calomel for the aches, biliousness, headache, constipation and the deathly feeling associated with what we believed to be malaria.

Last year I heard about Dodson's Liver Tone and bought a bottle for a few cents. Man, man, what a God-send. In the morning it drove out quarts of black, sour bile. I got back my appetite for food, braced right up and n ven't had a sick spell since. Whenever I feel a little bilious or the stomach gets sour, one dose of Dodson's Liver Tone is all I need. It is surely a blessing."

Hundreds of others tell the same experience.

Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horible calomel your money is waiting for you.—(adv.)

EMORY EXERCISES OPEN WITH SERMON

BY SANDY CLOWER.

Emory University, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—Beginning the commencement program of Emory's greatest graduation exercises, Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, pastor of St. John's Methodist church, south, of St. Louis, will deliver the commencement sermon today at 11 o'clock in the tent located near the elementary school building at Emory, which will house all of the commencement activities.

Dr. Holt is noted as a forceful and scholarly speaker, is a graduate of Vanderbilt university, and a member of Phi Beta Kappa national honorary scholastic fraternity. He comes as one of the speakers on the 85th annual commencement program of the university.

Next on the program of speakers is Hon. Chase S. Osborn, former governor of Michigan, who will deliver the baccalaureate address at 10:30 o'clock on Tuesday, after which diplomas will be granted to 198 students of the various schools of the university, including the Wesley Memorial Hospital nurse's school, which graduates some 15 students. Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of the university, will present the diplomas.

Between the two commencement speeches, beginning Monday at 10 o'clock, the Alumni association will hold its annual meeting, gathering countless of Emory's old grade back to the campus to celebrate their graduation many years ago, and engage in the spirit and fellowship of class reunions. All of the classes whose years of graduation end with 6 and 1 will hold reunions, a silver loving cup being offered to the class which has the largest percentage of its members present.

Robert S. Parker, Emory alumnus and prominent Atlanta attorney, will deliver the annual alumni day oration. Norman C. Miller is president of the Alumni association and will preside at the meetings, acting as toastmaster at the banquet to be held at 12 o'clock in the university dining hall.

At the noon alumni luncheon, many impromptu speeches will be heard from various of the alumni, and work of the past year and progress made by the university will be related to the assemblage.

For his work in securing both the largest number of subscriptions and the greatest monetary contributions to the recent $10,000,000 expansion campaign, Dr. Allen H. Bunce, one of the leaders of the Atlanta division of the campaign, will be presented a silver loving cup in recognition of his service and loyalty to the university.

From 2 to 5 p. m. Monday, the new Asa G. Candler memorial library will be open to the public for the first time since completion. Parties from Atlanta and alumni gathered for the occasion will be shown through the library and its beautiful features and organization explained and inspected to the visitors. At this time also, the first public display of rare documents and books presented to the library by Mr. Charles Howard Candler and other friends of the school.

This attraction is expected to draw many of the citizens of Atlanta, the collection being exceptionally rare and valuable. The collection will be on display in the spacious and beautiful curio cases located on the second floor of the new structure and built especially to house the relics and precious gifts of the university's museum. Dr. James Hinton, director of the library and Dr. English are in charge of the open-house and of the display of books and documents.

Completing the program of the day, Dr. Cox will give a reception to the graduating class at his home on Clifton road. All of the seniors, with their visiting parents, will be honored guests at this occasion, and a festive program has been planned.

BETHEL CHOIRS SING FOR ENCAMPMENT FUND

Big Bethel choirs, Nos. 1 and 2, composed of 75 trained negro voices, will offer a program of plantation melodies, negro spirituals, and other concert numbers at the auditorium Thursday night, for the benefit of the rebuilding fund of Big Bethel organ, which was destroyed in a fire which gutted the church some months ago and also of the Golden Age encampment.

Chief of Police James L. Beavers, during one of the brief intermissions, will speak on Atlanta's need for her young people, relating his remarks to the purposes for which the Golden Age encampment has been projected. Among others who will be seated on the platform as friends and supporters of this movement will be Judge Garland Watkins, Solicitor John A. Boykin, Attorney George B. Whitman and other prominent judicial and church people. Information concerning the concert and the encampment may be had from chairmen of different church divisions of young people's leaders.

To stimulate interest in pre-sale of tickets, those in charge are offering as a first incentive the gift of a single camp site on which the winning group can build its own hut to the Sunday school class or young people's organization selling the first $75 worth of tickets. A double camp site will be given to every group turning in $150 worth of tickets. All groups selling tickets will be honor guests at a picnic, the date to be later announced.

"AUTOMATIC" COURT FOR TRAFFIC LAW VIOLATORS URGED

Councilman W. E. Saunders, of the 12th ward, will offer a proposal for the establishment of an "automatic" court for violators of minor traffic laws, by which offenders would go directly to police station and pay the fines without congesting the recorder's court with petit cases.

The plan is for the recipient of the copy of charges to pay $6 for the first offense, $11 for the second, $16 for the third and an additional $5 for every offense after that. In this way "patrons" of the police court would not be forced to spend hours waiting for their cases to be called, it is said.

Telephone Companies Seeking Permission For Toll Connection

The state public service commission will hear evidence at its session June 22 in a controversy between the Reynolds Telephone company and the Butler Telephone company which is being waged over a toll line connection between Reynolds and Butler.

Mrs. H. C. Bond, of Macon, head of the Reynolds company, stated to Chairman James A. Perry, of the commission, that her company desires to connect a toll line with the exchange of the Butler company. The Butler company is seeking a connection with the exchange of the Reynolds company with a toll line.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LVIII., No. 358. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 6, 1926.

President's Prohi Order Held Legal By Subcommittee

Chairman Cummins and Senators Borah, Goff And West Vote in Favor of Administration.

AUTHORITY DENIED BY SENATOR KING

Will Submit Minority Report; Senate Probably Will Receive Report of Committee Monday.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, June 5.—Meeting in executive session today a majority of the special subcommittee of the senate judiciary committee—Senators Cummings, republican, of Iowa; Goff, republican, of West Virginia, and Borah, republican, of Idaho, and Walsh, democrat, of Montana—adopted a report upholding the legality of the order recently issued by President Coolidge, authorizing the employment of state or city peace officers as $1 a year federal prohibition enforcers.

The majority opinion will not be disclosed until it has been presented to the full committee on Monday and at the same time, Senator King, democrat, of Utah, the fifth member of the subcommittee, will file dissenting views.

Senator King's Views.

The Utah senator, it is understood today, has come to the belief that the executive order in "an unauthorized piece of executive meddling" which is "coercive in its nature," and tends toward the breakdown of state government.

On the other hand, his colleagues in their report, will assert, it is said, that the order is not only legal and that the president was amply authorized to issue it, but will cite a number of United States supreme court decisions in support of their contentions.

The report, according to information now available, specifically points out that it touched only on the legality of the order and is submitted without any theory as to the wisdom of issuing it.

REPORT TO SENATE EXPECTED MONDAY.

Washington, June 5.—(AP)—The senate judiciary subcommittee today divided four to one in upholding the legality of President Coolidge's executive order authorizing the employment of state officers as federal prohibition enforcement agents.

The subcommittee will make its report to the entire committee Monday, and Senator Cummins hopes to report to the senate on the same day.

LIQUOR IS ISSUE, DECLARES BUTLER.

New York, June 5.—(AP)—The liquor question cannot be avoided in the coming elections and evasion of this issue would spell state and national defeat for the republican party, in the opinion of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university and prominent republican.

In a statement left for publication after his departure for Europe, Dr. Butler asserted that the party which will win the next state and national elections is the one that can offer a solution for the prohibition problem.

"There is no use of running candidates for state offices in New York this year if the republican party puts a dry plank in its platform," he said. "If we have any idea of taking the issue away from Governor Smith we must present a solution. The prohibitionist is the only real friend of the liquor traffic. I am personally the driest of the whole lot, but I cannot and will not tolerate a candidate such as prohibition has imposed."

FRANCE TO REJECT DEBT AGREEMENT, BOUILLON ASSERTS

Declares France Cannot Consent To Terms Less Favorable Than Those Granted Italy.

TRANSFER CLAUSE CAUSES OPPOSITION

Senator Smoot Declares That U. S. Senate Will Wait Until Action Is Taken by France.

Paris, June 5.—(United News.)—The settlement of the French debt to the United States, concluded recently in Washington, unquestionably will be rejected by the French parliament, in the opinion of Franklin Bouillon, chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the chamber of deputies.

Bouillon said today it was his personal opinion that there was not "the slightest chance" of France approving the agreement reached between Henri Berenger, French ambassador in Washington, and the American commissioners. Bouillon's opinion is significant, not only because of his official position but because he generally is considered as sympathetic with the United States. In an interview today he gave three chief objections to ratification.

Gives Objections.

First, he said, France cannot accept treatment worse than that accorded one of her allies; therefore she cannot consent to the agreement unless she obtains at least the same terms as Italy received.

Second, France cannot be treated worse than Germany, wherefore she will insist that a transfer clause, similar to the one in the Dawes plan, be inserted in the debt agreement.

Third, Bouillon said, the clause whereby "order bills" are signed by France and handed to the United States must be abolished. These order bills are a kind of promissory note covering annuities which France is to pay the United States. He explained that the American government would be perfectly free to sell them in the open market. Thus, any nation which bought them would be in a position to hold a "financial pistol" at France's head.

SENATE WILL WAIT ON FRENCH ACTION.

Washington, June 5.—The senate will wait until France ratifies the debt settlement negotiated recently with this country before it takes up the agreement.

If the French parliament takes no action before congress is ready to adjourn, the settlement will go over until next session. This policy was announced today by Senator Smoot, of Utah, chairman of the finance committee, when he was informed of the prediction made by Franklin Bouillon, chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the French chamber of deputies, that there is not the slightest chance that the French parliament will ratify.

New Stars Coming For Annual Season Of Musical Comedy

First of Principals for Eight Weeks of Light Opera Already in City.

Principals of Atlanta's own permanent comic opera company, which will open its season June 21 with "The Chocolate Soldier," will assemble early this week on the stage of the Atlanta theater ready for two weeks of diligent rehearsals before the premiere. Already Lou Powers, the comedian, has arrived, and Miss Mary Leila Patterson, one of the sopranos, has been in the city for a week.

Louise Hunter, prima donna of the company, who did so much to make the first season an artistic success, will arrive today with her mother. She will have a splendid opportunity in "The Chocolate Soldier."

Very Myers, the ingenue and understudy for leads, who will have prominent roles in almost every production, will arrive later in the week. News that she has been added to the company will be of special interest to all who saw her in two seasons' productions of "Sally," at the Atlanta theater. She played the title role with rare skill, danced like a fairy, and sang exceedingly well. She and Lou Powers, having played together for several seasons, are expected to add greatly to the finish of the performances.

New Favorites Coming.

Arthur Burckley, principal tenor, and Louis Templeman, leading baritone, are expected to become tremendous favorites, judging from their past successes. Both were born in St. Louis, both have had years of experience in comic opera and musical comedy, and both are familiar with every role they will sing in Atlanta. Mr. Burckley has a repertoire of 116 light opera and 12 grand opera roles at his command, has sung the leading tenor parts in "Irene," "Mme. Pompadour," "Blossom Time," "Wildflower," and others, and was a great favorite in the St. Louis municipal light opera organization. Mr. Templeman began his career as choir boy, did his first professional work with a little road company doing the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, and was given a three-year contract by Henry W. Savage, most successful producer of comic opera in America. He went to England with "The Lilac Domino" company; came home to play the lead in "Rose Marie" in New York, and last season led the "Captain Jinks" company on its tour. He is a baseball fan and a crack golfer.

Miss Anne Yago, contralto so popular last year, will return to sing several prominent roles. One of the most important will be Alan-a-Dale in "Robin Hood," with its famous air, "O Promise Me."

Miss Mary Leila Patterson, a Griffin girl who has been studying several years with Estelle Liebling in New York, and who left a good part in "Countess Maritza" for an opportunity to play in Atlanta, will be cast for a number of good singing parts, including Mascha in "The Chocolate

Vera Myers, 'Sally' Star, Coming Here

Charming Dancer and Singer To Play in Musical Comedy Favorites.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Vera Myers is coming back to Atlanta.

To those of us who remember this charming little lady with the sparkling, bubbling, effervescent personality, that is just about the best news to be found in a week of newspaper study.

For Vera Myers is a star of the light opera who has won the heart of half a continent. She is coming here as one of the principals of the summer light opera season which is to run for eight weeks, beginning Monday night, June 21.

Miss Myers perhaps is remembered best in Atlanta for her work in the title role of Ziegfeld's "Sally," which she played here two seasons. She has played in other productions which have visited Atlanta, including the Pavlowa Russian ballet, in which she was a featured dancer.

Miss Myers is one of the greatest solo dancers who has ever appeared on a local stage. She also is the possessor of a charming voice. It is, however, her delightful personality which projects itself over the footlights and warms the hearts of all

MINISTERS APPEAL FOR D. A. V. FUND

Church Congregations Today Will Hear of Urgent Need for Convention of Injured Veterans

An appeal for aid in completing the $35,000 fund for entertainment of the Disabled American War Veterans' convention here June 21-26, will be made this morning from pulpits of many Atlanta churches.

Practically every pastor in the city will speak to his congregation regarding the fund in an effort to stimulate greater interest in the campaign now in progress.

At a recent meeting, attended by representatives of civic clubs and civic government, prominent citizens and Atlanta ministers, the latter group offered to take the appeal before their congregations.

Mayor Walter A. Sims, who has been active in the movement, attended this meeting and was one of the principal speakers. Mr. Sims pointed out that the $35,000 fund represented much less than "$1 a man" and said what Atlanta should do everything in its power to make this meeting of veterans the greatest in their history.

Between 5,000 and 8,000 members of the organization will come to Atlanta to take part in the convention, which lasts for six days.

FIVE BIG NATIONS ARE NOW INVOLVED IN KRIM'S AFFAIRS

United States, England, Italy, France and Spain Are Interested in Riffian Fall.

BY LORIMER HAMMOND.

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Tangier, Morocco, June 5.—The United States, England, and Italy, as well as France and Spain, are becoming involved in a ticklish international affair through the fall of Abd-El-Krim and his recognized Riffian republic.

The North African representatives of all five of the powers are keeping the wires hot with official code telegrams between Morocco and their respective foreign offices.

The trouble hinges on the likelihood of Spain—backed up by Italy—forcing the powers to hold an international conference on Morocco—a conference which is equally unwelcome to England and France, both of whom are anxious to preserve the status quo.

America Interested.

I have learned through a semi-official source in Tangier that the American state department has anticipated such a development for several months and has studied the Morocco tangle intensively with a view to deciding whether the United States will participate in the conference.

I am also informed through the most reliable channels that the English foreign minister, Sir Austen Chamberlain, is expected to take the earliest opportunity to make a public statement defining the official attitude of the British government. The British diplomatic agent, Mr. Clive, who has been in London for some weeks, conferring with the foreign office, will return to Tangier Tuesday.

The official Italian press is growing more and more insistent that the North African affairs shall not be settled without consulting the Mussolini government and the Italians reiterate the theory that the apportionment of the territory known as the Riff shall not be concluded unless the question of the future control of the city of Tangier is reconsidered at the same time.

Stand of Italy.

The Italian stand is based upon the idea that Italy is a great and growing nation whose natural interests center around the Mediterranean. Therefore anything done by any other nations on the shores of the Mediterranean concerns Italy primarily and it must insist upon having something to say about it.

Since whoever is on the Riffian coast is on the Mediterranean coast, Italy indirectly will claim a voice in the settlement of the future control of the Riff.

Acording to the interpretation of diplomatic circles here, Spain is motivated by three different desires: First, to obtain the punishment of Abd-El-Krim and other Riffian leaders; second, to clear up the report than Spanish prisoners were murdered in the Riffian prison camps while the French prisoners were not abused, but were housed, clothed and were not forced to work; third, a desire to have the important city of Tangier included in the Spanish zone of Morocco.

As far as Abd-El-Krim is concerned, the Spanish declare he originally was a Spanish subject and therefore should be handed over to Spanish justice for trial as a rebel. Against this the French say that technically Krim ceased to be a pretender to Riffian leadership when he sought French protection as a private individual, at the same time renouncing his political claims.

POSTOFFICE BUILDING PROGRAM ANNOUNCED AT $19,000,000 COST

APPEAL TO RETURN BROOKHART MADE BY SIX SENATORS

Senate Farm Bloc Members Make Unprecedented Appeal to Iowa Voters In Primary Monday.

MESSAGE IS AIMED AT ADMINISTRATION

Appeal Raises Question of Future Attitude of Regular Republicans Toward Signers.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, June 5.—The national importance of the primary election Monday in Iowa, in which President Coolidge and his administration constitute the direct issue, has been emphasized further here by the almost unprecedented appeal for Brookhart's nomination sent to the voters of Iowa on the eve of the contest by six western republicans with whom the Iowa senator voted when he was here.

Five of these senators are republicans, but they have consistently opposed the administration. Norris and Howell of Nebraska, Frazier and Nye of North Dakota, and La Follette of Wisconsin. They are joined by Shipstead of Minnesota, farmer-labor member. All belong to the senate farm bloc.

The proclamation to the voters of Iowa, in addition to declaring that Brookhart was deprived of his seat illegally, sets forth that the result of the primary Monday will have "an enormous influence upon the determination of great public questions," and will be accepted here as "an expression of the attitude of the people of the great central west toward the question of farm legislation."

Appeal Startles Leaders.

The appeal indicates just what the anti-administration group in the senate regards is at stake. It startled administration leaders, who are pinning their hopes on the nomination of Senator Cummins. There is the possibility that it may react unfavorably for Brookhart. At least it will solidify the Cummins forces.

The proclamation was aimed at the administration for its stand on farm relief and other measures, and at Senator Butler, of Massachusetts, chairman of the republican national committee and chief lieutenant of Coolidge in the senate, for his part in ousting Brookhart from the senate.

It raises the question of the future attitude of regular republican leaders toward the five republicans who signed it. Four republicans, Brookhart, the late Senators La Follette, of Wisconsin, and Ladd, of North Dakota, and Frazier, were ousted two years ago from the party ranks for their part in the last presidential campaign against Coolidge and for La Follette. Some such step may be taken against the five republicans who signed this proclamation.

Nation's Eyes on Iowa.

"The eyes of the nation are upon the primary election to be held in Iowa on Monday," the proclamation states.

"The undersigned desire to call the attention of the people of Iowa to the fact that wholly apart from the results within the state, of which the people are the best judge, the result of the primary Monday will have an enormous influence upon the determination of certain great public questions now hanging in the balance at Washington.

"Above all, the primary will be regarded as a test of the assumeed right of the United States senate to override the statutes of a sovereign state and to expel from the senate a member duly elected under the laws of his state by a majority of the ballots legally cast in an election.

Unseating Illegal.

"The unseating of Senator Smith W. Brookhart was in deliberate violation of the laws of Iowa and in defiance of the will of the electorate as it was solemnly expressed at the polls.

"This unprecedented action raises an issue greater than any man or any political organization. Iowa will decide Monday whether or not that action is to receive the stamp of public approval and to stand as a precedent for the future.

"Senator Brookhart was a brave, able and faithful member of the senate. In the courageous discharge of his duty here, in the service of his state, he incurred the lasting enmity of certain powerful interests.

"The people of Iowa shoud also know that the action they are to take Monday will be accepted at Washington as an expression of the attitude of the people of the great central west towards the question of farm legislation. The nomination of Senator Brookhart will convince the country that the farmers can no longer be deceived by mere gestures from Washington and that their just rights and interests cannot safely be trifled with."

Mrs. Felton 91 Years Old NextThursday

First Woman United States Senator To Spend Day Quietly.

Cartersville, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—Mrs. Rebecca Latimer Felton, first woman to serve as a member of the United States senate, will observe her ninety-first birthday next Thursday, June 10. The day will be passed without any special celebration on the part of this venerable Georgian, who lives an unostentatious life at her home here.

Mrs. Felton, long prominent in Georgia affairs because of her outspoken stand on questions of import in the state at times when women were supposed to be seen and not heard, was appointed United States senator in October, 1922, by Governor Thomas W. Hardwick to succeed Senator Thomas F. Watson. Mrs. Felton took the oath of office and made a brief speech as a member of that august body. She was succeeded by Senator Walter George.

Mrs. Felton is a native of DeKalb county and rode upon the first train that entered Atlanta over the Georgia road from Augusta. The town at that time contained only one building. Later her father lived on the site where the Aragon hotel now stands.

Marrying Dr. William H. Felton, the couple moved to Cartersville, where she has since resided. She and her husband taught school several years in Bartow county. Later when Dr. Felton announced as a candidate for congress, his wife created a sensation by stumping the district for him. The sight of a woman making a political speech was something new in Georgia.

Mrs. Felton was among the first persons in the state to champion "votes for women," and lived to see not only the right of the ballot extended to her sex, but enjoys the honor of being the first and only woman to become a member of the highest legislative body in the United States. She was also active in the cause of temperance, and stumped the state one year for the cause.

Several grandchildren, the sole survivors of Mrs. Felton's family, will be with her upon her ninety-first birthday.

Mrs. Felton is still very active, and takes a keen interest in public affairs.

STRUCK BY AUTO, GRID STAR HURT

Justus, of Oglethorpe, May Never Play Football Again—Eight Others Injured in Crashes.

Dewey Justus, Oglethorpe gridiron star and vice president of the senior class for next term, was struck down and seriously injured Saturday morning by a speeding automobile as he attempted to cross Peachtree road near the school campus. The driver of the machine did not stop. Justus' right leg was broken above the knee and it is feared he suffered internal injuries.

Another accident Saturday which came near claiming a life occurred when four youths were thrown from the touring car in which they were riding when it collided with a heavy truck at the intersection of Bankhead avenue and Chestnut street.

Justus, who for three years played tackle on the Oglethorpe team and who is one of the school's most popular students, probably will never be able to play football again, doctors at Grady, where the boy was taken after being given first-aid treatment at base hospital No. 48, said. Justus attempted to cross Peachtree road when fellow students said a speeding automobile struck and dragged him for more than 50 feet.

Jorn Ballard, 19, of North Inman, who was driving one of the machines which figured in the Bankhead avenue-Chestnut street crash, escaped with

38 U. S. BUILDINGS PLANNED FOR YEAR BY POSTAL HEADS

Indorsement of Schedule Must Be Obtained From Congress Before Funds Can Be Expended.

SOUTHERN CITIES TO BE BENEFITED

Savannah, New Orleans, Birmingham and Memphis Are Among Points Included in Program.

Washington, June 5.—(AP)—A $19,000,000 federal building program for this year with provisions for 57 cities was announced today by Secretary Mellon as the first step under the $165,000,000 public buildings law recent enacted.

First attention was given to cities in which congress authorized new structures in the last public buildings bill, passed in 1913 but which, due to increased construction costs, were not completed for lack of funds.

In addition, the first year's program calls for appropriations for the purchase of sites for buildings at Chicago and Pittsburgh at costs of $3,975,000 and $12,050,000, respectively. Sites also would be procured for buildings in Des Moines and Montclair, N. J., and in 13 cities in which structures were authorized in 1913.

Congress Must Act.

The program will be forwarded to congress immedately for the necessary appropriation so work may be started soon after July 1.

Provision is made for starting construction of buildings in 35 cities on the 1913 list. It is planned to have all of the 1913 program completed within three years.

The new law authorizes appropriation of $15,000,000 to complete the old program, $50,000,000 for buildings in Washington and $100,000,000 for structures in other cities.

The first year's program calls for the appropriation of about $6,500,000 for cities in which buildings already have been authorized, $6,000,000 for buildings in Washington and $6,500,000 for the purchase of land in various cities.

Survey Is Planned.

Funds will be sought also with which to make a survey of the country before the program for construction under the $100,000,000 appropriation is mapped out. A. E. Whetmore, supervising architect of the treasury, and officials of the postoffice department, will direct this survey, and it is planned to have it completed in time for presentation to congress in December.

Under the new law only $25,000,000 may be appropriated in one year. More than 100 cities are expected to benefit by the complete program.

The $50,000,000 program for Washington provides for a $10,000,000 home for the department of commerce, a $6,000,000 archives building, a $7,050,000 internal revenue bureau building, and office building for the department of agriculture and additions to some of the present government structures.

Sites have not been selected but it is the plan of the fine arts commission that buildings shall be built on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue between the capitol and the white house.

List Not Complete.

To clear up a misunderstanding in some quarters as to what the treasury and postoffice departments intended to do in the way of new buildings, Secretary Mellon in a statement tonight reiterated that the list made public today was not a complete one.

"The postoffice department," he

Strut With Seminary Shebas

BY LOY WARWICK.

This college life—particularly these commencements!

One wonders, one does, what commencement really means, after all. Can it be that it has something to do with a fellow getting a diploma, degree or something on that order?

Or does it mean that he commences dancing one night about 10 o'clock and doesn't quit until a week later, when the governor commences to get on his ear and commences to come up and get him if he doesn't come home?

Commencement is really something else again. Right now Tech commencement is "going good." They say, better than ever before. Seminary Shebas and collegiates have gathered from far and wide for the grand and glorious annual shindigs. Thousands of college boys this week will be working harder than ever before pushing girls across ball room floors.

When Tech finishes commencing, Georgia will commence to finish, or something like that.

Take the Skull and Key dance Saturday morning if you don't believe this college life is the stuff. Butch Dearden, president of that sophomore organization, called the dance for 3:30 o'clock Saturday morning. Even at that, some were late. They would be, you know.

Imagine—dancing from 3:30 o'clock in the morning until about 7 o'clock in the morning. Fancy that! Don't try it, unless you've had a college education. To this, one of commencement's most important events, came about 200 college men, garterless, and more than half as many perfectly adorable, distressingly fetching blondes and brunettes.

There were probably twice as many at the senior hop, which took off at 10 o'clock Friday night and came to a close in time for the ladies to change costumes and the gentlemen to take another drink at the kitchen sink before the next round. The senior hop, like the Skull and Key ruckus, was gloriously successful. Many who danced this first one through from the initial wail moan of the well-worn saxophone to the last defiant bleat of the muted cornet, saw the sun rise as they stood eating wieners (all the way) on the roof of Garber's hall.

How they do it? Scientists, parents, chaperons, civic clubs and the chamber of commerce have failed to find out.

All night!
All morning!
All afternoon!
Breakfast!
Dinner!
Supper!

Saturday night was the sophomore dance. Monday night comes the Pan-Hellenic. In the meantime there have been and there will be tea dances, breakfast dances—in fact, it doesn't make much difference what!

College boys know how to throw a dance, too. The gymnasium was dressed up for the senior hop like a Moorish tent, with oriental rugs on the walls and all that. It was really well done. And when you stick one of those dances out, you don't go hungry. College boys think of little things like that. Hot dogs at 6 o'clock in the morning, after 8 hours or more of marathon running are more than delicious—they are necessary. And very few go thirsty.

Consider the case of the college boy; he has a hard time.

You were young once; so was your old man.

Sledd Makes Highest Mark

:: GETS "A" IN EVERY EXAM IN 4-YEAR COURSE ::

Ever Attained at Emory

Emory University, Ga., June 5.—(Special)—Making a grade of "A" in every course taken at Emory during his four years of study, Warren Candler Sledd, son of Dr. and Mrs. Andrew Sledd, of Decatur, will receive his bachelor of arts degree at the commencement exercises Tuesday with the honor of "suma cum laude," setting a mark in scholarship at Emory never before equaled in the history of the institution. Sledd entered Emory four years ago after having graduated from Decatur high school with the highest scholastic average of any one in that school. He is 20 years old.

In the history of Emory only about 11 men have graduated with the honor of "suma cum laude," a distinction which permits the aspirant to the honor making only about four "B's" and all the rest of his marks "A's." But of the 11 men who have previously made grades awarding them "suma cum laude," none have ever attained the perfect record of Sledd, who has never lost any credit points on account of absence, a few, however, coming within two or three points of perfect grades throughout their college courses.

During his career at Emory, Sledd was awarded the Reppard Greek medal and the H. Y. McCord Latin medal, offered each year to the student who makes the most brilliant record in Latin and Greek. His work in the classical languages has been exceedingly scholarly, and he has gained recognition as one of the most outstanding Latin students who ever attended Emory.

Mr. Sledd has served during the year as president of the Alpha Epsilon Upsilon scholarship fraternity, highest scholastic body at Emory, which is petitioning the national scholastic fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa. He has also been actively connected with the Decatur Epworth League, of which he is president, and is a prominent member of Few Literary society, having held the office of chancellor in that organization. Sledd is, besides a musician, being talented on the piano.

After receiving his degree from Emory, Sledd will enter Duke university, where he has been honored with a scholarship, and will there study for his master of arts degree. Later he intends to enter Yale and work for his doctors degree in the classic language.

WILKINS LEAVES FOR FAIRBANKS

BY FREDERICK LEWIS EARP.
Special Correspondent The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.
(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution.)

Fairbanks, Alaska, June 5.—Captain George H. Wilkins, Major Thomas G. Lanphier and Charles N. Wiseley of the Detroit Arctic expedition hopped off from Point Barrow for Fairbanks at 11:20 o'clock this morning.

The monoplane Detroiter must undergo repairs before it can make the polar ice flight in search of new lands.

The explorers flew to Barrow from here May 8. Bad weather held the plane at the Arctic settlement until four days ago and when the clouds began to lift it was found that the motors of the ship were not functioning satisfactorily.

The return of Captain Wilkins does not mean abandonment of the expedition into the unknown ice, but it may mean a delay of several weeks. More aviation fuel must be delivered at Point Barrow and this can only be taken in adequate quantity when ships reach there in July or August.

NEW STARS COMING FOR ANNUAL SEASON

Tyler Leading Basso.

Francis J. Tyler, leading bass singer, is a veteran of the Henry W. Savage companies, having sung in "Mme. Butterfly," "The College Widow," "Her Little Highness," and other productions. He appeared in Atlanta in the Mozart operetta, "The Impresario," and in the English version of "Mme. Butterfly," and has more than 80 roles in his memory.

William McLeod, tenor, who played the English "chappie" parts so well last season and who was found capable in various types of characters, returns this year. Leslie McLeod, his brother, a young tenor who has been a great radio favorite in the east and who gained his experience in the Castle Square Opera company of Boston, will be used for numerous parts.

Leonard White, an Atlanta boy, will be the leading male dancer of the season. He was with the Metropolitan opera ballet all winter, where he gained valuable experience. For several weeks he has been at work with the ballet here, practicing special dance features. The ballet, composed of Atlanta girls, all of them having had long professional training, will be a feature of this season's productions.

The chorus, composed of Georgia girls and young men trained in Atlanta, and the ballet, will total 52 persons, twice that of the usual road company presenting musical comedy.

Stage and Business Officials.

Unseen by the audiences, but nevertheless of first importance in making the productions a success, will be Charles Berton, the musical director, and his assistant, Maurice Bernhardt; Lew Morton, the stage director, and Fred Palmer, stage manager, both returning from last season; and Lewis Hanse, for years manager of the Atlanta theater, who has undertaken the management of all business affairs for the summer season. He will be in charge of ticket reservations and sales and virtually all dealings with the public. Aime Gerber, who was assistant manager last season, will continue as the New York representative of the company.

Already season reservations have run well into the hundreds, many patrons taking blocks of from six to ten seats for the performance of their choice. They are being filled in order of acceptance.

The box office for sale of tickets for the first production, "The Chocolate Soldier," will open at the Atlanta theater on Monday, June 14, a week in advance of the opening.

Performances will be given every night in the week, with the bill changing every Monday for eight weeks. In addition to the Saturday matinee given last season, a special popular-priced matinee will be given every Wednesday, at which all orchestra seats will be priced at $1; balcony seats 75 cents, and gallery seats 50 cents.

Price of Seats.

The price schedule for all night performances and the Saturday matinees has been fixed as follows: First eleven rows orchestra, $2; remainder, $1.50. First four rows balcony, $1.50; next four, $1; remainder, 75 cents. All gallery seats, 50 cents. There will be no war tax added to these prices.

Members of Ballet.

Chorus girls: Martha Anderson, Vivian Bryant, Mary Cunningham, Mabel Dumas, Velma Hollingsworth, Elizabeth Jennings, Trumie Johnson, Imogene King, Olga Lester, Gladys Lipscomb, Margaret Merrell, Margaret Morgan, Edith Nelson, Margaret Newman, Christine Sinclair, Dorothy Springer, Dorothea Taliaferro, Ruth Thomas, Elise Wall, Madeline Ward.

Chorus men: John Bailey, Henry Bradley, George Butler, George F. Dowman, Clyde Dudley, Kenneth B. Edwards, Jack Haddock, Walter C. Herbert, Alfred C. Lawton, Jack Lovette, M. H. Millard, S. Walton Peabody, W. C. Pearson, Marthame Sanders, Russell H. Stokes, Frank D. Torbert, William Wilkerson, Shaffer B. Wimbish, John Wrigley, E. W. Wilson.

Atlantan in Upper India Writes of Strange Customs

Miss Vera Milner, former Atlantan, now teaching in India, writes interestingly of customs and manners of natives of that strange land.

Interesting sidelights on life in upper India are found in a letter received by the Saturday Bridge club of Atlanta from Miss Vera Milner, former teacher in the Pryor Street school, who is now spending some time in India on leave of absence. Miss Milner is a member of the club and she gives a graphic description of customs and manners of East Indians. She is teaching in an American school at Naini Lal, located in the foothills of the Himalaya mountains.

In her letter Miss Milner describes the beautiful scenery, the majestic appeal of the Himalayas, the wonderful growth of rare flowers and the strange animal life of neighboring jungles. She also described the quaint methods used by newspapers in that country, told of the ceremonies attendant upon the visiting nobility and told of the part her grade in school played in the entertainment of a distinguished party of American educators.

Writing of some of the customs of the country, Miss Milner said:

"Yesterday afternoon one of the teachers and I passed a Hindu funeral. They wrap up the body in a cloth and place it on a plank. Then four men place it on their shoulders and go on with it. The family remains at home, with the exception of the oldest son. He has to light the fire which burns the body. If he does not light the fire the natives believe the dead person is kept out of heaven. With the body go some men who are paid by the family to sing as they walk. They also sing at weddings, so unless you go to the window and look you can't tell whether its a wedding or a funeral which is passing."

Miss Milner said she lived near a Hindu temple, where many people come to worship hour after hour. She added Hindus leave one tuft of hair growing on their heads so that when they die their gods will reach down from above and yank them into heaven by the hair.

"Every day we learn something more about these strange people," Miss Milner wrote. "They are certainly worth knowing and with all their strange ways they are a lovable people. They certainly think the white man is great. Every native you meet throws his hands up and 'salaams.' Salaam is their word of greeting for goodnight and everything else. Their language is a marvel to me. It is the most twisted up thing I can think of. Like we would say 'This hat belongs to my friend,' they say 'This hat my friend to belongs.'"

Miss Milner closed her letter with some personal messages to the bridge club, expressing the hope that she soon would see the members again.

VERA MYERS WILL COME TO ATLANTA

her audience, bringing tingly little smiles of pleasure round the tightest and straightest of lips. This perhaps is her chief asset.

In Second Performance.

She will play here in the season of light opera to be offered by the Municipal Opera association at the Atlanta theater beginning with the second week of the season, the week of June 28, and remaining for the seven weeks. She will not be in the cast of "The Chocolate Soldier," opening bill for the week of June 21.

in the same line, are rapidly reaching the city. Lou Powers, one of the stage's funniest men, who is to be the principal comedian, reached the city Thursday.

Louise Hunter, leading lady and "Atlanta's Sweetheart," will arrive early this morning. Miss Hunter comes straight from her latest triumphs with the Metropolitan Opera company and the concert platform. Her beautiful soprano voice is greater than ever, this year and, of course, her beauty and charm and vivacious loveableness is simply Louise Hunter—that is the utmost.

Miss Myers will appear first in Victor Herbert's "Her Regiment," which is the second production of the season, to be given the week of June 28. She will reach Atlanta for rehearsals about June 14.

MOVE PLANNED BY MINE OWNERS TO END STRIKE

London, June 5.—(AP)—The Sunday Express says it understands that the mine owners contemplate a sensational plan to combat state interference in the mining dispute. The plan is to dissolve the mining association, which is the owners' organization, and thus remove the only existent national negotiating body and force the miners' federation to negotiate by districts with the local mine owners.

The Express points out that the policy of district agreements has been consistently pursued by the owners and the motive of the new and remarkable move is that the owners believe the government is about to institute some sort of temporary state control of the mining industry. The owners stoutly oppose any state interference except in the shape of a subsidy.

Army and Navy Games Advanced To Earlier Date

Washington, June 5.—(AP)—Under a revised schedule of fleet operations the date for the 1927 army and navy exercises in Narragansett Bay has been moved up to May 16, with both the battle fleet from the Pacific and the scouting fleet from the Atlantic participating.

Previous plans had centered about the late summer or early fall of 1927, and the change leaves the war department with no special appropriation available for its share in the maneuvers. Troops stationed in New England and New York, supplemented possibly by national guard and organized reserve forces, will be available in May, however, and the army air service will have sufficient facilities available to permit a defensive air concentration.

Should either of the two giant navy airplane carriers, Saratoga and Lexington, be ready for active service, it appears certain that there will be a practical test of the offensive and defensive values of aircraft in coastal operations.

The new fleet schedule calls for departure of the battleship divisions, submarines and aircraft squadrons from San Diego area on February 19 for Balboa. Minor joint exercises with the army will take place during the transit of the Panama Canal. The fleet will reach Guantanamo March 15, to join the scouting fleet from the Atlantic, and the combined force will sail from Guantanamo April 23 for New York. It will leave New York May 16 for Narragansett Bay.

The final program for the army probably will not be worked out for several months.

POSTAL BUILDING PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

said, "has not had sufficient time to finish its study of the entire situation, and there remain 18 postoffices regarding which Acting Postmaster General Barlett is seeking additional information.

"It is the present intention of the treasury and postoffice departments to place the entire list of buildings under construction within three years, and to complete this portion of the building program as soon thereafter as possible."

New Appropriations.

The first year's program provides for the following additional appropriations:

Birmingham, Ala., additional office space, $325,000; Memphis, Tenn., extension to postal substation, $100,000; Paris, Texas, additional storage, $75,000.

The total costs of the Birmingham and Memphis projects, however, are estimated at $425,000 and $32,5000, respectively and the additional funds necessary will be asked for next year.

Cities in which buildings have not been previously authorized but for which appropriations will be asked for the purchase of sites for new structures and the amount of the appropriation include New Orleans, new quarantine station property, $30,000.

These are the cities in which it is planned to start work on federal new buildings this summer, if congress approves, with the estimated cost of the buildings and the appropriation which will be asked for this year's work:

several bruises about the head and on his knees. William McMillan, 14, suffered a dislocated knee and severe cuts and bruises. The other two occupants of the machine, Cecil Smith, 16, of 71 Bankhead avenue, and George Humphries, 17, of 23 Franklin street, were cut by flying glass and were seriously shaken up and bruised.

Young McMillan was rushed to Grady hospital in the private automobile of J. S. Blake, of 519 Griffin street, who was passing at the time. Doctors at the hospital stated that his condition is not dangerous. The other three boys were given first aid at Grady hospital.

According to statements by the boys, they were traveling north on Bankhead avenue and were making a left turn into Chestnut street, when the heavy truck rammed their car. They were thrown from the machine by the force of the impact and the car demolished.

Call Officers John H. Crankshaw and M. B. Cartwright are investigating the accident. The driver of the truck was Albert Cole, of 14 Emory street, according to police reports. A case of reckless driving was docketed against both drivers.

A fifth automobile accident victim for Saturday was Eva Gignilliat, five, of 205 Carroll street, who was brought to Grady hospital with a sprained and dislocated left shoulder and badly bruised knees. She is said to have been knocked down by an automobile. Doctors at the hospital were not told details of the accident and police have no report of it. The accident was said to have occurred almost in front of the child's home.

Radford Wood, 13, of 1 Bellwood avenue, was brought to Grady hospital Saturday afternoon from Maddox park. His left arm was broken at the wrist and his left ankle was broken, as the result of a fall from one of the sliding boards at the park. He did not tell doctors what caused the fall.

Mrs. L. M. Vickers, of Marietta, Ga., was seriously injured Saturday morning in a crash between a touring car and a heavy truck at Pryor street and Woodward avenue. The truck was operated by W. H. Young, of 27 Lowery street, and the touring car was driven by Henry Williams, a negro, according to Call Officers M. C. Williams and C. E. Ford, who investigated.

Mrs. Vickers received several cuts by flying glass and bruises.

J. N. Plymale, 38, of West Lake avenue, was treated at Grady hospital for cuts about the head and face, said to have been received in an automobile accident Saturday night. Plymale was allowed to go home after his injuries were treated. He did not tell doctors where the accident happened, and no report has been filed with police.

Blind Student Completes Law School Course

:: HUGH RATCLIFFE SELLS CONSTITUTIONS TO EARN WAY THROUGH SCHOOL ::

Through Selling Papers on Atlanta Streets

Although he was born blind, Hugh C. Ratcliffe, shown above at right, of Atlanta, has overcome almost insurmountable obstacles and will be graduated with honors Wednesday at the Atlanta Law school. He made his way while taking the course at the school by selling The Constitution. Ratcliffe won several prizes at the Atlanta Law school and made a high record for scholarship. In the picture he is seen discussing a legal question with Hamilton Douglas, head of the institution, at the left.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Always admirers of those of this land who achieve success after overcoming obstacles; of those who win out in life's battles despite handicaps, Atlanta citizens frequently are acclaiming the deeds of men and women in differents parts of the country who succeed after seemingly hopeless struggles against adversity.

Heretofore winners of this accolade have lived in distant parts, but now Atlanta has produced a young man who is entitled to all the praise in the power of this city to bestow, because of the amazing record he has made.

Hugh C. Ratcliffe, blind since his birth 22 years ago, will be graduated from the Atlanta Law school Wednesday, after winning some of the highest honors at that institution, after making a record in his studies equal to that of the best students in the school, and winning this success after working every day selling The Constitution for a living.

Unparalleled Record.

This record is without parallel in a southern school, in the opinion of Hamilton Douglas, head of the institution, who said Ratcliffe is one of the ablest men ever attending the Atlanta Law school. Ratliffe has completed his two-year course and will enter the practice of law in Atlanta at once.

During his term in the school Ratcliffe was forced to learn all his lessons through the sense of hearing. He prepared himself in his text-book studies, and in his case reports through the aid of a fellow student who read the lessons to him. Through his marvelous memory Ratcliffe retained the subject matter of the lessons in his mind and also memorized the leading points of the lectures. When he took his final examinations the questions were read to him and he wrote his answers on a typewrifer, using the touch system. His examination papers and his daily classroom record compared favorably with the ablest students in the school.

As a public speaker, Ratcliffe won several honors. He was selected as one of the three men to represent the Woodrow Wilson Literary society in its annual joint debate with the Kilpatrick society at the school, and his team won the debate. In the annual oratorical contest Ratcliffe won second prize, the winner receiving the gold medal offered every year as first prize.

Acted As Monitor.

When he first entered the Atlanta Law school Ratcliffe was selling The Constitution early each morning and the first editions of the afternoon papers up to noon each day, taking his law course after he finished this work. Mr. Douglas then arranged for Ratcliffe to serve as monitor at the school, which would pay him enough to permit him to give up the work of selling afternoon papers.

Mr. Douglas gave Ratcliffe a list of 80 members of the class to see if he could learn them so that he could serve as monitor. The blind young man memorized the list of names in a short while. He has called the list every day, and through a system of "blind" shorthand has kept a perfect attendance record for the school, presenting Mr. Douglas with a neatly-typewritten report at the end of every week. He has continued to sell The Constitution at his post on Peachtree street.

Being the son of a Methodist preacher, Ratcliffe has lived in many parts of Georgia. He was born at Davisboro, in Washington county. It is said that he can distinguish the outline of objects, but cannot read print. He got his early education in the school for the blind at Macon and later moved to Atlanta, where he began selling The Constitution.

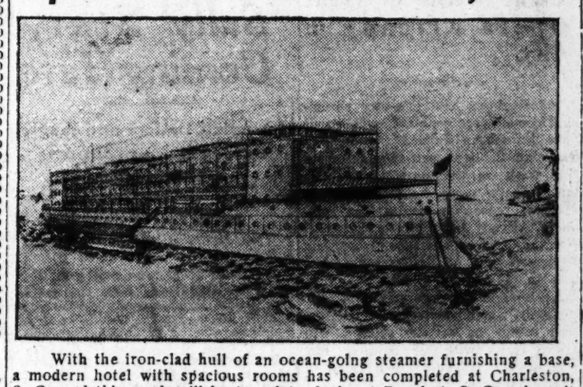

Confident of Success.

"I am going to practice law in Atlanta, and some day I hope to become a newspaper or magazine writer," Ratcliffe said.

"I don't look for any serious trouble in trying cases, as my system of shorthand will help me to keep absolutely in touch with a case from start to finish, and am sure I will be associated with other lawyers who will give me any assistance I need when I have to look up some law on short notice.

"I am deeply grateful for the cooperation I have received at the Atlanta Law school, and feel that I will be able to make good as a lawyer."

Floating Hotel Formally Opens Soon at Beaufort, S.C.

With the iron-clad hull of an ocean-going steamer furnishing a base, a modern hotel with spacious rooms has been completed at Charleston, S. C., and this week will be towed to docks at Beaufort, S. C., where it will be anchored and operated as a modern holstery.

A hotel, longer than a city block and built on the iron-clad hull of the U. S. S. "Amphitrite," will open at Beaufort, S. C., Saturday. It is not strictly a reconditioned battleship since its superstructure is entirely new and embodies everything modern in a luxurious hotel, yet the staunchness of the sturdy iron-clad is still there.

In the next few days the unique hotel will be towed from the Charleston shipyards to her beautiful anchorage off Beaufort, and for the next five months she will offer everything a fastidious guest may require of a thoroughly modern hotel. The adjacent beach and magnificent groves of magnolias and live-oaks is being made ready as an auxiliary pleasure ground for the guests, and tennis courts are being built to add to shore diversions.

Beaufort offers capital fishing and bathing and small boat sailing, and now for the first time she offers luxurious living accommodations of an entirely new and delightful kind.

The hull is slightly over 260 feet long by 55 feet across, and with this generous space the Marine Hotel company has planned generous quarters. The 80 rooms are not "staterooms," they are perfectly appointed master bedrooms. The ventilation has had particular attention and the mooring has been chosen to take all the advantage of the light ocean breeze.

The fullest tender service will give continual access to the shore and the telephone and telegraph facilities will be as prompt and complete as at any mainland hotel. Yet the Amphitrite, because of its unique situation, will offer the privacy and exclusiveness impossible elsewhere. The guests will be limited to two hundred.

The hotel's orchestra will be of young ladies chosen for their individual grace and talent.

Paul E. Wells, who has just concluded a successful season's management of the famous Tichfield at Port Antonio, Jamaica, is resident manager, and his chef will be the well-known Eugene Falco, of the Miami Country club and Nassau club.

TAXI DRIVER ROBBED AT POINT OF PISTOL

C. L. Crumley, taxi driver of 231 Bass street, was held up and robbed of $10 Saturday night at the end of Rogers avenue in West End by a well-dressed white passenger who was picked up at the Terminal station, according to police reports.

Crumley told Detectives L. H. Satterfield and W. D. McGee that he carried the bandit out Rogers avenue and asked for further directions.

"Don't bother about going anywhere, just stick up your hands like a good sport and keep your mouth shut," was the answer Crumley received while he looked down the barrel of a pistol.

Crumley was commanded to step outside, whereupon the bandit sped away in the taxi. A few minutes later the taxi was found abandoned on Gordon street near Atwood, a few blocks from the scene of the robbery.

Snatch Thieves Steal Woman's Entire Horde Of Money and Escape

Suffering from severe bruises about the knees and other injuries, Mrs. Fannie McArdle, an elderly woman, is confined to her home at 319 Fair street, as a result of being knocked down by two negro snatch thieves in front of her dwelling Saturday night.

The thieves obtained her pocketbook containing $2.25 and fled into the darkness. Policemen D. L. Taylor and Walter A. Goode stated the case was a pathetic one as this, all the money the woman had, was stolen and she had no money to purchase medicine to treat her injuries.

MASONIC 'CUE HELD AT LAKEWOOD PARK

Lakewood amusement park was thronged Saturday with more than 5,000 Masons and their families as guests of the Lakewood Masonic lodge at its annual picnic and barbecue at the park. Members of the Order of the Eastern Star served the 'cue from 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon until 9 o'clock Saturday night on tables installed in the automobile exposition building.

Committees of the Lakewood lodge prepared the feast and supervised details of entertainment. The barbecue was followed by a dance in the Lakewood park casino.

More than $1,000 was cleared for use in charities fostered by the Lakewood lodge, according to officials.

A number of officers of the grand lodge of Georgia were special guests during the day, including W. S. Richardson, grand master, and others. The Masonic barbecue is to be continued as an annual event at Lakewood.

HAYGOOD CHURCH TO BE DEDICATED AT SERVICE TODAY

The Haygood Memorial church, recently completed in Morningside, will be formally dedicated at services this morning at 11 o'clock. The edifice is at the corner of Highland avenue and Lanier street and the Rev. T. R. Kendall, a member of the Methodist conference for more than 50 years, is pastor.

The services will begin with a lecture to the men's Bible class by Colonel F. S. Hopkins. Mr. Kendall will deliver a brief sermon, which will be followed by short talks from members of the congregation who aided in the establishment of the church.

A splendid musical program has been arranged by F. F. Smith, the church chorister. Taking part in the program will be the Rev. Charlie Tillman and the East Side quartet.

Evening services will begin at 7:45 o'clock and the Rev. W. L. Pierce, presiding elder, will preach.

FORMER DRY CHIEF OF WISCONSIN GETS PRISON TERM

Milwaukee, Wis., June 5.—(AP)—Clark M. Perry, former federal prohibition director for Wisconsin was sentenced to three years imprisonment and fined $3,000 in federal court here today. Perry had previously entered a plea of guilty to a charge of conspiracy to violate the prohibition amendment.

SHORTER SERMON TODAY AT ROME

Constitution Bureau.

Rome, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—Dr. W. D. Furry, president of Shorter college, will preach the baccalaureate sermon for the Shorter exercises in the college auditorium Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. A special musical program has been planned.

The formal commencement program began Friday night, June 4, when members of the Dramatic club, under the direction of Mrs. Allie Hayes Richardson, presented "The Taming of the Shrew."

Following is the remainder of the program planned:

Sunday, June 6, baccalaureate sermon, Dr. Furry.

Monday, June 7, annual meeting Shorter Alumnae association, college parlors, 11 a. m.

Luncheon for visiting alumnae and officers, Coosa Country club, 1 p. m.

Class day, Maplehurst, 4 p. m.

Alfresco party for visitors, college campus, 8:30 p. m.

Tuesday, June 8, baccalaureate address, Dr. Robert Kelly, conferring of degrees, college auditorium, 10 a. m.

Postal Receipts Gain.

Rome, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—Postal receipts in Rome totaled $6,142.29 during the month of May, an increase of 4 per cent over May, 1925, when the receipts were $5,909.10.

During April practically a 3 per cent increase was shown, the total for that month this year being $6,808.28 and last year $6,632.24.

Mrs. Mary Barclay, postmaster, says that June promises to be an unusually good month, though with the exception of August, it was heretofore one of the lightest months in the year. Parcel post has been heavy during the first few days of June, she said. July is about the heaviest summer month.

SEARCHERS FIND BODY OF MISSING CONFEDERATE VET

Reidsville, Ga., June 5.—(AP)—The body of Joshua Lynn, 82, Confederate veterans, missing from here since last Saturday night, was found today about one-half mile from the home of Mrs. C. B. Collins. It had been thought that foul play was responsible for his disappearance but the coroner's jury returned a verdict to the effect that "Joshua Lynn came to his death from natural causes." The appearance of the body indicated death had occurred within the last 24 hours.

On last Saturday night a colored man was hired by Mell Jernagan to take "Uncle Josh," as he was familiarly known, to the home of Mrs. Collins. This he did, according to his statement, and left Mr. Lynn on the front steps. Mrs. Collins states that she was not aroused and was not aware of his arrival.

When it was learned that Lynn was missing search was begun by officers and citizens of the community but without avail until today.

It is believed here that the old man strayed away from the house in the darkness after his arrival last Saturday night and because of his feeble condition was unable to return or to give sufficient alarm to bring searchers to him.

HELD ON FORGERY CHARGE, WOMAN POISONS HERSELF

New York, June 5.—While en route to the police station to be locked up on a charge of forgery, Mrs. Mildred Shackheim asked the pardon of her captors for taking "a little medicine for what ails me."

Soon after she slipped a few tiny tablets from a bottle into her mouth, her rosy cheeks turned gray and she stared fixedly at the detectives.

"What was that you took?" one of the detectives asked.

"Oh, nothing but bichloride of mercury," she answered nonchalantly.

Little hope is held for her recovery.

8-YEAR-OLD BOY SERIOUSLY HURT IN WAGON FALL

Americus, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—Ernest Storey, aged 8, son of Henry Storey, a farmer of Thalean community, fell from a wagon in which he was riding late this afternoon, was run over by the heavy vehicle and sustained serious injuries. The accident occurred on the highway near the farm of Charles H. Burke, and the injured boy was brought here for treatment by Mr. Burke. A brother of the injured lad sustained a similar accident last year.

POSTAL FIGURES SET NEW RECORD

For the first time the Atlanta postoffice has passed the $300,000-mark in receipts for five successive months, exceeding this sum each month since 1926 began. Receipts during May, made public by Postmaster E. K. Large Saturday, were $301,092.27, an increase of $8,703.60 over May, 1925. Receipts for the first five months of 1926 are $152,575.62 greater than for the same period in 1925, this year's figures being $1,637,300.78 compared to $1,484,725.16 for last year.

Receipts for 1926 by months, follow: January, $338,041.12; February, $319,479.43; March, $354,893.30; April, $323,794.66; May, $301,092.27. For the same months in 1925, receipts were: January, $311,376.87; February, $278,829.40; March, $301,764.01; April, $300,366.21; May, $292,388.67.

FIFTY CITIES SHOW BIG POSTAL INCREASES.

Washington, June 5.—Postal receipts for 50 selected cities throughout the country during May totaled $28,546,638.46, an increase of $1,091,776.00, or 3.98 per cent, as compared with the same month last year, Postmaster General New announced Saturday.

Fort Worth, Tex., with an increase of 29.4 per cent, led the cities in the percentage of gain. Des Moines, Iowa, with an increase 21.15 per cent, was second and Baltimore, with a gain of 15.53 per cent, was third.

The next nine leading cities were as follows:

Jacksonville, Fla., 15.01 per cent increase; Dayton, O., 14.53; Kansas City, Mo., 11.78; Dallas, Tex., 11.69; Philadelphia, 11.19; Washington, D. C., 10.87; Detroit, Mich., 10.67; Pittsburgh, Pa., 10.64, and Hartford, Conn., 10.56.

Georgia Workers For Blind Meet Here This Week

Plans for the establishment of a Georgia commission for the blind will be formulated at the annual convention of the Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind next Tuesday and Wednesday at the Baptist Tabernacle. Workers from all parts of the state will attend the convention, it was announced Saturday by Paul Donehoo, Fulton county coroner, one of the leaders in the association.

Although no definite steps can be taken this year for the establishment of a state commission of the bind, since the state legislature will not convene again until 1927, it is planned to begin a definite program towards this object. It is pointed out that practically all states have blind commissions except Georgia.

One of the objects of this year's convention will be to broaden the work of the association and to interest a wider circle of leaders in civic and other walks of life. It is described by Mr. Donehoo as "opening the eyes of those who are not blind." In this connection one of the principal objects will be the prevention of blindness. Already the association has done considerable work in this connection and plans will be outlined to broaden the work. During the past year two classes for prevention of blindness were established in Atlanta schools and Mrs. Winifred Hathaway, director of the national committee for prevention of blindness, was brought here for a series of addresses.

A number of prominent speakers will address the convention. Mrs. L. F. Linn, who has been active in organization of blind associations for many years and who is now living in Atlanta, will speak. Mrs. Linn is interested in the establishment of a training shop for the blind in Atlanta and will address the convention in behalf of this object. The Rev. Marvin Williams, pastor of Wesley Memorial church; George D. Goddard, director of state rehabilitation, and Miss Beverly Wheatcroft, secretary of the state library commission, also will give addresses.

BEAVERS TO SPEAK TO BUILDING OWNERS

Chief of Police James L. Beavers will be the honor guest and speaker at the regular monthly social luncheon meeting of the Atlanta Association of Building Owners and Managers next Tuesday. The meeting will be held at the Ansley hotel at 12:30. His subject will be "Crime Prevention in Office Buildings."

The chief will give the skyscraper men pointers as to how to protect their tenants from sneak thieves, who have recently been making the rounds in office buildings.

Wife Helps Elect Hubby

"After having been in bed half the time for a year with severe pains in my right side over the appendix, stomach trouble and bloating, which the doctors seemed unable to reach with medicine, and advised operation as the only remedy, my nurse advised me to try MAYR'S, and its results have truly been wonderful, as I am now entirely well and strong, and at the last election worked hard to elect my husband." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy and druggists everywhere.—(adv.)

NEW BORDEN-WHEELER HOTEL TO OPEN SOON

Borden Springs, Ala., June 5.—(Special)—Sale of the famous Borden-Wheeler Springs hotel, together with approximately 2,600 acres of adjacent land, by B. C. Bass, of Clearwater, Fla., to Leon Prine, of Fort Meade, Fla., and Ivan E. Mackey, of Lakeland, Fla., has just been announced here. Consummation of this deal not only forms one of the largest realty transactions in this part of the state within recent years, but marks the passing into new hands of one of the most famous watering places in the south. The consideration involved is reported to have been in excess of $150,000.

The new owners, two widely-known and influential developers of Florida, already have placed a large force of men to work upon thoroughly remodeling the hotel, reconstructing the golf course and generally improving and beautifying the entire property. They have announced that the hotel will be formally opened on June 19.

The opening of the Borden-Wheeler Springs hotel will be marked by an ambitious program of entertainment. Among the features of the day will be a golf tournament, an open event, and a dance in the evening. One of the best orchestras in the south has been engaged to play during the entire season.

Mr. Mackey stated today that nothing will be left undone to make Borden Springs the most delightful recreation spot to be found anywhere in the south. He is concentrating especially upon a lavish entertainment program.

CONVICT MUTINEERS GO ON TRIAL TUESDAY

Roy Wilson and R. L. Travis, Fulton county convict mutineers, charged with murder in connection with the death on March 19 of Captain Pat P. Newsome, convict guard, will go on trial Tuesday in Fulton superior court.

Captain Newsome was shot and fatally injured in a mutiny of North Side camp convicts which resulted in the escape of three of the prisoners, Travis, Raymond Sisson and David A. Perkins. The trio was captured the day following the tragedy and returned to Fulton county and indicted on charges of murder.

Sisson was found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to be electrocuted, and Perkins was given a life sentence. Attorneys for Sisson have filed motion for new trial on which hearing is pending. Perkins has started his sentence.

In the trial of Perkins and Sisson, Travis, the "lone bandit" who terrorized Atlanta by his daring robberies, turned state's evidence and revealed an alleged conspiracy between the four convicts to mutiny and escape.

GEORGIA CHAPTER FURMAN ALUMNI IS CREATED HERE

The Georgia Furman Alumni chapter was organized at a meeting of Atlanta alumni of the South Carolina institution held at the Ansley hotel on Friday night. P. A. Wilhite, of Greenville, S. C., home of Furman university, executive secretary of the Furman Alumni association, attended the meeting and assisted in the organization of the new chapter.

B. P. Gambrell was elected president of the Georgia chapter, James A. Brown, and Major O. R. Horton, vice presidents, and F. K. Creech, secretary-treasurer. These officers are Atlanta men with the exception of Major Horton who is connected with the Riverside Military academy at Gainesville, Ga.

The alumni have twenty chapters in South Carolina and other chapters in most of the large cities, there being one in New York City and one in Washington, D. C.

President Gambrell stated that he had the addresses of over 100 alumni who live in Georgia, and would be glad to receive names and addresses of any former students of Furman who are now living in this state. All communications should be addressed to number 1338 Hurt building, Atlanta, Georgia.

NEW PIPE ORGAN TO BE INSTALLED AT LOCAL CHURCH

A large Moller pipe organ recently purchased by St. John's Episcopal church, College Park, has arrived and will be installed in the edifice immediately, it was announced Saturday by the Rev. Horace R. Chase, rector.

Repairs to the church, which was recently damaged by fire, have been completed and when the new instrument is installed a special service will mark the reopening.

SINGING BODY TO HOLD ALL-DAY MEET IN DECATUR

An all-day singing program will be conducted today at DeKalb county courthouse, Decatur, by the Stone Mountain Sacred Heart Singing Association, according to W. R. Williams, program chairman.

Hundreds are expected to take part and religious selections from the Sacred Heart hymn book, which was written in 1844 by Major B. F. White, of Louis county, Ga., will be featured. The program will begin at 9 o'clock and will continue until 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

FEDERAL TAX FUNDS DUE WITHIN 10 DAYS

The last date for payment of second quarterly income taxes for 1926 is June 15, only ten days off, Josiah T. Rose, collector of internal revenue for this district, pointed out Saturday.

"Taxpayers who have payments to make at the end of the second quarter should make careful note that the last day for such payments is June 15," Mr. Rose said. "The easiest thing for them to do is not to wait for the last day, but to make their payments within the next two or three days. By doing so, they will avoid the rush which generally comes on the closing day, and make things easier both for themselves and for this office."

MILLEN TO ATTEND SAVANNAH CARNIVAL

Millen, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—The Savannah water carnival committee visited Millen this afternoon in the interest of the 1926 water carnival to be held there July 5 and 6.

The committe was given an enthusiastic hearing and Millen and Jenkins counties will be well represented at this great affair. The queen from Jenkins county has not been selected.

6 CHILDREN DIE AS HOME BURNS

Tucson, Ariz., June 5.—(AP)—Six children trapped by flames, perished here last night when the home of Colletauo Villa burned to the ground while a frenzied crowd stood by powerless to render aid. The mother, her oldest daughter and a baby escaped.

The fire is believed to have been started by a fire from a stove.

The crackling of the flame awakened the mother, who attempted frantically to save her family, and who was forced to leave the blazing structure only after she had been badly burned.

BOY WHO SOUGHT FORTUNE AT SEA IS NOW SUCCESS

New York, June 5.—(AP)— Walter H. Ramsden, "a poor boy who went to sea for his fortune," and for 18 years rode the ships of the Cunard line as assistant purser and purser, was a passenger in a first-class cabin of the Cunarder Carinthia when she sailed today. And the fortune, once so far away, he admitted was by way of being achieved at last, due to an opportunity offered by an American business man.

Last year, when he was staff purser of the Berengaria, Ramsden was offered the position of British manager at Liverpool of a great American coal company by S. A. Wertheim, president of the company and a passenger of the Berengaria. Ramsden accepted and during the winter arranged for the shipment to this country of more than 50 freighters weighted down with Welsh coal. He was returning today from a weeks' conference with his president.

"After meeting so many American business men, who have made fortunes," said Ramsden, "I made up my mind that if ever one of them gave me a chance I'd take it and I might land too. I don't mind saying that I dined with Mr. Wertheim last night and if that isn't the whole story—what else could a poor boy who goes to sea for his fortune ask for? I'm satisfied."

Riverside Named As "Honor School" For Fourth Time

Gainesville, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—With three honor designations to its credit, Riverside academy, preparatory military school for boys here, has been named "an honor school of the United States" the the U. S. war department for the fourth year in succession. The announcement was made by Colonel Sandy Beaver, president of the academy, who received official advices from Washington.

The high rating given the school—four years in succession—a record unequaled by any other military school in the country, follows a rigid inspection by a board of army officers who visited the institution recently. Near-500 cadets from 25 different states and four foreign countries were registered during the past session and more than a hundred of these received diplomas at the close of the recent 19th annual commencement.

There are about 40 schools in the United States that are classed as essentially military institutions. An act of congress requires the war department to inspect these forty schools annually and to designate as honor schools the 10 which are found to be doing the best work.

Riverside won this designation in 1923 and was the first Georgia school to be ever so honored. It also won the designation in 1924 and 1925, and now, for the fourth time, in 1926.

CHARLES PONZI READY TO SERVE TERM IN PRISON

Jacksonville, Fla., June 5.—Broke and weary following his numerous and costly clashes with the law, Charles Ponzi, "get-rich-quick" artist, will return to Massachusetts next week to serve a term of from seven to nine years in the state prison there for his financial operations in 1920.

The decision of the New England courts in ruling that he must serve this sentence, coming on the heels of his conviction in Florida for violating the state law regarding business operating under declaration of trust, have proven too much for the diminutive Italian.

Ponzi is no longer the smiling little man whose speculative genius lifted him from the role of an obscure waiter to the luxury and comfort of a millionaire. Where he was always affable to reporters, he now is surly and irritable and refused to discuss his troubles.

Swedish Prince Sees Longing For Church Unity

New York, June 5.—(AP)—The striking evidences of church unity in the United States and the cooperative work done by them were praised at a luncheon today by Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden in an address before 250 prominent churchmen.

"Disruption and discord are merely superficial characteristics of the day," the crown prince said. "Who looks closely will find a deep undercurrent of longing for unity and cooperation."

Representatives of many creeds and denominations attended the luncheon. The part the crown prince took in the universal Christian conference on life and work last summer in Stockholm, of whose committee on arrangements he was chairman, was praised by several speakers.

Special services were held in the cathedral of St. John the Divine for the crown prince and the Crown Princess Louise. A reception to the "Vasa children" who last year toured Sweden, was visited in the afternoon by the royal couple, who then left to attend a dinner and dance in their honor in the home of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Baker, Jr., on Long Island.

ATLANTA INDUSTRIAL SHOW TO DOUBLE SIZE

The Industrial exposition, showing Atlanta-made goods, to be held in the auditorium next August will be twice as big as any former manufacturers' exhibit in Atlanta, it was promised Saturday by the committee which is at work on plans.

The exhibit space will be almost doubled by the use of the new annex to the auditorium and the corridors surrounding the main building. The backing of the chamber of commerce, the Merchants and Manufacturers' association and the Georgia Manufacturers' association is expected to fill every foot of it with exhibits. More than 800 factories in various lines are now operating in the Atlanta industrial district, and it is expected to have exhibits from at least 200 of them.

H. Y. McCord, Jr., of the McCord-Stewart company, has been elected chairman of the general committee representing the three organizations. Subcommittees on various details of plans will be named this week. Virgil W. Shepard, who conducted the show successfully for several years as a private enterprise, will have charge of the sale of exhibit space.

Atlanta's annual "merchants' week," which draws several thousand retail merchants to the Atlanta market every summer, will be held simultaneously with the Industrial exposition. Manufacturers and jobbers will invite these visitors to spend an evening at the exposition and learn of the scope and variety of Atlanta-made goods.

Exhibitors will be urged to install, when possible, moving machinery, showing actual processes of manufacture.

MILITARY HONORS AT BURIAL TODAY OF ATLANTA MAN

The body of Captain Frank E. Verner, U. S. marine corps, world war veteran and widely known Georgian, who died recently while attached to the marine barracks, naval station, Virgin Islands, passed through Atlanta Saturday en route to Oxford, Ga., where he will be buried today with full military honors.

Captain Verner was the son of James J. Verner, for years a well-known real estate operator of Atlanta. In 1906 Captain Verner entered the marine corps, enlisting as a private. After 20 years of service, including many active campaigns, he attained the rank of captain, which rank he held at the time of his death.

Captain J. M. Swinnerton, in charge of marine corps recruiting in the southeastern states, and Captain M. A. Willard, assistant paymaster, U. S. M. C., with a firing squad composed of members of the local marine corps recruiting station, will leave Atlanta early Sunday for Oxford to provide the military part of the funeral services. Captain Verner is survived by his wife, Mrs. Frank E. Verner, and three daughters. The services will be conducted from the residence of his sister, Mrs. Susie Budd.

$30,000 DAMAGE CAUSED AS SHIP SMASHES WHARF

New Orleans, June 5.—(AP)—When the steering apparatus of the United States shipping board steamer Hanover became faulty here today as the ship was moving up the Mississippi river, the vessel swerved sharply and crashed into a wharf near Third street. A steel shed was demolished for about 140 feet by the impact and more than 100 feet of the apron and wharf plunged into the stream. No one was injured. Damage was estimated to total between $20,000 and $30,000.

L. E. Nugent was seated with his back to the river shortly before the ship rammed the dock ten feet from his position.

"I was reading a paper when I heard the docks crackle and I saw the ship coming on top of me," related Nugent. "I didn't look again until I was a half block away."

CHAPEL AT YALE NOW NO LONGER COMPULSORY

New Haven, Conn., June 5.—Yale students today were administered their final dose of compulsory chapel.

The services conducted in Battell chapel by President Angell marked the end of 225 years of compulsory attendance. Hereafter the students may go according to the dictates of their conscience.

University officials, however, will not relax their efforts to get the students to chapel. Plans already are under way to form a religious body to be known as the Church of Christ.

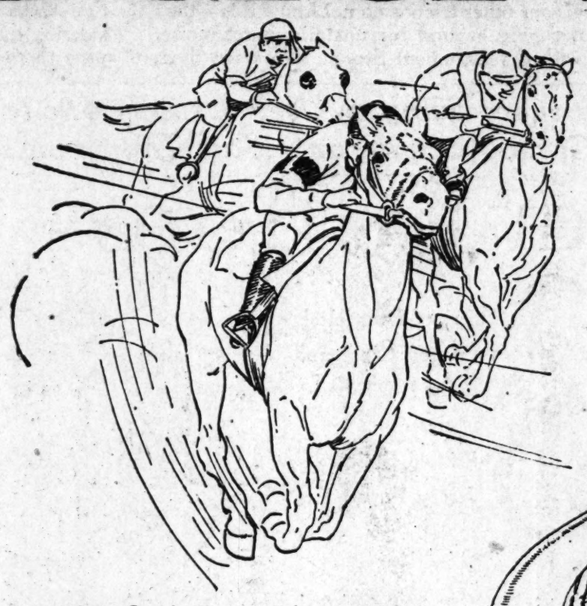

A 30-year fight led by the Yale Daily News resulted in the abolition of compulsory chapel by the Yale Corporation.

EDUCATION BOARD TO DISCUSS RULE CHANGES TUESDAY

Discussion of proposed changes in rules of the board of education, a proposal of Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president of the board, that the annual report of the superintendent and the school department be printed in book form and distributed to school officials, civic leaders and business men, and consideration of routine matters are slated to come before the board at the meeting to be held in the city council chamber Tuesday, it was announced Saturday.

There's a Real Thrill in The New

Budweiser

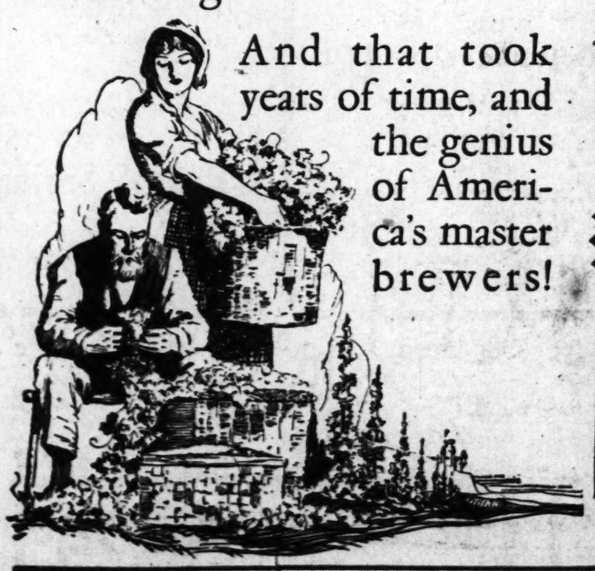

YOU'VE waited since July, 1919, for such a drink. SEVEN YEARS! for a real brew with thick, creamy head, full body and the rich, fragrant flavor of finest Bohemian hops and choicest northern barley. It's ready NOW at a near-by store.

THE minute you cascade your first glassful out of the bottle and raise it expectantly to your lips, you'll realize that The New Budweiser is as tempting a drink as any you knew in the good old days.

What a treat is in store for you! More life—more warmth—the thick, creamy head and full body you get only in a real brew. And a flavor so completely satisfying that it carries you back to happy pre-prohibition days.

Every mouthful of The New Budweiser proves how completely we have overcome the obstacles that arose during the last seven years. To us, each new obstacle has been a challenge and an opportunity, but before capitalizing our opportunities we had to perfect new and better methods of brewing.

And that took years of time, and the genius of America's master brewers!

The Fundamentals of

are the soluble substances of barley-malt, rice and hops. We have the pick of the finest imported Saazer hops and those of New York, Oregon, California and Washington; also the choicest barleys and rice American soil produces. Mississippi River water lends itself exceptionally well to brewing, because it brings out better the natural flavor of the cereals and hops. The result—

YOUR HEALTH!

For, before announcing The New Budweiser, we wanted to make sure that we had perfected a drink that would bring back good fellowship to America!

Not a Manufactured Product

The New Budweiser is not a manufactured product, but a real brew such as you thought would never again be found in America. There's nothing like it to top off the mid-day luncheon or that last sandwich just before you slip between the sheets for a good night's sleep.

You've waited a long, long time for such a drink. But it's ready now at a near-by store—in single bottles, in handy 12-bottle cartons and the 24-bottle case.

A phone call will bring it to your home for you to enjoy tonight.

Ring for it now—and whenever good fellows get together.

EAST POINT SEES BUILDING BOOM

East Point, Ga., June 5.—(Special.) East Point is in the midst of a building boom, according to a report compiled by the East Point Chamber of Commerce. The records at the city hall show that within the past two years, 200 homes have been built. At present the city has one high school and three grammar schools and bonds have been voted for the erection of a new school building which will be completed for the fall term.

The Upchurch Packing company has made a $10,000 addition to its plant; the R. O. Campbell Coal company has made an addition to its building on South Main street.

In a recent survey of the town, made by the East Point Chamber of Commerce, the weekly pay roll is set at $100,000. At present a number of dwellings are under construction and the Fairfax theater on Main street will soon be ready for occupancy. This building will also include two store rooms down stairs and a number of offices up stairs.

On North Main street, is located the beautiful brick veneer building, soon to be occupied by J. A. Ragsdale company, the Hudson-Essex dealers for this section. Next to this structure D. A. McDuffie is building a "drive through" filling station.

With the opening of the Piggly-Wiggly store here Saturday, marks the entry to East Point of one more chain store.

This year, according to the tax committee, the tax values will be around $5,000,000.

Deans Will Case Takes New Turn By Son's Action

Suit of Frank Deans, University of Michigan senior, against relatives of the late Robert E. Deans, wealthy Atlanta broker, to secure the Deans estate was withdrawn Saturday from the Fulton superior court and placed in the jurisdiction of the Fulton county ordinary's court.

Young Deans alleges that he is the son of the late Robert E. Deans and, therefore, is the only legal heir to the estate. His suit was filed by Horace Russell.

The transfer was made on the grounds that the court had ruled young Deans was the son of the late Robert Deans and that the youth was not notified of the probation of the Dean will. The youth claims that "undue pressure" was brought to bear by relatives upon his father and that no part of the estates was left him in the will, which already has been probated. A receiver has been appointed by the court to administer affairs of the estate until litigation is concluded.

The object of withdrawing the suit from the superior court and placing it in the ordinary's court is to nullify the probation procedure of the latter court and allow Deans to set up his claim in the court, it is pointed out.

PASTOR TO ANSWER IMPORTANT QUESTIONS

Rev. Will H. Houghton, pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle, will deliver a special series of Sunday evening sermons during June, in each of which he will seek to answer one of the great questions of life which many men of today are unable to solve. Tonight, opening the series, the question subject will be, "Why can't I believe what my parents believed?"

Rev. Houghton will also deliver a special series of studies on the epistles of Peter at the Sunday morning services and the Wednesday evening prayer services during the month.

REV. F. J. MASHBURN TO BE BURIED TODAY

Funeral services for the Rev. Frederick J. Mashburn, of 290 St. Charles avenue, who died suddenly Friday, will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from the home. Interment will be in West View cemetery.

The death of the Rev. Mashburn came as a shock to his friends and family, as he was apparently in good health early Friday. He had served in the North Georgia Methodist conference for 25 years, retiring several years ago. He was born in Decatur in 1865 and was a graduate of Emory university.

BANKRUPTCY REFEREE TERRITORY CHANGES

Changes relative to the reapportionment of territory for referees in bankruptcy and certain changes in the offices for filing suits as provided for under the act creating a new district in Georgia were announced Saturday afternoon by Fred L. Beers, deputy federal clerk in charge of bankruptcy division.

Mr. Beer's statement follows:

Under the terms of the act of congress approved May 28, 1926, all proceedings originating in the counties listed below are to be filed in the clerk's office at Atlanta, Ga., hereafter designated as the "Atlanta division," and not the "northern division," as heretofore. The counties are Carroll, Campbell, Clayton, Cobb, Coweta, Cherokee, DeKalb, Douglas, Fannin, Fayette, Fulton, Heard, Gilmer, Gwinnett, Henry, Milton, Newton, Pickens, Rockdale, Spalding and Troup.

All proceedings originating in the following counties are to be filed in the clerk's office at Rome, Ga., hereafter designated as the "Rome division" and not the "northwestern division," as heretofore. The counties are Bartow, Catoosa, Chattooga, Dade, Floyd, Gordon, Haralson, Murray, Paulding, Polk, Walker and Whitfield.

All matters originating in the following counties will hereafter be designated as proceedings in the "Gainesville division," such proceedings to be filed in the office of the clerk at Atlanta, Ga., until such time as a clerk's office will be opened at Gainesville, Ga. The counties are Banks, Barrow, Dawson, Forsyth, Hall, Habersham, Jackson, Lumpkin, Rabun, Stephens, Towns, Union and White.

This act provides for terms of court to be held in the Atlanta division second Monday in March and first Monday in October; in the Rome division third Mondays in May and November; in the Gainesville division fourth Mondays in April and November.

A corrected list of referees in bankruptcy for the northern district and their territory is as follows:

Harry Dodd, Atlanta, for counties of Fulton and DeKalb.

George D. Anderson, Marietta, for counties of Cobb, Cherokee, Pickens, Gilmer, Fannin, Dawson, Union and Milton.

Barney J. Mayer, LaGrange, in and for the counties of Coweta, Troup and Campbell.

RAILROAD ROMANCE FEATURE AT ALAMO NO. 2 THIS WEEK

"The Iron Horse" at the Alamo No. 2 Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

How the express business followed the transcontinental railroad, expanding commerce and extending civilization into the west, is recorded with remarkable realism in the William Fox picture, "The Iron Horse" showing at the Alamo No. 2 theater Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

And it is shown too, how express was shipped before the railroad crossed the prairie, when Kit Carson rode one horse steadily, day after day, for 4,000 miles. The little animal became so shy of Indians that he would leave the ground at sight of a feather. But Carson got through with government mail, small express packages and money.

The express commenced transcontinental business with the completion of the railroad in 1869. William F. Harnden had commenced the first express business between Boston and New York on March 4, 1839. In 1840 Alvin Adams established his express service. Wells Fargo first had the pony express with Buffalo Bill Cody as their chief rider.

With the opening of the railroad, the express business became one of the most important and the most picturesque in existence. Express guards worked across the plains with their guns always in reach. Many a good man died in defending his little wooden car from attack from Indians and bandits. They asked no quarter and gave none.

"The Iron Horse" reveals the thrilling life of this period of American history with telling effect. George O'Brien, J. Farrell MacDonald, and Madge Bellamy have the leading roles. John Ford is the director.

For Friday and Saturday, Buck Jones in his very newest western picture "The Desert Price" will be shown, on the same program with Buck Jones will be a new Andy Gump comedy.

Last Services Today For Tracy L. Ewing, Atlanta Electrician

Funeral services for Tracy L. Ewing, 40, of 491 State street, who died Friday at a private hospital after an attack of appendicitis, will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the chapel of Greenberg and Bond. The Rev. Russell K. Smith will officiate and interment will be in West View cemetery.

Pallbearers will be R. H. Cleveland, S. H. Browning, W. F. Woods, H. Dronk, Raleigh Drennan and William Zahn. Honorary pallbearers will be N. G. Harrison, S. S. Johnson, R. B. James, H. A. Allen, William Stinson, J. W. Thompson, Charlie Moyer, W. R. Grady, William Sanders, Jesse Willis and T. L. Frances.

Members of Battle Hill lodge, No. 523, F. & A. M., will have charge of services at the graveside.

Mr. Ewing was an electrician and was connected with the Cleveland Electric company at the time of his death. He was active in fraternal work and was a member of the Empire lodge, No. 147, Knights of Pythias, and Battle Hill lodge, No. 523, F. & A. M.

Old Guard Planning Trip To Sesqui-Centennial Soon

The Old Guard of Atlanta will be among the historic military organizations participating in the unveiling of the Georgia tablet as one of the thirteen colonies signing the Declaration of Independence, at the sesqui-centennial in Philadelphia, June 14. This famous old Confederate company which went to the front in the sixties with 65 men in ranks again will march with proud step and colors unfurled as one of the representatives of Georgia in that patriotic assembly of fighting men from the thirteen original colonies.

Governor Walker and his staff will be in line, and the Old Guard expects to have forty membes in ranks, under command of Major William M. Camp, Adjutant W. L. Hancock, Captain W. E. Hancock and Captain H. M. Lokey. The outfit will leave Atlanta Sunday morning, June 15, arriving in Philadelphia Monday morning.

The Old Guard will have in the national contest a rifle team of six crack shot, being composed of Colonel George S. Hope, Major J. O. Seamans, Captain J. E. Oxford, J. E. Barnett, R. L. Boutell, A. D. Barber These men participated in Seagirt, N. J., rifle contests and have high scores.

The Old Guard has made more than one invasion on a "peace mission" to the north in the past and was received everywhere with ovations by the public as well as by historic military organizations.

Two members of the Old Guard who will be on the trip to Philadelphia are Major J. L. McCollum and Major W. E. McAllister, both men having seen service in the Confederate army as charter members of the guard.

The Peace monument in Atlanta was sponsored by the Old Guard who unveiled the shaft in Piedmont park, honoring the brave men of all sections of the country, the occasion bringing many notable military commands from New England to the south.

Among past commanders of the Old Guard are Major J. W. Burke, Colonel George M. Napier, Colonel Fred J. Paxon, Captain Peter F. Clark, Major C. P. Byrd, Captain J. W. Murrell, Captain George M. Hope, Major Joseph A. McCord, and Major Wm. M. Camp, present commander.

FEDERAL GRAND JURY WILL CONVENE HERE

The federal grand jury for the northern district of Georgia will be in session the first half of this week. No cases of importance are scheduled to be laid before the jury, it was stated at the office of the district attorney Saturday, the list including only matters of minor interest.

Harbors Bill Faces Strenuous Fight in Senate

Washington, June 5.—(AP)—The rivers and harbors bill apparently faces even more strenuous opposition in the senate than it encountered in the house, which passed it yesterday.

Some senate opponents predicted today that the measure would not be passed at this session, certainly not in the form in which it came from the house where many projects were tacked on.

Explaining this action by the house today, Representative Sosnowski, republican, Michigan, said opponents of the bill had added many amendments with a view to running the total authorized appropriations up to such a figure that the bill would be out of harmony with the administration's financial program and would never become a law.

Describing the proposal as one loaded down with "cats and dogs," Senasin, said he proposed to fight it all along the line. He predicted that a number of the senators would take similar action.

Senator Ferris, democrat, Michigan, also said that he and other senators from states around the Great Lakes would interpose serious opposition because of the provision for diversion of water from Lake Michigan, a feature which caused much of the fight in the house.

An amendment to the measure was offered today by Senator Sheppard, democrat, Texas. It would authorize the deepening of the channel at Galveston by two feet so as to make the maximum draft 32 feet.

DUGGAN ARRIVES IN MARTINIQUE ON LONG FLIGHT

Port of France, Martinique, June 5.—(AP)—Bernardo Duggan, Argentine aviator, en route from New York to Buenos Aires, arrived here at 4:40 o'clock today from Basses-Tere, Guatalaupe.

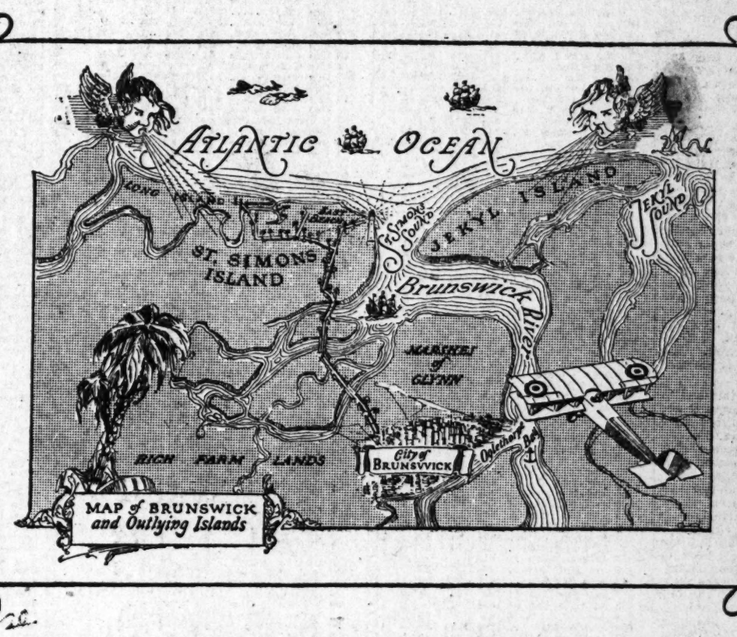

Dr. Carter Helm Jones Commencement Speaker At Numerous Colleges

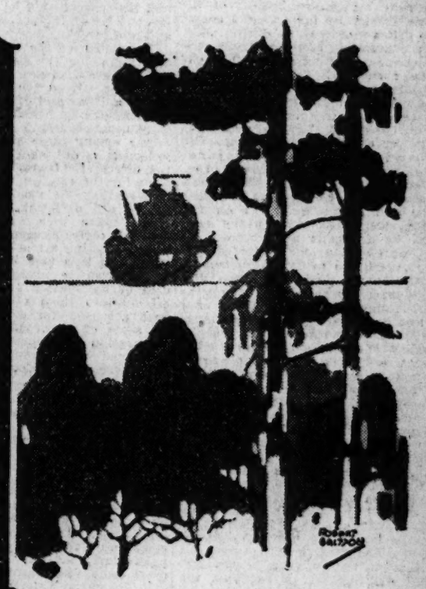

Dr. Carter Helm Jones, pastor of the Second Baptist church, will leave tonight for North Carolina to deliver the last of a series of commencement addresses at various southern colleges. Dr. Jones has delivered baccalaureate addresses and sermons at a dozen leading institutions within the last few weeks.

The Woman's Missionary and Benevolent Society, of which Mrs. Hal F. Hentz is president, will meet at the church Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, when Mrs. J. B. Young will speak on "Immanuel Mission." The Young Women's association will hold a postponed meeting and dinner at the church Friday evening.

Atlanta folks have rediscovered

BRUNSWICK

GEORGIA

Pullmans on fast trains leave Atlanta every night and arrive in Brunswick the following morning. Or, by motor, it is an easy day's drive over excellent roads and through delightful country.

In Brunswick—glorious, care-free days are in store for you.

Scores of Atlantans are already leaving for Brunswick and its environs, eager with the knowledge that here is relief from extreme heat—limitless diversion for the active—the majesty of Peace for those who prefer it.

In Brunswick—each year we welcome an increasing number of Atlanta folk, for the word is passing swiftly that this South Georgia pleasure ground is the vacationist's Utopia.

It is true that many of the Atlantans that journey each year to Brunswick are prominent in the Social Register. But as we have never been guilty of exploiting our hosts of summer and winter residents—those of limited means find living costs here surprisingly reasonable.

Brunswick is the ideal location for a summer or winter home. The climate is equable—the average summer temperature is 76, while that of the winter is 59 degrees. There are no mosquitoes, and hence there is no malaria.

The beaches of St. Simons, East Beach and Long Island..... The golf course at Brunswick.... Tennis courts. Shooting in the Salt Marshes of Glynn. Fishing. Here, indeed, is a veritable cornucopia of healthful, pleasure-giving amusement.

While land values are rising as people are attracted to this rich coastal country, there is still opportunity to secure home sites and large estates at prices which are well within the average means, and which are sure to advance rapidly.

The roll-call of Atlantans who could have invested in property anywhere in America—but who chose Brunswick and its adjoining beaches—constitutes the strongest evidence we could lay before you.

Strong Demand for Stocks Featured Market Session As Optimism Increases

Buying Was Generally Strongest When Prices Were Weakest, Says Expert.

BY C. H. PLATT.

New York, N. Y., June 5.—(Special.)—Following the extended holiday, the market had every appearance of wanting to advance, but on Tuesday, the banks chilled enthusiasm by shooting money up to five per cent and calling a number of loans. These factors had the wished-for effect that day, but the will to move was too strong, and the complete result of the week was a market of decidedly buoyant tendencies. There was a good strong demand for stocks of the best grade all the time, and while buying centered to a considerable extent upon the rails and oils, as it had done the week previous, there was great encouragement given to holders of the industrial issues by the splendid showing of these companies during May and accumulation of these shares was in progress with a better tone throughout the entire list.

Buying was strongest when prices were weakest, and every time there was brought any heavy pressure against the different issues, good buying power came in behind them. The confirmed optimists are being joined gradually by others who have been on the fence since the first of March, and the best character of trading, the most sound and substantial, was on the buying side. There were heavy payments in dividends and interest on the first of June and that was sufficient reason to explain high money, but the funds quickly returned and with them came a change in temperament. Around $300,000,000 were paid out and that amount of money changing places is enough to bring about considerable irregularity. Most market letter writers favored the up-side of the market and advices sent out by the most conservative houses were moderately bullish in tone for the present and immediate future. Whatever explanations may be offered, it is an undoubted fact that when everybody is bullish, stocks almost invariably go down, but there was a little break in this routine for once.

The news of the day was cheerful and some hopes have been built up that we will see a further reduction in taxes before the next presidential election. The fact that the president touched on this subject in his Memorial day address, strengthens the belief that the republican party anticipates carrying the next presidential election on the strength of this issue. Another Nickel Plate merger proposal is understood to be almost ready for submission. This time it is hoped that it will meet with the requirements and the demands of the interstate commerce commission. It is expected that when the first large railroad merger goes though, it will precipitate a number of others and bring about a boiling market in the rails. It is on the basis of this expectation that many traders are accumulating railroad shares to the extent of their financial capacity.

Costs of Operation.

We are unquestionably in a day of big business and closer control which, if ably handled, can greatly reduce the cost of operation with resulting lower prices for manufactured goods and higher value for the dollar. A few years ago in the oil industry it was customary for the big companies to fill their storage tanks in the winter time during which period little production was in progress. Then there came a time when there were a vast number of independent producers who found it to their advantage to put out all the oil possible just at the time when the big companies were storing. It is obvious that the present steps for the acquirement of producing companies by the refiners and distributors is for the purpose of bringing about some such control of output in the future as obtained in the past. Those in control of producing properties are farsighted enough to see the handwriting on the wall and are holding out for top prices for their properties. It is for this reason that the smart gamblers are absorbing the stocks of producing companies, and these facts make an oil boom almost inevitable.

The oil stocks were in good strong demand during the week although they started out rather slow. The statistics of the industry are all in favor of higher prices, the only unfavorable factor being the weather. The prices for crude and gasoline both advanced during the week in different sections, and it is generally believed that stabilization of production of crude at around 2,000,000 barrels daily is well in sight, despite the fact that South American production is coming to the Atlantic seaboard in increasing quantities. The earnings of the oil companies are remarkably good and, with the maximum write-offs permitted and taken for depreciation and depletion, most of the companies have reserves behind their stocks that are entirely out of proportion to present selling prices.

The motors sagged early in the week and seemed to be in a position of having difficulty to hold the gains they had registered during the previous seven days, but this temporary softness quickly turned to strength and that division of the list acted well. Registrations for the first four months were 12.4 per cent above the same period of 1925, and every report that emanates from official sources indicates that the first half of the year is going to set a record. There does not seem to have been any slowing up in demand for cars, and, while sales have been stimulated by price cuts, the schedules of production are not down as much as had been anticipated. In a statement issued by one of the largest companies, it is said that automobile men do not look for a permanent continuance of the increases in sales, but that a survey of future prospects points to long-continued prosperity for the leading organizations. This survey includes the outlook for population increase, parts and replacement needs and export possibilities. One notable fact about the trading is that there is always a steady demand for motor stocks to be taken entirely out of the market. Some of the stocks showed strength entirely apart from the others, and the truck and bus issues were the poorest actors. More discrimination was evident in the buying and the weakest stocks were of the weakest companies. Late spring has seriously affected the business of the tire companies and yet their stocks were exceedingly active and strong. Dealers are understood to be overstocked, but earnings of the manufacturing companies have held up well so far and we understand that surpluses are beginning to move into the hands of consumers rapidly; however, it is now thought that 1927 will be a better year for the tire companies and many purchases are being made for the long pull.

Plenty of Money.

There was plenty of money but higher than usual rates were asked at the beginning of the week. The bond market was quiet and uninteresting although there were flurries of large buying in the foreign issues. The foreign news, especially European, was more satisfactory than for some time, with brighter prospects for some sort of correction in the finances of both France and Belgium and there was marked strength in Scandinavian exchanges. A number of new domestic issues were easily distributed; however, the consensus of opinion is that bonds have nearly reached their peak and that care should be taken in picking out bonds for permanent holdings at these levels.

A number of the rail shares made new highs for the present movement and these stocks are in greater favor than ever. Even the bankrupts picked up a little and the highest priced dividend-paying issues were in constant demand, despite the fact that the leader among these stocks sagged off following a disappointing meeting of the directors. Reports show that income for the good railroads is increasing, and at the same time that expenses are declining. These conditions, taken together with the prospect of early mergers, could hardly help attracting attention to them and, while they have been long the favorites of conservative investors, there is a deal of speculative money going feverishly into them now. There are good prospects for dividend increases by some of the roads and also for segregation of properties not directly connected with transportation. The daily average of carloadings is increasing.

The public utilities were inclined to drop off fractionally although they are understood to be supported by more funds than any other single division of the market. The tremendous amount of financing and merging that has been done by these companies during the past year has placed them in a position where their earning power as compared with their obligations is questioned. The electrical equipment stocks were reasonably strong but not particularly active. These boosters of these companies is growing consistently. The chemical-fertilizers were rather soft with the exception of one that is classed as being the most highly speculative of them all. Shipping stocks continued weak. Mail order stocks showed a fair degree of strength as a result of reports of increased earnings. Textiles marked time, with few bids and, strange to say, but few offerings. Most stockholders in these companies have such paper losses now that they seem to have decided to keep them, as a forlorn hope, rather than accept present prices.

The steel stocks reflected to some extent the prevailing opinion that while prices for steel products have not as yet dropped, they may be expected to do so soon. Both steel and iron makers are operating at a rate in excess of present demand and a survey of sales prospects is not encouraging for the immediate future. Earnings are understood to be declining slightly and buying is mostly for immediate needs. Dividends are not at all endangered from these normal developments, but the stocks are selling closer to a yield basis than those of any other division. The generous supply of funds available for loans is favorable to high grade stock selling to yield six per cent or less.

Cotton prices were inclined to stagnate. The trading is principally between professional operators. Weather conditions are still the dominating trade influence and the outlook for a large crop is favorable. Consumers are deferring purchases. Prices look lower.

New York, June 5.—The quick recovery of the anthracite-producing companies since the resumption of mining last February has drawn attention to the dividend meetings of the Glen Alden Coal company and the Lehigh Valley Coal company this month. Because of the heavy tonnage mined in the past few months, and the strong demand for anthracite, due to the unseasonable weather this spring, it is believed that both companies will be in a position to take favorable dividend action. Other possibilities are a stock split-up by Glen Alden and the acquisition of other properties by the Lehigh Valley, but action on these matters probably will be deferred.

Insurance companies in the United States are becoming more and more an important factor in the financing and developing of the country's business, says a review by Dominick & Dominick. For the first quarter of 1926, life insurance companies reported an increase of six per cent in volume of business over the same period of 1925, which accordingly means more funds available for investments.

Private advices from the southwest received in the financial district predict another advance in oil Coast Crude Oil to stimulate drilling in old fields. Production in this district recently has fallen below 100,000 barrels a week.

Cottonseed Oil.

New York, June 5.—Beyond a fair trade in the October position, in which refiners, brokers and ring traders figured, interest in cottonseed oil was light, the day's turnover being 3,700 barrels. Closing prices were 2 points lower for October and generally 5 to 11 net higher for other leading deliveries. Prime crude 14.00 bid; prime summer yellow spot 13.75; July closed 16.13; September 15.00; October 13.60; December 11.50; January 11.40.

New Orleans, June 5.—The market for cottonseed oil futures was steady today and a shade higher in sympathy with the firmness of lard and the strength of the supply situation. There was some disposition to realize on long contracts owing to the more favorable reports as to the progress of the new cotton crop. Prime summer yellow closed unchanged at 15.25 and prime crude also closed unchanged at 14.00. Futures closed quiet: July 15.25; August 15.40; September 13.87; October 11.97; November 10.97.

Rubber.

New York, June 5.—Closing: Rubber, steady: July 29.90; September 29.80; December 40.00. Smoked ribbed spot 41¼.

ROBBERY SERIES LAID TO OFFICERS

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, June 5.—At least a dozen robberies committed at various Loop stores were believed to have been cleared today through the arrest of three city policemen, two private watchmen and several others following an investigation by Captain Patrick J. Harding, of Shakespeare Avenue station.

One of the policemen held, John Manion, assigned to the Jackson Boulevard bridge, is reported to have made a full confession of his part in the robberies.

The other two officers in custody, Philip Lorenz, of the central detail flivver squad, and Walter W. Farrell, of the detective bureau, though pointed out as participating in the robber raids, stoutly denied implication or knowledge of them.

Howard Blair and Charles Baker, the two private watchmen, also are reported to have been members of the robber gang and to have participated in a number of recent burglaries which netted thousands of dollars in stolen loot.

Several members of the gang, whose names are known to police, were being sought today. One of the men hunted was said to be known as F. R. ("Barney") Cole.

Arrest of Devon Blair, brother of Howard, led to the uncovering of the alleged operations of the gang. A search of the Blair home led to the discovery of thousands of dollars' worth of stolen loot stored there, it was said.

Comb. year ago	93.20

Total bond sales (par value), $5,562,000.

New York, June 5.—(AP)—Realizing sales today imposed considerable restraint upon bond trading with prices of all but high grade rail and public utility issues drifting irregularly lower. The usual Saturday let-up in activity intensified the market's dullness. Foreign obligations continued to slide back today, forfeiting a large part of the gains established earlier in the week. German corporation issues yielded readily to profit taking although the government's bonds held firm around the year's top prices. Mexican obligations also were heavy.

The pronounced weakness of Sugar Company liens was the outstanding feature of trading in the domestic list. Selling was inspired by the omission of the Manati preferred dividend and this company's report calling attention to unfavorable conditions in the industry. Losses of a point or so were recorded by Manati, Cuba Cane and Franciscan issues. Skelly Oil 6 1-2s fell back 3 1-2 points and American Writing Paper 6s 2 points.

Buying interest was kept alive in a few railroad issues, but changes generally were limited to fractions. Rock Island Refunding 4s, Northern Pacific 3s, Iowa Central 4s, New Hayen 4s and New York, Susquehanna and Western 5s were in demand, but the Nickel Plate and Erie issues lagged.

Weekly Metals.

New York, June 5.—The steel market during the past week presented a rather irregular appearance both in regard to the demand and to values. Steel bars were firmer and fairly active while pipe also sold in considerable volume but other products were only fair demand. On the whole business was better than a month ago and the monthly loss in orders was expected to be smaller, with further increases in production. Pig iron production was also curtailed and some fairly good sized orders were placed at concessions.

Copper remained quiet. Buyers for domestic consumption are holding off probably in anticipation of lower prices as a result of unsatisfactory trade conditions abroad and a continued full production. No selling pressure of consequence has developed and some of the producing interests are still asking 13¼ for electrolytic delivered. This figure was entirely nominal, however, with small sales reported at about 13.80, while comparatively few buyers were in evidence above the 13¼ cent level.

Tin has declined to a new low for the year in response to larger arrivals and continuance of the English coal strike. Consumers bought libefally on the decline, some of the demand coming from plate manufacturers who opened their books for the third quarter at unchanged prices.

Lead remained firm. Large producers are well booked up for June in consequence of recent well distributed buying of both June and July.

Zinc was firmer in sympathy with the steadier London market, with a better inquiry reported.

Antimony advanced, due to the strength in China, with a better consuming demand.

GOOD ROADS BILL DEBATE LIMITED

Washington, June 5.—(AP)—Amid charges and denials of a filibuster and threats that there would be no adjournment until the federal aid good roads bill is passed, the senate agreed today to consider it next week with debate limited.

Senators Bingham, of Connecticut, and Reed, of Pennsylvania, both republicans, led a preliminary assault on the measure today, and Senator Wadsworth, republican, New York, announced he was drafting an amendment which he expected would lead to prolonged discussion.

The bill, already passed by the house, would extend for two years the present system of giving federal aid to the states in road building. The senate voted 64 to 9 to take it up but it was forced aside soon afterward by arrival of the hour set for resuming the farm relief debate.

Methodist Pastors To Attend School Held at Wesleyan

Macon, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—Bishop H. A. Boaz, of the M. E. church, south, presiding bishop of the Orient, will deliver five platform addresses at the approaching session of the Georgia pastors' school to be held at Wesleyan college June 7-18, it is announced by Dr. W. A. Shelton, of Emory university, dean of the school.

In addition to Bishop Boaz, other platform speakers include the presiding bishop of the Georgia conferences: Rev. W. G. Thonger, of Brussels, Belgium; Dr. F. S. Parker, Nashville, Tenn., general secretary of the Epworth league board, and Rev. G. E. Holly, Nashville, superintendent of good-will industries.

Faculty members are Professor J. Richard Spann and Professor Ora Miner, of Southern Methodist university, Dallas, Texas; Dr. J. W. Young, Emory university, Georgia; Rev. Homer Thompson, superintendent of Sunday school work, North Georgia conference, Atlanta; Professor F. B. Magee, athletic director, Atlanta; Dr. E. B. Chappell, editor Sunday school literature, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. C. M. Lipham, Newnan, Ga.; Dr. F. S. Parker and Dr. W. A. Shelton.

GOVERNOR'S OFFICE IN MASSACHUSETTS PUT UNDER GUARD

Boston, June 5.—Fear of further Sacco-Vanzetti reprisals caused an armed guard to be placed Saturday at the door of Governor Fuller's office in the state house.

General Alfred F. Foote, state commissioner of public safety, ordered Sergeant Herbert J. Stingel of the state constabulary to remain on duty at the portals of the gubernatorial chamber pending disposition of the internationally-notorious murder case, involving Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

The explosion at the West Bridgewater home of Samuel Johnson, brother-in-law of a star witness in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, early this week, and the bomb explosions at American legations in various countries, were largely responsible for the assigning of the governor's guard.

Governor Fuller's Beacon street home also was under guard Saturday night.

Under a program announced recently by District Attorney Winfield M. Wilbar, of Brocton, Sacco and Vanzetti will be sentenced to the electric chair within three weeks.

General Movement To Promote Alfalfa Growing Now on Foot

North Georgia soil is ideally adapted for production of alfalfa, particularly the soil in the counties in the northwestern part of the state, according to experiments conducted by H. M. Cottrell, agriculturist, who works under auspices of the Georgia Bankers' association. Mr. Cottrell prepared this map showing the sections of Georgia best adapted for alfalfa culture.

In a big forward movement to promote raising of alfalfa on Georgia farms, experiments of the last few years have demonstrated beyond any doubt that the red clay hills of north Georgia are capable of producing the highest yields of this product of any soil in the United States, according to H. M. Cottrell, agriculturist for the Georgia Bankers' association, who has been directing this movement for a year.

"With Georgia spending annually $33,000,000 for hay purchased in other states, and with the soil of this state ideally adapted for the growing of alfalfa," Mr. Cottrell said, "there is every reason why the farmers of this state should turn their attention at once to production of this big money crop."

Mr. Cottrell has figures to show that Georgia farms are capable of producing more money from alfalfa than from cotton. He declared that the alfalfa opportunities of farmers of this state are unlimited, and pointed out a golden harvest for them in the next few years, both in markets in the state and markets in other states if they plant part or all of their farms in alfalfa.

Big Tract Suited.

At present there are 5,000,000 acres of soil in Georgia adapted for alfalfa. Roughly speaking, that section of the state lying north of a line drawn across the state from Augusta to Macon, and thence to Columbus is the section best fitted for alfalfa culture. The Georgia State college is now conducting a campaign to obtain a sowing of at least one million acres in alfalfa as soon as possible.

In Elbert county marked success has been won by farmers in growing alfalfa, and Mr. Cottrell outlined details of plans which brought success to the movement in that county. He said the same success if not better would reward the efforts of farmers in other parts of north Georgia.

"A movement to promote raising of alfalfa in Georgia is the greatest forward movement which can be taken in agriculture in this state at this time," Mr. Cottrell said. "The red clay hills of north Georgia seem to have been specially made for production of high yields of alfalfa. The average yield per acre through a series of years being greater than that in the irrigated alfalfa districts of Nebraska and Colorado and higher than those on the rich Mississippi delta soils in eastern Arkansas.

State College's Success.

"For 12 years the red clay hill lands of the Georgia State College of Agriculture have produced from four to five crops of alfalfa a year worth $100 to $150 an acre annually.

"Trials of alfalfa on the red hill lands in 45 counties in north Georgia have shown as large a yield per acre as has been grown on the agricultural college farm. Forty farmers are raising alfalfa in Elbert county. One of them has sold the crop for six years and in that time it has brought him $600 an acre.

"A farmer in Cobb county has averaged four tons an acre annually on 26 acres. Another Cobb county farmer cut five tons an acre in 1924, and it brought him $120 an acre. A farmer in Franklin county sowed alfalfa on seven acres of land that was producing regularly half a bale of cotton an acre. For five years he got five and six crops of hay. He then broke the alfalfa field and planted it to cotton, raising 19 bales on the seven acres, as much cotton in the one year after alfalfa as he raised in six years growing cotton continuously.

"These experiences have been duplicated in every one of the 45 counties in north Georgia that have the red clay hill land specifically adapted to alfalfa. Alfalfa is no longer an experiment in this part of the state.

Unlimited Market.

"There is an almost unlimited market for Georgia-grown alfalfa hay. Dr. Andrew Soule states that on an average $33,000,000 is sent out of Georgia annually to buy hay and that 1,600,000 tons of hay are needed in Georgia each year in addition to the quantity of hay now raised in the state. When Georgia has a surplus of alfalfa hay above that needed at home, there is a large market for it in Florida, through the New England states and the New York and Pennsylvania district. The eastern states now are buying immense quantities of alfalfa grown in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado, and Georgia is 1,000 miles nearer to the eastern market than are the western alfalfa sections.

"There are 5,000,000 acres in north Georgia according to the crop authorities of the agricultural college, that are particularly adapted to alfalfa, and the college is stressing a campaign to secure the sowing of at least 1,000,000 acres as soon as practicable. There are now about 5,000 acres growing. The agricultural committee of the Georgia Bankers' association and many bankers and business men are working strenuously to hasten the time when this college program will be accomplished.

"A man on a small red clay hill farm in North Georgia can grow ten acres of alfalfa and add an average of $1,000 cash to his annual income. He can do this and raise as much cotton as he has been producing by cutting the cotton acreage somewhat, using better seed and cultural methods, thereby raising larger yields per acre and the higher the yield of cotton an acre, the less it costs to produce each pound of lint.

Easy to Produce.

"Alfalfa pays even in our most unfavorable seasons. The year 1925 was the driest season in north Georgia in 85 years, yet alfalfa gave one good crop of hay before the moisture from the winter rains became exhausted. An Elbert county grower's first and only crop in 1925 was two tons an acre. It brought unbaled on the farm $36 a ton, $72 an acre. It was the only crop except cotton that brought him anything. This experience is quoted to show that alfalfa may be depended on to make a profit no matter how bad the season.

"Alfalfa is a machine-raised crop. The ground can be prepared and seeded, the hay harvested and baled for market by machinery that can be operated by the ordinary field hands with very little human labor needed.

"When a majority of the small farms in north Georgia increase the annual cash income per farm $1,000 through sale or feeding of alfalfa, purchasing power of farm families will be more than trebled. Every farm family raising 10 acres of alfalfa in addition to other products will be insured a comfortable cash income every year. Business of the stores and deposits in the banks will correspondingly be increased and farming and business in north Georgia will be placed on a permanent, regular, prosperous basis.

"Alfalfa has been grown on the red hill lands of Elbert county for seven years. During that time it has returned the growers an average net income of $100 an acre annually above the cost of making the hay.

Practice Spreading.

"At the beginning, only four or five farmers raised this crop. This year alfalfa will be harvested on 40 farms in the county. The first cutting was made the first week in May with an average yield of two tons cured hay per acre. In the past, there have been from three to five cuttings each season.

"With these facts to back them, the four banks of Elbert county, cooperating with the business men and influential farmers of the county, are conducting one of the best planned farm campaigns ever staged in Georgia to induce every farm owner in the county to sow alfalfa this fall and make Elbert county the outstanding alfalfa county in Georgia.

"A committee of 50 bankers, business and professional men, most of them farm owners, is divided into groups of two each to make a farm-to-farm canvass of the entire county. Each group is assigned to meet farmers with whom its members are acquainted. When a group has completed the canvass of the territory assigned to it, the names of the farmers who would not agree to sow alfalfa are turned in to the committee having general charge of the canvass, and a second group of business men is assigned to meet these farmers. Those who hold off after an invitation from the second group of business men, will be visited by a third, fourth or even fifth committee if necessary, although the present progress of the campaign indicates that a second committee will seldom be needed.

"The four banks of the county have printed in their newspapers a full-page advertisement signed by every bank director asking every farm owner in the county to sow alfalfa and showing why it will pay the farmers to raise this crop. Every merchant is putting alfalfa circulars into every package of goods that he sells.

"A farmer has been raising alfalfa on red clay hills in DeKalb county for nine years. Three years ago he sold one cutting in the swath for $60 an acre to a neighbor, who is a dairyman. The purchaser cured the alfalfa and hauled it to his barn.

"He decided that it was better to raise alfalfa than to buy it, and now has 20 acres. The plants were 20 inches high April 13. He feeds his herd of 60 dairy cows on home-grown alfalfa hay and silage. The only feed he buys is a small quantity of cottonseed meal.

"The farmer who sold one cutting of alfalfa for $60 made three other cuttings the same season and has averaged three to five cuttings annually except in 1925, the driest season in 85 years, when he made only one cutting."

Bridge Approved.

Washington, June 5.—(AP)—Application of the state of Tennessee for a a bridge permit for a structure across Cumberland river near Gainsboro, was approved today at the War department.

EGG-LAYING CONTEST PLANNED AT ATHENS

Athens, Ga., June 5.—(AP)—Poultry raisers in Georgia are "very optimistic," Professor J. H. Wood, in charge of poultry husbandry of the State College of Agriculture, says Cooperative carload sales have given Georgia producers the best prices ever obtained, even in the most remote sections, the poultry director adds, many cooperative cars of poultry being loaded each week.

"The hatcheries have had an exceptionally good year," Professor Wood continues. "The demand has exceeded the supply. The growth of the broiler industry has stimulated the sale of baby chicks. Hatches have been very good throughout the season."

When it is realized that the annual value of poultry and eggs in Georgia has increased from $12,000,000 to $30,000,000 each year since 1920, the professor continued, it wil be seen why all phases of the industry have done well.

The effect of the reorganization of the Georgia branch of the American Poultry association will be noticed at the autumn fairs, in the opinion of Professor Wood. "Better prices are offered and better management as well as larger and finer exhibits can be expected. The district show will be held at Columbus October 11 to 16 T. F. Riggs, national president, and B. E. Adams, director of the fourth district, will be among those present.

"The Georgia Baby Chick association, organized to promote the production of more and better chicks, has done a fine piece of work and consumers appreciate its service.

"Because of the efforts of this association 12,000 birds were tested for white diarrhea. Over 50,000 birds will be tested next year. Purchasers have been pleased with the results obtained with chicks for tested flocks. Testing work is being done by the state veterinary division, Atlanta, free of charge.

"A record-keeping project conducted by the State College of Agriculture has done much to make poultry raising more efficient. Records are being received from flocks having a total of nearly 30,000 birds."

Announcement has been made that Georgia is to have a national egg-laying contest. The plant, it is said, will consist of 52 straw loft houses 12x14 feet. One hundred hens will be accepted. Entry fees have been fixed at $20 for each pen. Applications for entrance should be made to the poultry division, Georgia State College of Agriculture, Athens, Ga.

JUDGE POSTPONES DECIDING VENUE APPEAL OF SCOTT

Chicago, June 5.—(AP)—Judge Marcus Kavanaugh, of the criminal court, today refused to reconsider his action in appointing the clerk of his court as guardian for Russel T. Scott, and deferred a decision until Monday on the motion of Scott's counsel for a change of venue.

Scott, sentenced to hang for the murder of Joseph Maurer, drug clerk, and saved from the gallows by a jury verdict that he had become insane, is awaiting trial on the state's petition that he is sane again and should be hanged.

William S. Stewart, attorney for Scott, applied Thursday for an order naming him his client's guardian so that he might assume charge of Scott's affairs. The judge named his minute clerk as guardian and today refused to remove him.

MAN IS ARRESTED IN SALVATION ARMY HOME SHOOTING

Wheeling, W. Va., June 5.—(AP)—Captain William I. MacGregor, manager of the Salvation Army Industrial home here, was in a critical condition today from gunshot wounds, and Eugene Reilly, an attache of the home, was dead as the result of an attack at the home last night.

Walter McCormick, of Fairmount, W. V., arrested shortly after the shooting, was held pending an investigation. Police said he told them MacGregor and Reilly attempted to eject him from the building after refusing him pay for work performed.

JACKSONVILLE CENSUS IS PLACED AT 135,866

Jacksonville, Fla., June 5.—(AP)—Jacksonville's official population was established at 135,866 by Director William M. Steuart, of the United States census bureau today, advices from Washington said.

The recent federal census Jacksonville population estimate of 96,500 was revoked and the state census figure of 135,866, the figures of a special census taken last fall, made official, acording to the advices.

Hungary Seeks To Get Release From League

Geneva, June 6.—(AP)—The question as to whether or not the time has arrived to release Hungary from financial control by the League of Nations is causing some controversy.

Premier Bethlen has told the league's financial committee that Hungary wants this control abolished and desires the right to employ the balance of her reconstruction loan for internal productive purposes, which are not specified in the conditions of the loan.

France and Czecho Slovakia, who are believed to be influenced by the recent false bank note affair in Hungary, are opposed to the release of the league's financial control. Premier Briand, of France, Foreign Secretary Chamberlain, of England, and others who are arriving for the June session of the league council, which opens Monday, doubtless will be called upon to intervene in this delicate matter.

The balance of the Hungarian restoration loan is about 80,000 gold crowns.

EXPERTS SEE KAYO FOR YOUNG STRIBLING OVER BERLENBACH

CHALLENGER IS CONFIDENT OF WINNING

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, June 5.—Eastern boxing sharps, with few exceptions, predict young Billy Stribling, the Georgia newlywed, will knock Paul Berlenbach, the Yorkville slugger, from under his light-heavyweight championship when they meet for Tex Rickard in Yankee stadium next Thursday night in a scheduled 15-round bout.

Most of them base their opinions on the comparative showings of champion and challenger against Johnny Risko, of Toledo, recently when Stribling performed to marked advantage whereas a few weeks earlier Berlenbach looked thoroughly bad. The latter admits he made a poor impression against the blond Ohioan, but says he got away to a bad start and was unable to find himself for six rounds.

Stribling will arrive here tomorrow afternoon from Hendersonville, N. C., to finish his training in the St. Nicholas gym with a strong staff of sparring mates. Berlenbach is training faithfully in his New Jersey camp and expressed confidence he would beat the southern youngster and retain the title he took from Mike McTigue.

Sailor Friedman, of Chicago, and Jack McVey, Harlem negro welter, will go 10 rounds or less in the semi-final, and Sergeant Sammy Baker and Red Henning, of Gulfport, Miss., will mingle in another 10.

Kayo Phil Kaplan, middleweight challenger, and Joe Simonich, Butte, Mont., miner-boxer, will mingle in a 10-rounder at the Queensboro club, Tuesday night. Kaplan, if he wins, is virtually assured of a match with Tiger Flowers for the title.

STRIBLING LEAVES FOR NEW YORK.

Hendersonville, N. C., June 5.—(AP) Completing two weeks of intensive training, W. L. (Young) Stribling, youthful Georgia boxer, left today for New York where he will meet Paul Berlenbach for the light heavyweight title on June 10.

Stribling weighed 173 1-2 pounds today and said he never had felt better. "Pa" Stribling, his father-manager, "Ma" Stribling and the young boxer's wife were in the party which left here today. Mrs. (Young) Stribling regularly attends all her husband's bouts.

Five sparring partners helped Stribling in his training here. Besides the young boxer played golf regularly. "Ma" Stribling, however, will attribute a victory over Berlenbach to her "fried chicken and sweet potatoes, all southern style" with which she said she had been feeding the contender for the light heavyweight crown. Both she and the younger Mrs. Stribling prepare all the fighter's meals.

"I will win the fight," Stribling said before leaving today. "I never felt better in my life."

TWO WELTERS MEET ON STRIB CARD.

New York, June 5.—(AP)—Jack McVey of New York, and Sailor Friedman, Chicago welterweight, will meet in the 10 round semi-final on the card at the Yankee stadium, June 10, in which Paul Berlenbach fights in defense of his title against Young Stribling in the headliner.

LARRY AVERA FACING MANY HARD BATTLES

Larry Avera's business is boxing and judging from the amount of work mapped out for him by his manager, Billy Lotz, he will attend strictly to business for the next few weeks, for he has several tough battles booked for him within that time.

The young Atlanta boxer will meet K. O. Parker, a soldier boxer, of Alabama, in Alabama City on June 14, just one week from Monday. Parker has made a name in the boxing game in and around that city and the fans are backing their ring favorite to beat the Atlanta battler.

Three days after his battle with Parker, Avera will take on Red Wilson for a bout in a Montgomery ring. Wilson is claimed to be one of the toughest leather pushers in that section and is expected to give Avera a battle of his life. But being the kind of boxer he is, Larry is not expecting anything like that to happen. Larry can stand a lot of anybody's punching and the Montgomery battler will have to step to get anything on him.

Avera is booked at Fort Bragg on June 25 against Sergeant Conway, the favorite of the soldiers. However, Larry will find plenty of supporters there, for he has boxed all through the Carolinas and is mighty popular in that neck of the woods.

On June 28, Larry will return to Montgomery and meet Bobby Cox, a skilled young battler, who has taken to the mitt business. Some time in August a certain promoter, who for the present wishes to conceal his identity, wants to bring Lew Tendler here for Larry.

Two Shooters Tie For High Honors

Putting the rifle team of the Old Guard of Atlanta through intensive practice for the Centennial Legion cup match to be held at Philadelphia June 16, the Atlanta Rifle club held the regular week-end shoot at Fort McPherson Saturday afternoon, in which two members tied, for high honor. Some of the scores at 500 yards were:

A. J. Silverman, 48; J. E. Barnett, 48; A. D. Barber, 47; W. D. Marshall, Jr., 47; R. L. Beutell, 46; W. D. Marshall, 45; J. T. Linney, 45.

The firing is supervised under the direction of Lieutenant Bryan, of the Twenty-second infantry, through the cooperation of Colonel Baltzell, commanding officer. All civilian riflemen are invited to become members of the club.

The upper middle picture shows part of the large gallery following the Ulmer-Wethered match at Muirfield, which was won by Wethered by one hole. In the lower middle picture is seen Bob Gardner, captain of the American team, driving in his match with H. M. Dickson, who won the match from the American leader, 3 and 2. At the extreme right is shown George Von Elm in the match he won from Russell Boyack, 4 and 3. His long drives were one of the features of his play in the tournament. In the lower right-hand corner Francis Ouimet is seen putting on the eighth green in his match with Frank Williamson, which Ouimet won, 7 to 6. The bottom center shows Cyril Tolley, England's big hope in the tournament, caught as he made one of his famous drives. He lost his match to A. R. Hall-Cain, one of the American aces, 4 and 2, after a desperate battle. Next to Tolley is Jesse Guilford. He was snapped while driving in the match with J. D. Burnil, who lost to him, 7 to 6.

National League Clubs Outlive Batting Slump

Chicago, June 5.—(AP)—National League players finally and for the first time this year are hitting with somewhat the success that has attended the slugging efforts of the American League batsman since the opening day.

The batting averages in the senior circuit have been boosted, not by sudden flurries of singles on the part of players whose past performances mark the hitting as "streak" variety, but by steady hammering of the clubs as teams, led by veterans of the ranking post in the annual batting records.

Probably the most notable example of improved hitting among National teams is Pittsburgh. From a faltering start which left them with a percentage of .187 at the end of the first week of the season, the world champions have slugged themselves in to fourth place in the team standing with a rating of .283.

Setting the pace for the Pirates and just above everybody else in both leagues have been Cuyler and Traynor, sharing second place in the individual standings with averages of .373. Earl Smith is also up in the .300 class.

Bubbles Hargrave, of Cincinnati, continues to be the leading hitter of the Majors with a percentage of .432 in 20 games, thus having brought to the National the post which was an object of exclusive American battle throughout the opening weeks of the seasons.

His nearest rivals are Wambsganss, of the Philadelphia Americans, with a rating of .429 in 18 games, and Bennet, of the St. Louis Browns, hitting .419 in 19 tilts. Below him comes an array of veterans, including Joe Dugan, of the Yankees, Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Goslin, of the Senators, Burns, of Cleveland, and other old-timers in the American, who are hitting smartly.

The heavier hitting in the National has been reflected in the fortunes of the flingers, who in the early weeks of the season, had considerably more impressive records generally than American pitchers. Pittsburgh again shows up, Meadows, of the Pirates, having finished the seventh week of the nineteen-twenty-six pennant chase with six games won and none lost. Otherwise the swatter slugging has hurt the mound averages.

Every team in the league gained in hitting percentages, a feature which was reversed in almost every case among American clubs. The Cubs climbed to first place with hitting of an even .300 caliber. Cincinnati retained second by climbing to .268 and New York is third with .287. The Yankees still lead both leagues in club slugging but their hitting fell off to a rating to .315. The White Sox are next with .297 and Washington is third with .292. The feature has been the rise of the Browns, who have passed both the Athletics and Boston to get out of the cellar.

In addition to his consistent hitting, Cuyler has gone to the fore in collecting unguarded bases with a total of twelve. Meusel, in the other league is giving him a close race with eleven.

Herb Pennock ranks the leading pitcher in the American, with his Yankee team-mate, Hoyt, close behind for performance. Meadows looks best in the National records. Rixey, of the Reds, has won four and lost none and Rhem, of the Cardinals, is 8 to 1. "Lefty" Groves, of the Athletics, holds the strike-out lead, with a total of 72.

Leading American hitters in 20 or more games: Dugan, New York, .414; Fothergill, Detroit, .390; Ruth, New York, .383; Cobb, Detroit, .373; Goslin, Washington, .371; Burns, Cleveland, .368; Heilmann, Detroit, .366; Meusel, New York, .364; Falk, Chicago, .357; Bassler, Detroit, .354.

Leading hitters in the National league in 20 or more games: Hargrave, Cincinnati, .432; Cuyler, Pittsburgh, .373; Traynor, Pittsburgh, .373; Southworth, New York, .371; Bressler, Cincinnati, .368; J. Wilson, Philadelphia, .316; Herman, Brooklyn, .361; Dean, Philadelphia, .360; Lucas, Cincinnati, .355; Lindstrom, New York, .350.

COACHES LAUD JAVELIN TOSS BY GRAYDON

Chicago, June 5.—(AP)—In the right arm of Douglas Graydon, Little Rock, Ark., high school boy, there is bad news for Finland.

The boy from the Ozarks threw a javelin 199 feet 5 inches at the national high school track meet yesterday, and his feat impressed him upon coaches who watched his performance as the likeliest challenger the United States ever has produced for the javelin honors which Finland has held without a break ever since the revival of the modern Olympic games.

Still in his teens and in high school competition, Graydon nosed the shaft into the sod only 16 feet short of the world mark of 215 feet 7 3-4 inches held by F. Myra, of Finland.

Graydon's throw surpassed the American interscholastic record by more than a dozen feet.

The present American record is held by John Kuck, of the Kansas State Teachers' college of Emporia, who threw the spear 214 feet 2 1-4 inches this year.

Under collegiate coaching, those who watched him yesterday believe Graydon will have little difficulty in bettering the American mark, and in carrying across the Atlantic America's first serious challenge in the javelin throw.

P. E. L. INFIELDER LEADS HITTERS IN SOUTHERN

Memphis, Tenn., June 5.—(AP)—Harvey Hendrick, New Orleans infielder, is blazing the way for Southern association bat wielders with the healthy percentage of .408 in 49 games but with a dozen or more players in position to jump into the leadership should the heavy hitting Pelican falter.

Carroll, Chattanooga, and Yaryan, Birmingham, are closest on the heels of the leaders with percentages of .395 and 17 others registered marks of .350 or better in the averages made public today, accounting for games through Wednesday. D. Williams, Mobile, who was runner up to Hendrick last week, dropped to third place with a percentage of .390 and Tucker, New Orleans, was fourth with .384.

An even twenty players are hitting .350 or better.

Yaryan, Tucker and West were tied for home run honors, each with 7, when the figures were compiled, but since that time West has forged ahead with a total of 8. For the season a total of 145 circuit drives have been hammered out with Birmingham and New Orleans leading with 25 each.

Hodge, New Orleans, heads the list of pitchers with two wins and no defeats, but Crowder of Birmingham, holds to his claim for honors with a record of nine victories and only one loss.

Bradley Mounts Finish One-Two at Latonia

Latonia, Ky., June 5.—(AP)—The thoroughbred team, Bagenbaggage and Boot to Boot, representing the Idle Hour farm owned by Colonel E. R. Bradley, won the Latonia derby here today without being extended. Rhinock, which ran a game race, finished third, while Blondin and Navigator, prides of the east, came along in the rear with Recollection.

Bagenbaggage's margin was a half length, but it appeared that either he or his stablemate could have won had their riders so chosen.

The race was a truly run contest and there was no doubt the two which finished, just as Bubbling Over and Bagenbaggage in the Kentucky derby, were pounds the best. It was not a battle of skill between the riders as the charges under the other jockeys failed to show the class of the winner.

This was the fourth time that Bradley has finished one-two in derbies contested in this country, the first being at Churchill Downs in 1921 with Behave Yourself and Black Servant; the second at New Orleans this winter with Bagenbaggage and Boot to Boot; the third at Churchill Downs Louisville, last month, with Bubbling Over and Bagenbaggage.

The mile and a half was run in 2:32 1-5, which was several seconds slower than the record for the race.

The Idle Hour entry was the betting choice at odds-on and the winner paid $3.20 for a $2 straight ticket to win.

The race was worth $27,500 net to Bradley as he scored in first and second position. Rhinock finished for the show end and his owner was given $1,500.

Trophy Presented To Scrappy Moore

Athens, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—"Scrappy" Moore, star centerfielder on the Georgia baseball team, who reports to the Chicago Cubs after commencement, has been awarded a trophy by a number of Athens fans for leading the Georgia batters this year. He hit for a total of .336 during the season, and was pronounced one of the best players in the south. Moore lives in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Nolen Richardson, shortstop, Atlanta, captain of the 1926 team, also reports to the big league in June, going to the Detroit Tygers.

M'LAUGHLIN OUTPITCHES 2 LOOKOUTS

'NOOGA PROTEST TURNED DOWN BY MARTIN

Memphis, Tenn., June 5.—(AP)—President John D. Martin of the Southern association overruled a protest by the Chattanooga club of Friday's game with Atlanta, according to a statement made by him tonight.

"I overruled this protest on the ground that the decision of the umpire as to the practicability of continuing play governs, and that no appeal lies to the president of the league from the umpire's decision in this matter," Mr. Martin said.

BY DICK HAWKINS.

There is much truth in the axiom that "youth must be served," but the Chattanooga Lookouts will say you nay if questioned in this vein, for two patriarchs of the Atlanta Crackers stepped out at Spiller field Saturday afternoon and sent the Tennesseans back to their home ground stung by a 6-to-4 defeat to end the series—their fifth straight trimming at the hands of the Niehoff clan.

Those two "ancients" are Hollis McLaughlin—who held the invaders to four scattered hits, and Uncle Wilbur Good, who tripled to deep center with the bases loaded in the third inning to send across the runs that won the game.

Throughout the hectic session McLaughlin had the Lookout clouters at his mercy, though his wildness was disconcerting to his teammates as well as to the fans at times.

Hollis started off the festivities by passing Lewis and Carroll in the first inning, and both of these worthies showed their appreciation by scoring when Dutch Krehmeyer, former Cracker, singled to center.

In their half of the first frame the Crackers failed to score. Boss Niehoff hit into a double play after Rod Murphy had singled over first, and Mule Haas was called out on s rikes. Mule objected to the decision of Umpire Campbell on the third strike, and evidently said something to the hefty mentor which was highly displeasing, for Mule was ordered from the field and Murphy went to center, while Durocher was given Murphy's place at short. The redoubtable Mr. Haas at first refused to take his free pass to the showers, and stretched his lengthy frame on the ground in center field, but, as usual, the edict of "the man behind the plate" prevailed, and Mule retired to the clubhouse to plan dire revenge or to resolve to mend his ways.

Durocher Stars.

Durocher began his reign at the short field in the second frame by throwing out Hartford on a beautiful play, then took Coffman's short fly for the second out. "Tiny" Lewis, diminutive left-fielder of the Lookout camp, hit to the right-field bank, but in his haste failed to touch first base and was called out to end the inning.

Then came the big show in the Cracker half of the third inning. McLaughlin started by singling to right field. Murphy flied to Lewis, and Boss Niehoff poled one to center for one base, sending Hollis to the hot corner, after which the youthful Durocher drew a pass to fill the bases. McLaughlin scored when Johnson was safe on Cy Anderson's error at first, and then Uncle Wilbur strolled to the plate in his usual sprightly manner and casually lifted one to deep right-center to score Niehoff, Durocher and Johnson. After Niehaus had walked, Roy Leubbe hit into a double play to retire the side, but not before four runs had been driven across the plate to provide the weight for another win in the Atlanta column.

Hollis had but one bad inning after the first. In the fifth frame, McKenty who had relieved Coffman for Chattanooga after Wilbur Good wrecked the works in the third, singled to center. Lewis' sacrifice advanced McKenty to second and the pitcher scor-

COLORED NINES TO OPEN SERIES HERE MONDAY

With much strength added to their team, the Black Crackers will open here Monday with the Nashville Giants in the first of a four-game series, starting at 3 o'clock. This is the local colored team's second appearance of the season here.

The Black Crackers have been most successful since their last appearance here, having won six out of eight games played, to boost them up in the league standing.

With two new right-handed flingers added to the pitching staff, things look very promising for the local colored tossers in their drive toward the top of the league. Canty, who has played in but two games leads the team in batting, with a percentage of 1.000. Hawkins and Sykes are the next swatters in line with .346 and .333 respectively for their stick work.

Atlanta's black tossers at present are holding down the sixth berth in the league standing, but with their much strengthened twirling layout and the big guns hitting heavily, they are looking forward to greater success.

For the convenience of white people wishing to attend the games, Chess' place has been engaged to handle the tickets, while the colored fans can secure their tickets at Parks' place at 159 Auburn avenue. A special section will be reserved for the white fans.

Dempsey Busy Dodging Legal Pitfalls---Edgren

Single Foreign Trip Does Not Settle Major League Race

If the first invasion of foreign territory carries any meaning, the story it tells is that the world series will once more be an east vs. west proposition. Eastern National league teams showed practically no strength on their first western trip. Brooklyn winning five and losing eight made the best record of the eastern teams, and no team wins pennants on any such showing as that. In the American league Cleveland's 8 victories in 14 decisions in the east was the high mark, with Detroit close behind on 7 victories in 13 decisions.

In contrast to these records of the invaders, home teams accomplished so much more as to astonish the natives. Cincinnati lost only two of fifteen games, sweeping the slate clean against Brooklyn and Boston and losing only one game each to New York and the Phillies. Every other western team won a neat majority. Pittsburg took nine of thirteen, Chicago ten of fifteen, and St. Louis nine of sixteen.

The triumph of the Yankees in the American league was most pronounced. Detroit took two of four in New York, but no other western team earned a single victory at the stadium, Cleveland and Chicago losing three each and St. Louis four. The Athletics took ten victories in fifteen games, but fell down at the last, losing three of four to Cleveland. Washington managed only to split even against western teams, taking seven and losing seven, while Boston won five and lost eight.

All told, in the National league, western teams at home took forty-one victories and suffered eighteen defeats, while in the American league the eastern home teams took thirty-four victories and suffered twenty-one defeats. On that showing, the west clearly predominates in the National and the east in the American.

A single spring trip to foreign diamonds does not settle the pennant race, to be sure. Plenty of reverses may happen over night. The Yankees are certainly not destined to go through the season winning twelve of every fourteen games, nor will the Reds continue to win thirteen of every fifteen. And as between those two teams the Reds are more to be feared, because they have not only a batting attack but they have a pitching staff that looks difficult to solve. Miller Huggins would be sitting pretty if he had a bunch of pitchers equal to Rixey Donahue, Lucas, May, Luque and Mays, but the Yankees are not able to boast that they have won on their pitching.

Brooklyn, with no batting attack to speak of, has a pitching staff, else the Robins would not be in the race at all. Rhem and Keen, with a remarkable streak of box victories, have encouraged Rogers Hornsby to believe that he has a chance, especially since the Cards know how to bat the pill. If Hornsby had two more men like this pair St. Louis might this year find its long-awaited pennant.

Now that the teams have swung to the other ends of their respective circuits the scores will soon begin to tell whether the showing made on the first swing around is a fair picture of the entire campaign. The Cardinals are notoriously a bad road team. Their first invasion of the east will indicate whether or not their bad habit has been corrected. Then, too, we shall see whether Babe Ruth can measure western fences with the same abandon that he sized up his own stamping ground. Every team in the west will be laying for the Yankees. Those boys were rough on western visitors, and the visitors will not have forgotten it when the Yankees reach western diamonds. Even the Browns cannot possibly be as bad at home as they were in the east, where they won but a single game in thirteen.

Just a year ago both leagues had developed into three-club races. The Athletics, Washington and Chicago were the only American teams above .500, while the Giants, Pittsburg and Brooklyn were the only National teams above .500. The pennant winner in each case came from those three.

This year there are more teams above .500, and yet the three teams at the top right now are the ones most likely to go on and make the race. But at that about the only thing absolutely certain, until the present trip finishes, is that neither Boston team, nor the Browns nor the Phillies is much to be reckoned with in this campaign of 1926.

Boston to Send Ryan to Toledo

Boston, June 5.—(AP)—The Boston Braves today announced the release of Wilfred "Rosie" Ryan, a pitcher, to the Toledo club of the American Association. Ryan, who was obtained by Boston from the New York Giants, was formerly a star at Holy Cross college.

LITTLE ROCK COLLEGE PLANS COACH SCHOOL

Little Rock, Ark., June 5.—Little Rock college will have a short course coaching school in football and basketball during the first three weeks of August, to be conducted at Little Rock by Charles W. Bachman, R. E. "Dick" Handley, J. Craig Ruby and B. H. Winkelman.

Charles W. Bachman, Kansas A. & M. coach and R. E. "Dick" Handley, of the Haskell Indian Institute will give a course in football coaching. Bachman is a former Notre Dame man and a pupil of Knute K. Rockne, while Handley learned his football in Washington and is a follower of the "Pop" Warner system.

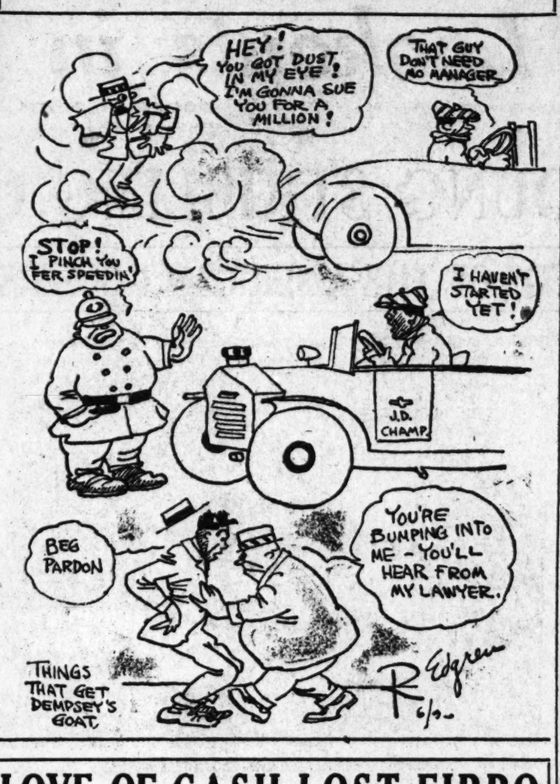

Although exponents of the two different styles of play Bachman and Handley work together in presenting a course which offers a chance for comparison of the two different and highly successful styles of play. This feature of the school will appeal to many coaches who are going away for summer study.

J. Craig Ruby, coach of basket ball at the University of Illinois, will be the instructor in that sport. During the first part of the summer Coach Ruby will give his course at the University of Illinois summer school and will come to Little Rock directly from there at the close of the session.

Ruby played at the University of Missouri, where, upon his graduation, he was elected basketball coach when Dr. Meanwell left that institution to go to the University of Wisconsin. Ruby, after a successful period of coaching at Missouri, went to the University of Illinois where his teams are always well up in the running of the big ten or the western conference.

B. H. Winkelman, coach of Little Rock college, is in charge of the summer school, as director of arrangements, and reservations are being made through him. Plans are being made to entertain a large number of coaches for the summer session, which is expected to be one of the most popular ever offered in the south.

"THE LONG ARM OF THE LAW"

LOVE OF CASH LOST FIRPO TITLE, DE FOREST ASSERTS

:: THOUGHT MORE OF MONEY THAN TRAINING ::

New York, June 5.—(AP)—Jimmy DeForest is the real discoverer of Luis Angel Firpo, the Argentine man of mood and money.

It was in a dingy cellar in Halsey street, Newark, N. J., that DeForest first saw the giant South American in ring togs. This was in November, 1922, a few days after Firpo had debarked from a steerage bunk on the Southern Cross, the ship which brought him from his native land.

The noted trainer shook his white head and sighed as he mused over the details of that discovery, the subsequent events and that hectic fight with Jack Dempsey in which the Argentine come within a wisp of the world's heavyweight title.

But Jimmy DeForest holds malice toward none. He fulfilled his contract with Firpo. He brought him within sight of his coveted goal. And never a sound of protest emerged from his lips, when Firpo, fretful under the strain of DeForest's strict discipline, cast him adrift for other instruction.

Love of money, was Firpo's greatest ring liability, said DeForest.

"He worried more about his end of the purse than he did about his physical condition. When Firpo was training for Willard, I established him in a camp at Allenhurst, N. J. One afternoon after a particularly irksome session in the ring with Jack McAuliffe, I told both men to go in and get some sleep.

"A short time afterward I was conducting some visitors through the camp and I asked them to step over to the barracks to see how the men slept in this Jersey air. In one of the rooms, McAuliffe was lying on his bunk, snoring loudly. We stepped into Firpo's room expecting to see the Argentine stretched out in slumber. Instead, he was sitting on the edge of his bunk with a paper and pencil covered with figures. He was trying to figure out how much he would have left after Uncle Sam had claimed his share of Firpo's income."

DeForest tells another story illustrative of Firpo's love for the dollar. "During the same training period a friendship developed between the big boxer and a five-year-old neighborhood girl. They were inseparable pals during the tedious weeks. Firpo liked to sit on the steps of my cottage and cut paper dolls for her while she snuggled up to him to pat his black hair. They took walks together, roamed the field and picked wild flowers.

"When it came time to leave, the little girl waited with the others. When Firpo appeared she started to cry and ran to him with open arms. Firpo kneeled and kissed her forehead and she showered kisses on his black hair. He put his hand into his pocket, pulled out and handed her—a shiny nickel."

GIANTS BLANK ROBINS.

New York, June 5.—Successive doubles by Southworth and Farrell in the ninth inning broke up a pitchers' battle today, the Giants winning by 1 to 0. Kent Greenfield allowed but three scattered hits and fanned eight batters. Jess Petty, who had downed the McGrawmen three times this season, gave eight hits, Young getting three singles and Farrell a single along with his two-bagger.

CARDS WIN DOUBLE.

Philadelphia, June 5.—Philadelphia dropped into last place in the National league today by losing a doubleheader to the Cardinals 4 to 0 and 7 to 4. Flint Rhem hung up his ninth win of the season by blanking the Phils with six scattered hits in the first game. Hornsby hit a home run with one on base in the first inning of the opening fray. In both contests Philadelphia's rescue pitchers stopped the Cardinals in their tracks.

Jack To Appear Before Judge

Colorado Springs, Colo., June 5.—(AP)—With the matter of a summer training camp settled, Jack Dempsey today prepared to return to California to settle another matter, a speeding charge preferred against him at Madeira, March 25, after a traffic officer claims to have clocked the champion's automobile reeling off 65 miles an hour. The heavyweight champion's decision to iron out the speeding charge came shortly after he selected Camp Vigil, a mountain resort near here, as the scene of his labors in whipping himself into shape for his titular bout next fall.

His chauffeur recently was fined $50.

The training camp which Dempsey hopes to occupy by June 25, is located in the mountains within an hour's motoring distance of Colorado Springs and at an altitude of 8,000 feet. He declared that he believed the high altitude would prove beneficial in developing his "wind."

Swedish Bowler Wins World Title

Stockholm, Sweden, June 5.—(AP)—Hugo Lillier, of Sweden, today won the world's championship for individual play in the international bowling tournament. He scored 829 points.

Fred Gerdes, of New York, was second with 814, and Joe Blechinger, New York, third, 804. Joe Fliger, Chicago, finished ninth with 763 points.

In the combined three meetings Joe Blechinger was best man with 2,345 points and Lillier, Sweden, second with 2,330.

INDIANS SWAMP YANKS.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 5.—The New York Yankees today sustained their worst defeat of the year, being beaten 15 to 3 by Cleveland.

The contest was replete with unusual happenings. In addition to holding New York to six hits, Pitcher Buckeye, of Cleveland, made two singles, a double and a home run in four times at bat and started a triple play in the seventh inning.

The bases were filled when Koenig hit a line drive to Buckeye. The latter's throw to Lutzke caught Gazella off the bag and Lutzke's throw to Burns found Paschal some distance away.

In the third inning Babe Ruth made his nineteenth home run of the season, five days ahead of his 1921 record. There was one on at the time.

George Burns, who leads the league in doubles, made his 21st and 22nd two-base hits of the year, and Meusel, leading base stealer, stole his 12th base.

Prior to today Pennock, who was knocked off the rubber in the sixth inning, had won eight games in a row. On the other hand, it was the first game started by Buckeye that he finished.

U. S. SWIMMERS GET BURGESS FOR TRAINER

Boulogne, June 5.—(AP)—Two American girls who will attempt to swim the English channel this year have engaged T. W. Burgess, who conquered the treacherous waters in 1911, to supervise their training.

In addition to Gertrude Ederle, who failed in her effort last year, Burgess also will coach Lillian Cannon of Baltimore. Miss Ederle already has engaged the tug "Alsace" to accompany her on the attempt, while Miss Cannon will be convoyed by the tug "La Morinie." The latter is expected to make one of the early tries in July, if the weather is suitable.

Dunkirk, the home town of Jeanne Sion, who reached within two miles of the English coast in her channel effort last year, has placed at her disposal the tug "La France," commanded by Captain Lemarie, who convoyed Tirabocchi, the Argentine, in his successful swim of 1923.

Channel experts believe that Miss Ederle and Madame Sion have the best chances among the women accomplishing the feat this year.

Kappa Sigma Frat Wins Sports Cup

Athens, Ga., June 5.—The Kappa Sigma fraternity has just won its third inter-fraternity athletic cup at the university for the present collegiate year. After having taken the basketball and track cups for their trophy room for the year, the wearers of the Star and Cresent have stepped out and won the baseball championship, taking two straight games from the Delta Tau Deltas, 8-7 and 16-3, the other surviving team in the league.

Many Are Entered In Key Tourney

Much interest is being shown in the James L. Key golf tournament, with 86 golfers already registered through Friday. Match play starting June 7 and lasting to the 16. Qualifying ends Sunday, June 6, and pairings will be announced in Monday's paper.

Many handsome prizes are being offered to the winners of each flight, and as many amateur golfers as possible are urged to compete. Information regarding the tournament may be secured from Mr. A. L. Barr, Ivy 8948, or Key clubhouse.

Helen Wills May Not Be Able To Defend Title at Forest Hills

BY RALPH HEINZEN.

Paris, June 5.—The story of how Helen Wills continued pluckily at her tennis game, although ill for weeks, and silently accepted criticism that she was off form and was "going stale," has been revealed by the operation which the little California girl was forced to undergo yesterday.

Helen, meantime, is recovering rapidly, but she will not be able to play in the jubilee matches at Wimbledon and some persons doubt whether she will be in condition to defend her title at Forest Hills. However, Dr. Mourange, who is treating her now, said emphatically tonight that Miss Wills could play by the middle of July. She was recovering "wonderfully," he said, and there was no danger of any complications.

The illness of Miss Wills, climaxed so suddenly by the operation, explains something of her recent falling off in form, and also reveals the spirit of one who played on uncomplainingly, less she be accused of offering an alibi.

Regarded As Stale.

Miss Mary K. Browne, remarking today that she had noticed Helen's slump lately, added:

"I thought she was stale and was suffering from too much tennis. Now I know that the poor little girl was ill and was too game to admit it."

It is likely, therefore, that when the champion thoroughly recovers her game will show a marked improvement over that of the past few weeks.

In the opinion of "Papa" Lenglen, Suzanne's father and trainer, the strain of excessive play since January reduced Miss Wills' vitality and made her an easier victim to disease. Lenglen Pere always forces his daughter to take a long rest after every hard tournament. Miss Wills has the benefit only of a professional trainer, whose interest is apt to be less personal than financial. Suzanne's mother and father both expressed keen regret over the American's misfortune and intend to visit her at the hospital.

Causes Ticket Slump.

Helen's withdrawal from the Paris matches has caused a tremendous crash in ticket sales. Mlle. Lenglen's triumphs have become monotonous and are a poor drawing card. The management, the caterers and others face a heavy loss, as they had counted upon the finals between Helen and Suzanne offsetting three days of bad weather.

Miss Wills' retirement also has forced the reorganization of the entire American team which will play at Wimbledon. Elizabeth Ryan and Vincent Richards and Mary K. Browne and Howard Kinsey will pair in the mixed doubles. Miss Ryan and Miss Browne will constitute one team in the women's doubles and a partner will be found for Mary Zinderstein Jessup. It is probable that Mrs. Molla Mallory will be asked to join the team.

The effect of Miss Wills' illness has had a most depressing effect among both Americans and Europeans. Her popularity is evident from the hundreds of messages that come to the American hospital at Neuilly, the heaps of flowers and the inquiries addressed to Americans everywhere, "How is little Helen?"

Suzanne Sends Bouquet.

With a bouquet from Suzanne Lenglen at her bedside, Miss Wills chatted with her nurse this afternoon and planned for her resumption of active tennis play. Helen insists she can play at Wimbledon, but her mother and the doctors realize it would be imprudent for her to attempt match play before a month and a half. The California girl and her nurse spent some time today planning a practice campaign which Helen hopes will put her in condition to retain her title at Forest Hills.

Throughout the day, a stream of visitors called at the hospital, including Mlle. Lenglen and Didi Vlasto, to inquire about Helen's condition, or leave flowers. Borotra and La-Coste, the French stars, and the whole American team called at the hospital before going to the matches at the racing club.

Mary K. Browne, who was allowed to spend several minutes in the bed room, carried the news to the others that Helen had recovered her characteristic "poker face" poise and was confident she would be able to play at Wimbledon.

THREE AMERICANS WIN FRENCH MATCHES.

Paris, June 5.—(AP)—Three American victories and one defeat marked today's play in the international hard court tennis championships.

Miss Elizabeth Ryan and Miss Mary K. Browne defeated Mlles. Deslandes de Danoet and Vercken; Vincent Richards and Howard Kinsey eliminated Mme. Danet and Hirsch, and Miss Ryan, this time paired with Kinsey, won in the mixed doubles from Mme. Vaussard and F. Poulin.

On the red ink side of the ledger Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup, paired with Lord Cholmondeley, lost a close fight to Jean Washer, of Belgium, and Mlle. Contoslavos.

The result of this match was in doubt until the last minute of play. It was Mrs. Jessup's third defeat of the tournament, as she was beaten in the singles by Mme. Matthieu and in the doubles, paired with Isabella Mumford, by Mme. Danet and Mlle. Vlasto.

Helene Contoslavos, by defeating her cousin, Didi Vlasto, in the singles, 6-2, 6-2, takes second place in the French women's ranking, which heretofore she had held jointly with her opponent. She is favored to defeat Mlle. K. Rouman, of Holland, in the third round, and to meet Mrs. L. A. Godfree, the former Kitty McKane, in the semi-finals.

Jean Borotra captured a long drawn match from A. H. Fyzee, 6-2, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3, 6-1.

LENGLEN NOT TO PLAY IN U. S.

Paris, June 5.—(AP)—"I will never play in the United States again," Suzanne Lenglen said today when asked if she was planning on entering the Forest Hills tournament.

The French star declared that the climate of the northern United States, like that of the Riviera, did not agree with her and that if she makes another voyage there it will be as a visitor and not as a player. Mlle. Lenglen asserted that she would play in the Wimbledon championships without fail.

RUSSELL WINS FROM SCHOLZ IN TWO RACES

New York, June 5.—(AP)—Hank Russell, of Cornell, intercollegiate sprint champion, twice outstepped Jackson V. Scholz, veteran international star, in two events at the annual spring games of the New York A. C., today.

After being nosed out by inches in a 100-yard dash by Raymond Whelan, of the New York A. C., a four-yard handicap man, Russell scored a sensational victory in the 220-yard dash. The Cornell man, on scratch with Whelan and Scholz, caught the latter ten yards from the tape in a thrilling finish. Whelan finishing third. The time was 22 2-5 seconds.

Scholz could get no better than fourth place in the century, where he started on scratch with Russell. Craig Lavin, of Yale, and the New York A. C., another four-yard handicap starter, finished third. Winner was clocked in ten seconds.

The half-mile race was run in two sections. Johnny Holden defeating his clubmate, George Marsters, in one test, and Phil Edwards, a New York boy, with an 18-yard start, winning the other. Edwards led Eddie Swinburne, of Georgetown, who received an eight-yard handicap, while Joe Campbell, of Columbia, scratch starter, was third. Holden was timed in 1:58 2-5. Edwards in 1:55 4-5.

Cliff Hoffman, of Leland Stanford, won the shot put with a heave of 47 feet, 8 1-2 inches, but his team-mate, Robert King, intercollegiate high jump champion, finished second in a handicap event, jumping six feet, two inches. The winner was C. Hackl, New York, who turned in a mark of six feet, four inches, with the aid of a four-inch handicap.

Hodge Is Placed On Retired List

New Orleans, June 5.—(AP)—New Orleans today lost the services of the only Southern association pitcher with a perfect record when "Shovel" Hodge asked to be placed on the retired list. The hurler, who had won a pair of games this season, said the stress of personal business demanded more of his time.

WOMAN IS TREATED FOR POISON DRAUGHT

Mrs. T. C. Butler, 24, of 25 West Peachtree place, was treated at Grady Saturday night for poison from permanganate of potash, which, according to information given to hospital attaches, she took with suicidal intent.

Despondency over inability to find employment was said to have been the reason for the attempted suicide. Mrs. Butler, at her own request, was allowed to return home after receiving treatment.

JACK TO FACE SPEED CHARGE IN CALIFORNIA

Colorado Springs, Col., June 5.—(AP)—With the matter of a summer training camp settled, Jack Dempsey today prepared to return to California to settle another matter, a speeding charge preferred against him at Madera, March 25, after a traffic officer claims to have clocked the champion's automobile reeling off 65 miles an hour.

His chauffeur recently appeared before Justice L. E. Bailey and was fined $50.

BARONS DOWN VOLS.

Birmingham, Ala., June 5.—Birmingham took the edge in the week-end series with Nashville today by defeating the Volunteers 9 to 7, in a slugging match marked by the appearance of five pitchers. The Barons bunched hits in the eighth to score eight runs.

Featuring the attack of the two clubs were home runs by Bates, of the visitors, and Judd, Baron pitcher. West hit a triple, while Conray and Chapman, also of Birmingham, collected two-base hits.

Marking the performance afield was the work of Gillis, Baron shortstop, who made ten putouts and five assists without an error.

ANOTHER GUNN

Will Gunn, captain of the O'Keefe Junior High school golf team, which won the junior high tournament at Druid Hills Saturday, is shown holding the two trophies presented the winners of the tournament. The big loving cup was offered by The Constitution to the winning team, and the other trophy was given by the Orange Crush company to the low individual scorer. Will Gunn, besides leading his school to victory, won the Junior High school golf championship for himself. He is a brother of Watts Gunn, member of the American Walker cup team in England. Young Gunn is regarded as one of the best juvenile golfers in the city.

Hornsby Predicts .350 Will Top '26 Batting

From Rogers Hornsby, premier fence-buster in the National league for six straight seasons, comes an open statement announcing the decline of swatting. He has made a close study of batting this spring and he sees a ball minus the familiar dynamite and curves that are handled with better control from the hill through the application of resin. Between them—a ball that has lost much of its power and resin—Hornsby predicts the end of .400 averages.

When Hornsby discusses baseball he does not go in for high-powered oratory. He sticks to facts and figures and he talks so that the youngest busher understands him. In predicting the end of terrific hitting he picks a page or two from his own experiences this season.

A Sharp Decline.

And his own figures display a sharp decline in hitting. A year ago Hornsby was bouncing along in the .400 class. He is 50 points below his last season's average. It is not because he is not swinging up to last year's mark that the manager of the St. Louis Cardinals offers his prophecy of a slump in fence busting. He shows where many other noted sluggers have felt the change in the National league.

Hornsby also deals with the far past in making his comparisons in hitting. He talks of the days when .350 was considered the top mark and until he spurted up to .370 and then advanced to the .400 set, but one average over .350 topped the National league in hitting since 1906.

Heine Zimmerman reached .372 in 1912, but there was one year when Larry Doyle was the leading hitter with .320 and another when the late Jake Daubert wore the crown with .329.

Then came the arrival of Hornsby in 1920 with .370. He reached .397 in 1921, .401 in 1922, .384 in 1923, the record mark of .4235 in 1924 and .403 in 1925.

For 1926 Hornsby says: "I look for the leading batters to drop back to .350."

Poles 39 Homers.

If Hornsby's own batting is to be judged as the example then he will not be out of line for he has not been driving base hits out of the lot, rattling outfield fences with terrific line drives this spring as he did for six straight years.

In 1925 Hornsby poled 39 home runs in 138 games which is an average of one circuit smash every fourth game. For 1926 Hornsby smashed but one home run in his first 35 games. If that isn't an unusual slump then what is?

And Hornsby explains it all with—the dead ball and resin.

"Don't let anybody tell you they haven't done something to the ball," said Hornsby in giving his views on the decline in hitting. "I have put the same amount of power behind my swings this spring as in the past and the outfielders pull down my drives. A batter gets the feel of a ball that is hit with the thick of the wood. Almost from the moment the ball crashes off the bat the batter knows when he has hit a home run.

"And I can tell you I have hit many that felt like home runs only to see outfielders reach them. The ball isn't going as far as it formerly did.

Slow Bouncing Ball.

"Another thing—take balls that are hit through the infield. When the ball was full of life it skipped off the bat and with one hop shot past infielders. Now there are two and three hops giving infielders chance to get over and field the ball. The ball doesn't zip through the infield any more.

"The loss of these infield hits will reduce the average of the batters. I will bring up this point—compare the league average of the eight teams at the end of this season with the combined average of 1925 and see if it is as high as a year ago."

With a set of the last collection of National league averages at hand Hornsby compiled the statistics and saw that the eight teams in the National league have an average of .268 with 2,240 hits and 8,283 times at bat.

In 1925 the league average was .291, the eight teams driving out 12,495 hits in 42,859 times at bat.

"Curve ball pitching has improved," continued Hornsby. "That was expected when the resin bag was introduced. I am not opposing this resin I am simply giving another point that will reduce fencebusting.

Help to Pitchers.

"Pitchers are able to control their curves better by rubbing the gloss of the ball with resin and rubbing it on their fingers. I have seen curve ball pitchers with almost perfect control this season when for years they were extremely wild.

"Take this fellow Carlson of the Phillies. See if he doesn't become one of the best pitchers in the league. He has a wide curve and a humpbacked curve that are difficult to hit. For several years when he got in the hole with his batter he went back to the straight fast one. He can cut any corner with his curve now and all of us know it is harder to sock a good curve than a straight fast one.

"I doubt whether I have seen five straight fast balls buzz past me this season. Controlling their curves pitchers are gaining confidence and they aren't afraid to use the curve any more.

"With the resin and dead ball the batter isn't going to set any new fence-busting records. Unless a curve is caught in the center of the bat it isn't going to travel as far as the fast ball.

Babe Ruth's Hitting.

"Of course, I probably will be told about Babe Ruth's home run hitting, but the Babe isn't an ordinary hitter. And don't forget they aren't using resin in the American league. With his power, the Babe can send his drives out of the park when he connects but how many batters in the National league have a physique like the Babe's?

"Ruth is a home run hitter any time he swings but with batters like Jim Bottomley, Ray Blades, Zack Wheat, Billy Southworth, Hazen Cuyler, Max Carey, Frankie Frisch, George Kelly, Emil Meusel, Pie Traynor, Jack Fournier, George Harper hitting drops off many points against the combination of resin and the dead ball.

Will Take .350.

"I am not claiming any personal glory for myself. I hope to be able to lead the National league again this season for my ambition is to tie Cobb's record of nine straight. But I am not setting .400 as my goal any more. I'll take .350 and doubt whether there will be more than one or two to pass that figure."

In 1925 there were 55 in the National league listed at .300 and up and in last week's average there were but 14 players considered regulars in the .300 class.

Those who have watched Hornsby batting day after day since the 1925 season opened agree with him that the base hits are not going as far as in other seasons. His home run hitting of one in 35 games compared with an average of one every four games in 1925 is sufficient proof supporting the forecast of a sharp drop in fencebusting.

STRIB, PAUL FACING TEST AFTER BATTLE

New York, June 5.—One of the severest tasks ever imposed upon a champion will confront the winner of the Berlenbach-Stribling light-heavyweight title bout at Yankee stadium next week.

Since the New York state athletic commission has ruled that the winner must box Jack Delaney at Ebbet's field June 22, it means that either Berlenbach or Stribling will have to go up against the hard-hitting French-Canadian with less than a fortnight's rest and training.

It is a fine break for Delaney, one which if actually put into effect should make the Bridgeport boxer light-heavyweight champion of the world. Many are of the opinion that Jack can whip either Stribling or Berlenbach without such a handicap.

A fighter brings himself to the peak of condition for a championship bout and then, barring a sudden ending, goes through a gruelling contest in which he receives considerable punishment. Usually he is entitled to at least a month's rest before he even has to think of pulling on a glove again and starting off on another training grind. To have to fight as powerful an opponent as Delaney within 12 days is an impost which it is doubtful if either Berlenbach or Stribling can carry.

Stribling, if he beats Berlenbach and wins the title next week, might well balk at the commission's ruling. Berlenbach will have no chance to do so. Paul, or his manager Dan Hickey, let him in for it by signing two contracts, one to meet Stribling June 10, another to box Delaney June 22. The New York commissioners, invited to arbitrate, decided that both bouts should be held, except that if Stribling beats Berlenbach he must give Delaney a shot at the title.

Stribling has never met the Bridgeport boxer. He is possibly as scientific as Delaney and fully as rugged. But he never has displayed the sleep-producing wallop which the French Canadian packs in his right hand.

Delaney, the best example of a combination of fighter-boxer in the ring today, has knocked out Berlenbach once and lost a 15-round decision to the present champion another time.

Berlenbach is a great natural fighter, slow and ponderous, but possessing courage and dogged persistence and the most punishing left hand in the

RICKARD ROW WITH MENTORS IS POSTPONED

New York, June 5.—(AP)—Tex Rickard and James A. Farley, chairman of the state athletic commission probably will not come to grips over the Dempsey-Tunney-Wills situation for another 10 days. This was indicated today by Rickard's statement that he likely would not go before the commission next Tuesday, as he originally planned, to discuss his plans for a heavyweight title bout in September.

Rickard declined to say whether this shift in his schedule was prompted by Farley's ultimatum to the promoter yesterday in which the commissioner threatened Rickard with disbarment for continuing arrangements to match Dempsey with Tunney instead of Wills.

The promoter intimated, however, that he is concentrating his efforts preparing for the Berlenbach-Stribling light heavyweight championship battle next Thursday at the Yankee stadium preferring to shelve his Dempsey affair until it is all over. Rickard expects the light heavyweight tilt to draw a gate of close to $250,000.

Hartz Leading Speeding Aces

Washington, June 5.—(AP)—Harry Hartz is leading American automobile racers for the 1926 American automobile championship, the association announced today after checking points made in the Indianapolis race on Memorial day.

Hartz has 1740 points aainst Peter de Paolo's 1,250. Frank Lockhart, winner of the Indianapolis race, has 800 and is in third place. Other scores are: Bennie Hill 552; Earl Devore 535; Bob McDonough 347; and Fred Comer 233.

Lockhart's official time for the 400 miles of his winning race was given as 4:10:17.95 and his average speed 95.885 miles an hour.

North Randall Has Great Card

Cleveland, June 5.—(AP)—Fourteen late closing events with purses totaling $20,000, are on the program for the eighteenth annual grand circuit meeting which opens at North Randall July 5. None of the events will be raced at less than a mile and a race started will not be postponed.

The purses, ranging from $1,200 to $2,500 are in addition to early closing events which will bring the winning horsemen approximately $23,000.

Should rain interfere with the racing program all events, although only one heat may have been contested, will be declared finished. The judges shall distribute the money according to the standing in the summary.

All events will be raced under the American Trotting association revised rules which provide that every heat is a record.

Flowers Is Hurt As Car Overturns

Rome, Ga., June 5.—(AP)—"Tiger" Flowers, negro middleweight champion, was slightly hurt today when his automobile he was driving overturned on a curve on the Rome-Birmingham road six miles from here.

Flowers was dazed and slightly bruised. He said the automobile left the road when he applied the brakes as he rounded the curve. The machine overturned several times.

The negro was returning to Atlanta from Hot Springs when the accident occurred.

Brother of Famous Watts Gunn Leader Of Victorious Team

BY CLARENCE NIXON.

Will Gunn, Jr., son of Judge Will Gunn and brother of the illustrious Watts Gunn, of international golfing fame, Saturday proved himself worthy of the family name when he not only led the O'Keefe Junior High school golf team to the city championship and proprietorship of the large loving cup given by The Constitution, but turned in the lowest medal score recorded in the tournament to take the individual city Junior High championship.

The tournament, the first ever held by the city's junior high schools, was played over the Druid Hills golf course, and was so successful in every respect that it is to be made an annual affair.

Young Gunn, who is only 15 years old, turned in an 82 over the difficult course, and if the form he showed Saturday is any indication, he might have included his big brother in the list of his victims. The 82 gave him the championship, and a cup given by the Orange Crush company.

With G. W. Torrence, John Sullivan, and John Cheshire turning in scores of 88, 93 and 108 respectively, O'Keefe's total score was 371, 17 below that of Joe Brown Junior High, which finished second with 388. Hoke Smith was third with 401, just two strokes ahead of Bass Junior High.

To Professor J. H. Smith, principal of Bass High, goes a big share of the credit, as he organized and arranged the tourney and prizes.

PROGENY OF GREAT MAN OF WAR AGAIN WIN

Belmont Race Track, N. Y., June 5.—The strain of Man O' War, the great American race horse who was retired several years ago when none in the world could be found to beat him, apparently is going to figure importantly on the American turf.

His progeny, Crusader and American Flag, ran one-two today in the fortieth running of the Suburban handicap. This was not the first time that sons and daughters of Man O' War had walked away with first and second places in a valuable race, but each repetition makes the influence of heredity more impressive.

ROSENBLOOM BEATS SHADE BY DECISION

New York, June 5.—(AP)—Dave Shade, of California, outweighed by nine pounds, tonight received a setback at the hands of Maxie Rosenbloom, losing a judge's decision to the New York middleweight in a 10-round fight at the Queensboro stadium.

The men fought at a furious pace, although at no stage was either in danger of a knockout. The margin of Rosenbloom's victory was considered exceptionally close, and the verdict of the judges was unfavorably received by many of the spectators. Shade weighed 155; Rosenbloom 164.

Newspapermen at ringside gave Shade a slight edge on points going into the final round, when Rosenbloom staged a whirlwind rally, carrying the fight to the Pacific coast man and landing heavily with both hands. Shade's plucky battle against his heavier opponent drew a big ovation for him at the finish.

In the 10-round semi-final, Allentown Johnny Leonard received the judges' decision over Mike Ballerino, of Bayonne, N. J., former junior lightweight champon.

Leonard's victory was decisive, his foe being several times apparently on the verge of a knockout. Ballerino was knocked through the ropes with a right uppercut in the fifth.

Leonard weighed 126; Ballerino 128.

Tilden, Watson Win in Doubles

New Haven, Conn., June 5.—(AP)—William T. Tilden II, of Philadelphia, national tennis champion, and Charles F. Watson, III, Yale captain, won the Connecticut tennis doubles championship in a hardfought match here today. They defeated A. H. Chapin, Jr., of Springfield, Mass., who yesterday won the state singles championship by taking three straight sets from Tilden, and H. H. Hyde, of Hartford, a semi-finalist in the singles contest.

Crusader Wins Belmont Race

New York, June 5.—(AP)—Two gallant sons of the great Man-o'-War led a field of nine thoroughbreds in the classic suburban handicap at Belmont today, with Crusader four lengths ahead of American Flag in the mile and a quarter dash. King Solomon's Seal finished third, a length behind American Flag, while H. P. Whitney's Macaw was fourth.

Crusader, permitting King Solomon's Seal and Macaw to make the pace, swung into the lead just before the stretch and finished with a great burst of speed to win in the excellent time of 2 minutes 3 seconds. The victory was worth $13,150 to the winner, while $2,500 went to American Flag and $1,000 to King Solomon's Seal.

Sheehan Dropped By Pirate Clan

Pittsburgh, June 5.—(AP)—Pitcher Tom Sheehan, obtained by Pittsburgh from Cincinnati last year, was released outright today to the Kansas City club of the American association. Sheehan was traded to the Pirates for Al Niehaus, first baseman. Before joining the majors Sheehan pitched for St. Paul and Atlanta.

Alonso Winner In Net Tourney

Philadelphia, June 5.—(AP)—Manuel Alonso won the Pennsylvania singles lawn tennis championship here today, defeating Stanley Pearson of the Philadelphia Cricket club in the final match, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2, 9-7. Pearson shortly before had engaged in a three-hour battle to eliminate John Howard, of Baltimore, 6-8, 6-4, 16-14. Alonso reached the final by beating Fritz Mercur, of Bethlehem, 6-1, 6-2.

British Experts Overwhelm American Professionals

English Golf Stars Take 8 Out of 10 Matches to Win Cup

Wentworth, Eng., June 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—Overwhelmed in a riot of magic golf, America's team of 10 professionals captained by Walter Hagen, was vanquished, 13 1-2 to 1 1-2 points, in the two-day matches against British professionals headed by Ted Ray in the competition for the Ryder cup.

Of the five foursomes played yesterday and ten singles contested today at Wentworth, the United States won only one match, Bill Mehlhorn defeating Archie Compston, while Emmet French managed to halve with Ernest Whitcombe, thanks to a masterly finish, but in every other contest the British players scored.

Americans Routed.

The American rout, which began with the foursomes and continued uninterrupted in the singles over the hills and valleys of this picturesque court, left Hagen's warriors strewn over greens so far distant from the clubhouse that it was with great difficulty they reassembled for the speech-making ceremonies by Ambassador Houghton.

Never in history of international golf matches between Great Britain and the United States have the Americans taken such a drubbing. Only one American ever was up on his opponent and only two matches reached the home green.

The Results.

Singles:

Abe Mitchell defeated Jim Barnes, 8-7.

George Duncan defeated Walter Hagen, 6-5.

Arthur Havers defeated Fred McLeod, 10-9.

Fred Robinson defeated Cyril Walker, 5-4.

Bill Mehlhorn (American) defeated Archie Compston by one hole.

H. C. Jolly defeated Joe Stein 3-2.

Emmet French and F. R. Whitcombe, all square.

George Gadd defeated Joe Kirkwood, 8 to 7.

Arthur Boomer defeated T. D. Armour, 2 and 1.

Ted Ray defeated Al Watrous, 7 and 5.

In the foursomes played, Great Britain won all five matches, as follows:

Ted Ray and Fred Robson defeated Cyril Walker and Fred McLeod, 3 and 2.

Aubrey Boomer and Archie Compston defeated Tommy Armour and Joe Kirkwood, 3 and 2.

George Gadd and Arthur Havers defeated Bill Mehlhorn and Al Watrous, 3-2.

E. R. Whitcombe and H. C. Jolley defeated Emmet French and Joe Stein, 3-2.

Abe Mitchell and George Duncan defeated Walter Hagen and Jim Barnes, 9-8.

Presented With Medals.

"We are losing our hold on the British lion's tail," said Ambassador Houghton in presenting the medals to the players. Then he tried to make the men who represented America feel a little better by saying "the medals were being handed out by "the world's worst golf player, bar none." But a number of Hagen's men disputed that distinction, which they contended should be theirs after their fruitless efforts of today and yesterday.

It is conceded that the play of the British team was superb and if it can be duplicated in the British open championships a fortnight hence, the open championship is likely to come back to the old country.

In the foursomes, Mitchell and Duncan severely punished Barnes and Hagen, and what they did collectively they repeated individually today. Mitchell was miraculous, and the only consolation for "Long Jim" Barnes is that in all probability no man would have stood up against the British star and won today.

Barnes Is Beaten.

Finishing the first round with two up, he took Barnes out again in the second and was 4 up in the seventh. Mitchell won the eighth in two, the ninth in three, the tenth in three, and the eleventh in four, all of which were birdies, and although Barnes got par scores on each hole, he lost every one of them.

Duncan was just as superior to Hagen, and so it was all down the line until late in the evening when Mehlhorn and French brought their opponents to the last green and saved America from being completely goosegozed.

Hagen played poor golf against Duncan. After being four down at the end of the first round, he picked up his ball at the thirteenth hole in the afternoon as a token of surrender.

"There is no fun playing with Walter when he can't sink his putts," said Duncan after winning.

The airtight twirling of Florrid and the hitting of Stephens and Davenport enabled the Ku Klux Klan to down Whittier Mills, 8 to 4. Stephens bagged four hits, two of them going for the circuit while Davenport also laced one out for four sacks. Whittier Mills was on top until the 4th inning when the Knights came from behind to tie the score.

Stewart Avenue slugged its way to a 16-to-3 win over Foote & Davies at Adair park Saturday afternoon. Goodbath held the Printers well in hand throughout the game, while Akin with a home run and Gibson with four hits out of five times up, led with the stick. McCutcheon also hit and played a triple and three doubles, led the attack and was nobly assisted by Bell, with a double and two singles. Appling and Bostwick connected for a brace of singles to help the cause. The snappy infield work displayed by White, Jones and Bell also featured for Orchard Knob and helped hold the Calvary outfit to three runs. E. Jones played best for Calvary, with a double and two nice catches in the outfield.

HELPING THE YOUNGSTERS

John Contos, matchmaker for the charity wrestling and boxing show to be staged at the city auditorium Tuesday night, snapped while visiting one of the charitable institutions for which the show is being staged. Gathered around the matchmaker are a few of the orphan inmates of the home. Contos has engaged some of the foremost wrestlers in the game for the big show along with some well-known boxers. All returns of the evening will be turned over to the many charitable homes of Atlanta.

Penn State Beats Pitt Tracksters

Pittsburgh, June 5.—(AP)—The University of Pittsburgh suffered one of the most overwhelming defeats in the history of track and field sports at the institution when Penn State won today's meet, 99 2-3 to 35 1-3.

The Nittany Lion scored every point but one in the eight track events. In the 100, 220, 440, half-mile, one-mile, two-mile races and the 220-yard low hurdles they finished in one-two, three order. A third place in the 120-yard hurdles was the best Pitt could do.

Dick Peel Going Great in Florida

Richard (Dick) Peel, former University School for Boys baseball and basketball star, who worked out with the Crackers for several afternoons at Spiller field, has reached his stride as a pitcher in the Florida State league, according to news received in Atlanta.

Great Classic Won By Cinder Artists Of Colorado Town

BY GEORGE COFFEE.

Though a little band of athletes from the Colorado town, Fort Collins, Colo., carried away top honors in the giant interscholastic track and field meet at Chicago Saturday, Tech High, of Atlanta, left it's mark on the scorer's sheet by piling up five points through the efforts of Buster Cook, captain of the Smithies; Harry Battle, hurdler, and the Tech High relay team.

Cook took third place in the quarter-mile classic after being penalized for a false start and being unfortunate enough to draw the twenty-ninth lane for the start. He spurted to the front in the first leap but had to be contented with a third place when his reserve strength failed on the stretch.

Battle ran a good race in the low hurdles, beating men who have better records than he has. The Atlantan took third place.

The time of the Tech High relay team was fifth fastest and won them another point in the total.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN ATHLETES TRIUMPH.

Chicago, June 5.—(AP)—A little band of rugged athletes from Fort Collins, Colo., on the fringe of the Rockies, today won the national interscholastic track and field championship for the second consecutive time.

The Colorado mountaineers captured the title from a record-breaking field of 877 athletes from 190 high schools in 30 states, in two days' competition in which a world's interscholastic record was smashed and three others were equalled.

They won by scoring 18 of their 24 points in field events.

East High, Columbus, Ohio, was second with 17; Senn High, Chicago, third, 14; Maine Avenue High, San Antonio, Tex., fourth, 13; Vernon, Tex., fifth, 11, and Wenatchee, Wash., sixth, with 10. Senn's three athletes came through with flying colors, winning two firsts and a second place.

The other points were divided as follows:

Bristow, Okla., 8; Central Hilgh, Kansas City, 7; Westport High, Kansas City, 7; Carroll, Iowa, 6 1-2; Muncie, Ind., 6; Tilden, Chicago, 6; Wichita, Kas., 5; Emerson High, Gary, Ind., 5; Lockhaven, Pa., 5; Little Rock, Ark., 5; Cambridge, Neb., 5; Michigan City, Ind., 5; Prescott, Wash., 5; Atlanta, Ga., 5; Arcadia, Fla., 3; Oneida, S. D., 5; Dallas, Tex., 5; Central High, Fort Worth, 4 6-7; Eldorado, Ill., 4; Sweet Springs, Mo., 4; South High, Grand Rapids, 4; Jonesboro, Ark., 4; Elgin, Ill. 4; Belmore, Ind. 4.

More than half of Fort Collins' points were scored by Danny Beattie, a young giant, weighing 194 pounds and standing six feet two inches. Beattie, competing for the last time for his school, was the highest individual point winner, piling up 12 in four events. He won the discus, finished third in the hammer and shot, and picked up fifth place in the 120-yard high hurdles.

Kiser, of Wenatchee, Wash., and Simpson, of East High, of Columbus, Ohio, each scored ten.

Simpson tied the world's record for the century, breaking the tape a stride ahead of Wilcox, of Westport High, Kansas City, in 09 8-10, and a few minutes later captured the 220-yard dash in 21 8-10. Kiser won the second section of the 880-yard run, reeling it off in 1:58 4-10, and also raced to victory in the first section of the one-mile run.

The world's record breaking performance was the work of Douglas Graydon, of Little Rock, Ark., who in the finals of the field events yesterday, tossed the javelin 199 feet 5 inches. This was more than 12 feet better than the previous interscholastic mark. The other records equalled, besides the century, were the 120-yard high hurdles, and the 880-yard run.

Trumble, of Cambridge, Nebraska, tied the mark for the hurdles by leaping the barriers in 15 4-10, while Crouch, of Vernon, Texas, finished 50 yards ahead of his field to tie the record for the 880-yard run. Crouch was the anchor man on the Vernon relay team, which won the two-mile event.

Druid Hills Presbyterian won a hard-fought, 11-inning game from Edgewood, 7 to 4. The losers rallied and tied the score in the ninth inning, but failed to tally thereafter. Druid Hills got off to a small lead in the second and third inning, while Edgewood was held scoreless until the seventh. Harper went well for the winners and struck out 15. The score was always close with the winners getting 15 hits to 12 for the losers. Goodman led with the stick in getting three out of five. Laird, Holt, Goodman all hit for doubles for Druid Hills, while Chaney and Hall hit for two sacks for the losers.

AMERICAN S. S.

Westminster walloped St. Mark by the decisive score of 22 to 5. The winners scored in every inning except the sixth and eighth and collected 15 hits. McCrorey pitched a fine game and allowed the losers to score in only two innings and gave up eight hits. McCrorey also starred with the bat in getting a home run and a double. Hawkins made three hits out of six attempts. Bond played best for the losers and made one of his two hits go for the circuit.

Malignant Maguire

BY WILLARD COPE

Malignant walked along his beat, stepping Chinamanwise to show he was no ordinary policeman. This step, which he had been at some pains to master, appeared to have been compounded of the back kick of the Charleston, the lope of a selling plater finishing fifth and the jerk of a Ford going over the crest of a hill. Malignant was quite proud of his step; he felt that it set him apart from the ordinary run of coppers . . . which was entirely true. Let there be no doubt on the point. It did.

The buttons of his official blue coat caught the first early rays of the sun as Malignant crossed an alley running beside the granite bulk of the First Hope and Charity National Bank.

"Comes dawn," mused Malignant. "Another day with all its promise. Dew upon the petals. Birdlings all asong."

He stopped, aghast.

There, in front of the bank building and directly beneath a non-parking sign, was a weather-beaten Hispano-Suiza coupe.

"Who dares park under a non-parking sign on the Maguire beat?" demanded Malignant, volubly.

There was no answer. Encouraged, the fearless law stepped to the curb and looked within the coupe. It was unoccupied. He walked to the rear and examined the license tag.

"Just as I thought," announced Malignant. "Another one of those derned Florida cars."

The sound of a loud explosion assaulted his ears. War memories, long dormant, awoke instantaneously and Malignant flung himself on the sidewalk.

"There wasn't any whistle with that one," he complained, generally. "They ought to give you warning."

He waited. As nothing seemed to come of the explosion he rose cautiously after a time and peered around.

His roving glance caught the movement of a figure within the bank. Going to the window, Malignant observed that the man within seemed quite busy. He was standing beside the open door of a large safe and was stuffing packages rapidly into a sack. He seemed to be hurrying . . .

"Ah," grated the enraged Maguire. "So he's the man. I'll show him!"

Malignant watched through the window until the figure appeared to finish his task. As the man threw the bag across his shoulder and picked up a box of tools, preparatory to leaving, Malignant moved quietly to a shadowed place beside the door.

The burdened man came through the bank, passed the tellers' cages, kicked open the door, looked out and then emerged.

"Stop!" roared Malignant. "Don't move."

The startled figure dropped his bundles and thrust both arms overhead.

"You've got me," he admitted, weakly. "I'm caught."

"Keep your hands up," directed Malignant.

He reached into his pocket, drew out a book and pencil and began laboriously to write in the book. At last he finished.

"Here," he told the man, "take this copy of charges and be in Traffic Court at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Now take your bundles and clear out of here."

"Yes, sir," responded the other, courteously. "Thank you very kindly, sir. I'll be there, just as you say, sir."

He took up his heavy sack and tool box, carried them to the waiting coupe and in a moment was driving away in the car.

"I'll learn 'em," boasted Malignant to himself. "I'll learn 'em to park on my beat!"

Poem in "Masses" Adjudged "Obscene," Barred From Mails

New York, June 5.—(AP)—A poem by Hal Saunders White, an instructor in the English department of Yale university in the May issue of The New Masses, published in Greenwich Village, has been adjudged "lewd and obscene" by the postal authorities. An order barring this and subsequent numbers of the magazine from the mails has been issued, it became known today.

STABILATORS REQUIRE LITTLE ATTENTION

One of the sturdiest contrivances of automobile equipment which has come to the attention of the writer is the Watson stabilator, manufactured by the John Warren Watson company, of Philadelphia, and sold by an organization of distributors and dealers covering the larger communities the country over.

Being somewhat impressed with its perfect operation without any attention whatsoever for three years and a half, covering some 27,000 miles, the writer made inquiries of other experiences and found that thousands of users had bettered this record. One case came to light of a Duesenberg car near Pittsburgh which had traveled 160,000 miles without having the stabilators examined or touched for any purpose and which was riding as comfortably as ever with no prospect in sight of requiring attention to the stabilators.

This kind of trouble-less equipment deserves to be popularly known, particularly as the claims made by the manufacturers for complete and constant control of the bounding car springs have proved justified and entirely true.

NEW TEXAS GAS NOT A DISCOVERY

The new Texaco gasoline, to be announced next week by officials of the Texas company, is not a "discovery," says R. C. Holmes, president, but rather a result of a gradual and important development in refinery processes and practices which enables the company to produce a product more nearly meeting the ideal requirements of a motor gasoline without too great a sacrifice in yield or production. Mr. Holmes states that the Holmes-Manley process, while revolutionizing certain phases of gasoline production, is merely the direct result of long and painstaking efforts to produce economically an improved grade of gasoline of better volatility. Such a gasoline must necessarily have, and does have, a pronounced improvement in distillation range. The initial boiling point is between 90 and 100 degrees Fahrenheit and the end point under 400, or between 30 and 40 degrees better than government specification.

The ability to produce high yields of this product, practically the same as heretofore produced of the government specification, has been due entirely to the processes employed, the great care in refining, and accurate control made possible through the new method of production. The new gas contains no chemicals, "and needs none." It has marked anti-knock qualities and is in every way superior to motor gasolines heretofore on the market.

ADMIRAL M'GOWAN IS SERIOUSLY ILL, SAY PHYSICIANS

Columbia, S. C., June 5.—(AP)—Rear Admiral Samuel McGowan, head of the South Carolina highway commission and former chief paymaster of the United States navy, is seriously ill at a hospital here, physicians said today.

Admiral McGowan was carried to a hospital yesterday after he became ill on a downtown street. His illness first was attributed to the heat.

Erlanger Declines To Join Huge Theatrical Merger

New York, June 5.—(Special.)—Plans for a great merger of theatrical interests, with a capital stock of $150,000,000, were definitely abandoned here this week when A. L. Erlanger, whose properties were to have been the backbone of the enterprise, announced his firm and irrevocable decision not to join in any such merger.

Mr. Erlanger, in addition to his ownership of the greatest booking system in the world, owns and completely controls a chain of theaters covering the entire country and without his consent, no such merger as that proposed could be possible.

Mr. Erlanger is now engaged in building new theaters in several of the most important theatrical centers of the country. The first two of these to be completed, one here and the other in Atlanta, will be opened in time for the start of the 1926-27 season. They will be known as the "Erlanger" theaters, the name of Mr. Erlanger himself having been chosen for them not, it is pointed out, because of any vanity on Mr. Erlanger's part, but because the splendid record he has made during his career has given great advertising value to the name as a guarantee of worth-while attractions.

Promoters of the unsuccessful merger plan brought every possible argument and influence to bear upon Mr. Erlanger to persuade him to join. They have shown him how for the rest of his life he might enjoy a more than princely income without ever doing another stroke of work. This was just the argument that induced him to stay out.

From the time that Mr. Erlanger opened the first theatrical exchange in Fourteenth street and changed the whole method of booking theatrical attractions in this country and so placed the theatrical business on a new and more stable basis, he has always been the sole director of the enterprises with which his name has been associated. The booking system he originated developed later into what was known as "The Syndicate," but he continued to be its leading spirit and its director.

Today Mr. Erlanger owns that enormous business, lock, stock and barrel, free and clear, and in addition to it or in conjunction with it he owns and controls absolutely, without dictation or interference from any outside capitalist, a chain of theaters that covers this country from one end to the other—from New York to San Francisco and from Maine to the Gulf of Mexico.

He has gained his position by a careful and comprehensive and unremitting personal attention to details. Not a man in his employ—and there are thousands—works harder than he does. When he began he made it a rule to be at his desk at certain hours every week day in the year. He keeps those hours today.

He has found his chief pleasure in the work he has done at his desk and he intends to continue to enjoy himself in the same way. Other wealthy men make a business of their pursuit of pleasure. Mr. Erlanger's pleasure has come to him in his business, and he can see no good reason why now he should go out hunting other means of enjoyment and amusement.

SPEED KING OWNS MOON SPORT ROADSTER

Frank Lockhart, 23-year-old sensation of the automobile racing world, "veritable daredevil," and winner of the great motor classic at Indianapolis May 31, 1926, is the owner of a Moon roadster. Lockhart recently purchased this car from R. C. Sowder, Moon and Diana distributor at El Paso, Texas, during a race meet held at the Juarez, Mexico, track just across from El Paso. At this meet Lockhart won all the first purses in the 1 1-8, 11 2-8, 56 1-4 mile races.

That this automobile racer appreciated the rest and relaxation offered him through the use of a roadster type of personal car after the gruelling punishment undergone in driving 400 miles at terrific speeds is borne out by the fact that Frank Lockhart, newly crowned speed king, likes nothing better than to cruise at comfortable speeds in his Moon roadster.

Lockhart's Moon roadster is equipped with four-wheel hydraulic brakes; came and lever type of high leverage steering gear and a safety lighting control lever mounted on the top of the steering column, all of which are standard equipment on all Moon and Diana cars.

Three Tons of Nails Daily Salvaged At Hudson Plant

One of the great sources of economy in a motor car plant is the salvaging of material formerly considered as waste. When production is high, some large and surprising figures result.

At the Hudson Motor Car Co., which has just installed a huge lumber salvage plant to replace an older one, between five and six thousand pounds of nails are recovered daily as one of the minor by-products. These come from boxes and boards which have been used in shipping various materials into the Hudson plant. The principle salvage product of course, is the lumber, the output of which may run from 75,000 to 100,000 feet a week; so the nails may be considered as a minor by-product of a major by-product. Some of the nails when recovered are in a suitable condition for reuse; the rest are sold as a scrap product.

The Hudson salvage method sorts all incoming boxes and lumber. Many boxes can be used just as they are for shipping out parts or for incidental work around the plant. The rest are sawed up so that all usable lumber is saved from them. The scrap material then left over is fed into a huge grinder which reduces to fragments about the size of shelled corn. This is fed by compressed air into one of the furnaces of the main power plant, where it burns with an exceptionally high speed and intensity. At capacity this material will supply 800 to 1,000 horsepower an hour.

After the material is ground, and while on its way to the furnace, it is led over a series of powerful magnets which search out the daily tons of nails.

The whole process is accomplished by modern machinery, power conveyors and similar automatic methods. The salvaged lumber is made into boxes by automatic nailing machines, using in part nails which it has been possible to straighten.

"It is methods like these," said J. W. Goldsmith, of the Goldsmith-Becker Co., Hudson-Essex distributor, "which make possible the remarkable Hudson-Essex values. Every possible economy is made and the resultant advantages shared with the public."

$125,000 DAMAGE IN KNOXVILLE FIRE

Knoxville, Tenn., June 6.—(AP)—A disastrous fire having its origin on the second floor of the Mynatt building, a four-story structure in the heart of the retail shopping district, gutted it from the cellar to roof, causing an estimated loss of $125,000.

The blaze had been brought under control at 2 o'clock Sunday morning having been confined to the building of origin though threatening for more than an hour to sweep into adjacent structures.

College Park Girl Wins Georgia Honor In Meat Story Contest

Chicago, Ill., June 5.—(Special)—Miss Marie Reaves, a senior in the high school at College Park, took highest honors for the state of Georgia in the third national meat story contest, according to the announcement of winners by the National Live Stock and Meat board, sponsor of the contest. First place for the entire southern district, of which Georgia was a part, went to Miss Otelia Crawford, of Hayesville, N. C. Miss Crawford will receive one of four university scholarships plus a cash award of $50. Miss Ardis Wilden of El Paso, Tex., was declared national champion.

The contest is held annually to assist in broadening the study of meat in high school home economics classes, according to R. C. Pollock, general manager of the national board.

JOHN R. IRWIN TO OPPOSE BROWN

Sandersville, Ga., June 5.—Colonel John R. Irwin, of Sandersville, has announced his intention of becoming a candidate for the office of commissioner of agriculture to succeed the present incumbent, J. J. Brown.

Mr. Irwin is a descendant of Governor Jared Irwin, who presided over the destinies of Georgia 125 years ago.

He is a native of Washington county but was reared in southwest Georgia, where he spent a good many years of his life. He was for several terms solicitor general of the Pataula circuit, represented Terrell county in the house of representatives and also represented the 11th senatorial district in the state senate.

He is at present residing at Sandersville, where he is well and favorably known. A man of keen intellect, a trained mind, a student of human nature, thoroughly familiar with the needs of the farmer and qualified in every way to fill the important office which he seeks.

Colonel Irwin states his platform, which will be forthcoming within the next few weeks, will be based on the main plank of "reorganization" and enactment of laws superseding those under which the department is at present operating.

Simultaneously with the announcement of his intention to make the race for commissioner of agriculture, Colonel Irwin issued the following card:

To the People of Georgia:

In the minds of many citizens of Georgia there seems to be a well-grounded opinion that the agricultural department needs reorganization.

First—It is functioning under laws unsuited to present changed conditions.

Second—It is claimed that the department has become a burden and an expense to the taxpayers, its usefulness and efficiency is discounted, and it is claimed that the upbuilding of the agricultural interest in Georgia is not being promoted.

Third—It is further charged that the department has long since become a political machine (whose influence and support is sought and whose opposition is feared) dominating Georgia politics.

Fourth—Some are so uncharitable as to say that this great department has become the master rather than the servant of the people.

Fifth—It is whispered, subrosa, that for many years this department, through its large number of appointees and patronage, has been able to dictate to the people of Georgia and to name the state house officers and to defeat or elect members of the house and senate.

Sixth—For many years the department by virtue of law, has had the power to appoint ad liberatum, inspectors and servants throughout the state, whose duties are mostly political and who draw good salaries at the expense of the state.

Seventh—Effort has been made to repeal and amend these laws, but the power of the department has defeated every effort in this direction.

Eighth—It is predicted that these conditions cannot be remedied; no progressive or beneficial legislation can be passed or amendments made in this department without a radical change.

I expect to offer as a candidate for commissioner in the coming primary, provided my views meet with the approval of the public.

I believe all patriotic citizens feel that the department could and should be reorganized and laws passed making this department the blessing to the general public as intended.

I will gladly cooperate with the legislature in the passage of any and all laws, taking the department out of politics and placing it on an efficient, economical and a working basis, so that it may be a comfort and benediction to the farmer, as well as a great instrument for the upbuilding of every interest in the state.

STEARNS IS HIGHEST TYPE OF MOTOR CAR

Recent engineering inspection of methods of manufacture employed by F. B. Stearns company, manufacturers of Stearns-Knight motor cars has resulted in their receiving the tribute of representing the highest type of motor car engineering in the United States.

Their plant equipment is classified along with that of the best known European builders whose products are practically all custom built and made to laboratory limits in precision and accuracy.

Much of the newer installations of machinery in the factory of the company is especially built to conform to the exacting requirements of the construction of the Knight sleeve-valve motor as built by them.

The assembly room where the sliding sleeves of the motor are finished and fitted has been termed as more like a scientific workroom than any other motor manufacturing department in the country.

These sleeves are the secret of the efficiency and long life of the Knight sleeve valve power plant. Sliding as they do past each other inside the cylinder walls, they require the utmost precision in their fit and no set of sleeves goes into a Stearns-Knight motor until it has passed through the most exhaustive type of tests.

Once adjusted and fitted, they show no perceptible wear even after hundreds of thousands of miles of running. This is the reason for the silent operation of the power plant and for the build up in power which is a feature of this type of sleeve valve engine as the carbon from the combustion processes in the cylinders slowly seals the spaces between the sleeves.

Farm Relief Fund Cut To Provide Eor Cotton Crops

Washington, June 5.—Forces supporting agricultural relief measures took a new lease on life today when it was announced that Vice President Dawes had taken economic direction of farm legislation.

The announcement was made by Senator Watson, republican, Indiana, after he had attended a conference of farm leaders in and out of congress and at which the vice president was present. The purpose was to agree upon a farm relief measure which it was believed the president would sign.

Those attending the conference indorsed the McNary equalization fee measure, now pending before the senate, with several modifications. They favored reducing the revolving fund from $250,000,000 to $175,000,000, of which $75,000,000 would be used for the disposal of surplus cotton. Another amendment agreed upon would authorize the immediate operation of the equalization fee provision on all of the five basic farm commodities—wheat, cattle, swine, cotton and corn. But the actual operation of the fee would be left in the hands of the producers of any of the commmodities, who would determine by a referendum when they wished it to become effective.

New Willys-Knight Six 'Seventy' Two-Door Sedan

The Willys-Knight Six "Seventy" two-door sedan is now the companion car for the Willys-Knight Seventy sedan, which met with such welcome at the New York Automobile show. All the refinements which are in the sedan are incorporated in the new model. This car is being shown in the display rooms of the Overland company's local branch, 414 Peachtree street.

LARGER QUARTERS FOR PAINT COMPANY

Their business enjoying a steady increase, and having completely outgrown their old home, it was found absolutely necessary for the D. F. M. Smith company, Inc., local automobile painters, to secure large and more accessible quarters and announcement was made the past week of their removal into their new home located at 133 Luckie street.

This new plant, according to Mr. Smith, has been equipped with the very latest and most modern machinery for automotive painting in Atlanta, being especially equipped to take care of lacquer and high-grade varnish jobs, and with more floor space has arranged a system that will enable them to release the cars in quick order.

This company is one of the oldest automotive refinishing plants in Atlanta, having been located in the Georgian Terrace garage for the past ten years, and a phenominal growth in the past few months made it absolutely necessary for them to seek a new home.

Britain Is America's Greatest Export Market

"Britain is the greatest potential export market in the world for American automobiles," declares Forbes Angell, the well-known Detroit auto manufacturer, now at the Savoy hotel, London, conducting an investigation into European car markets.

"One hundred and twenty million dollars a year is being spent on new roads in Britain. The number of automobiles per capita of population in Britain at present is 1 for every 30, but I foresee the day, and a day not far distant, when Britain will rival America, and have 1 auto to every 4 or 5 of population.

"Sales of American cars in Britain this spring have been higher than ever before, and next year, when the annual tax on rated horsepower, which so handicaps American cars in Britain, is removed and a simple gasoline tax imposed in its place, will be the greatest opportunity for American manufacturers to find a great market for their surplus production."

Britain is definitely following the American fashion for the inexpensive grades of closed cars, and British manufacturers are hard pressed to compete with the American productions in this rapidly growing field.

Many Americans who have already visited London this year have made extensive auto tours and declare England to be a motorists' paradise.

"You see more types and changes of scenery in 10 miles on an English country road than in 100 miles anywhere else," said former United States Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan, who has recently spent some weeks in England. "It is truly the motorists' paradise, for he need not travel hundreds of miles a day between cities, and every mile is freshly interesting. I am amazed that there are not already more automobiles in use in Britain, though I am told that their number is increasing rapidly. They should do so, for apart from the scenery, the roads are some of the finest I have ever traveled.

SENATOR WILLIS SEEKS REELECTION ON G. O. P. TICKET

Columbus, Ohio., June 5.—(AP)—United States Senator Frank B. Willis today filed his declaration of candidacy for renomination with the secretary of state. Filing of the senator's nominating petition was his first official announcement that he will seek reelection, though it has been generally understood he would do so.

The only opponent so far entered against Senator Willis for the republican nomination is former state Senator Thomas W. Latham, of Monroeville, Akron county.

Mr. Latham has been at various times a republican, progressive, democrat and again a republican.

If nominated, Senator Willis will be opposed by a democrat to be selected from a field composed of Judge Florence E. Allen of the supreme court; Director of Commerce Cyrus Locher, Charles E. Wharton, of Kenton, and Frank F. Gentsch, of Cleveland, and probably former Senator Atlee Pomerene, who is considering being a candidate.

WILLYS-KNIGHT '70', 2-DOOR SEDAN IS HERE

One of the outstanding features of the spring buying demand is the pronounced trend toward the new Willys-Knight Six "Seventy" two-door sedan, according to the company's officials.

This new model has just been introduced and completes a full line of closed cars in the "Seventy" series. It is the companion car to the Willys-Knight "Seventy" sedan which has enjoyed such popularity since its introduction at the New York automobile show last January.

The "Seventy" two-door sedan and the new "Seventy" coupe recently brought out are built on the same chassis as the Willys-Knight Six "Seventy" sedan and are powered with the Knight sleeve valve motor. This makes the new model one of the fastest, most responsive models on the market.

The two-door sedan has a comfortable seating arrangement for five. It is an ideal car for the woman driver, because of its handling ease. The interior measurements are the same as the "Seventy" sedan, the rear seat being wide, deep and comfortable. The arrangement of the front seats has a marked improvement over similar models, the driver's and passenger's seats being of equal size. They are, however, divided into individual, roomy, restful chair type seats affording the least degree of interference to the driver by a companion passenger.

The rear windows of the two-door sedan are large and unobstructed. This feature affords clearer vision for the rear compartment passengers.

The doors of the new model are unusually wide allowing free passage from and to the rear seat with minimum disturbance to the front seat passengers. The windows in the doors are also wide providing clear vision in all directions. These are crank controlled and may be handily adjusted at any desired level.

The two-door sedan is equipped with the popular one-piece windshield which is a valuable safety factor because of clarity of road view. A rear view mirror, automatic windshield wiper and dome light are other attractive features.

The same horn button and ditch light control system has been incorporated in the two-door sedan as in the "Seventy" sedan, these controls being on the steering post immediately under the wheel and at the finger tips of the driver.

Color scheme of the new model is quiet, smart and pleasing, composed of the two-tone combination as on the coupe and sedan. Black trimming and fenders refine and dignify the two-door sedan while natural wood wheels grace and enliven the running gear. The car is upholstered in gray velour.

"We Like Its Economy" Say Thousands Of Owners

Among the thousands of buyers who have sent Pontiac Six production to world-record figures month after month, are many who previously owned smaller and less powerful cars.

Yet, from every section of the country, come impressive testimonials as to Pontiac's unusual gasoline mileage and its sparing consumption of oil.

The truth is that the operating cost of a Pontiac Six is lower than that of a smaller car of less recent design—or the difference is so slight as to not be worthy of consideration.

There are thousands of Pontiac Six owners who would gladly bear slightly higher operating costs to enjoy the satisfying performance of the car's six-cylinder engine and its countless other superiorities in beauty, roominess, and riding comfort.

But the fact that they enjoy all these qualities at no additional operating or maintenance cost, is simply another reason underlying the dramatic success the Pontiac Six is scoring the nation over.

Oakland Six, Companion to the Pontiac Six—$1025 to $1295. All prices at factory. Easy to pay on the liberal General Motors Time Payment Plan.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

THE POLITICAL EDUCATION OF WOODROW WILSON.

This handsome volume, by James Kerney, editor and publisher of the Trenton Evening Times, with a number of illustrations, is the latest volume about this great American, whom he calls "the most important and internationally famous American since Lincoln." He also quotes from Lord Byron in the introductory:

"Without, or with offense to friends or foes,
I sketch your world exactly as it goes."

Mr. Kerney says in the introduction that this is not an attempt to solve the motives and methods of Woodrow Wilson, but to show his official contacts with every-day human affairs. Among many statements made by the writer are the following.

"Woodrow Wilson's first glimpse of a political convention was in 1910 when he walked upon the platform of the old Taylor Opera house at Trenton to formally accept the nomination for governor of New Jersey.

"Although he lived 24 of his 54 years at Princeton, 10 miles from Trenton, he had never attended a state or county convention. He was never present at a national political convention. He did not own any real estate. He frequently failed to vote even in presidential elections.

"Six months before he became president of Princeton he made the following statement to Dr. Charles Elliott: 'I was born a politician and must be at the task for which by means of historical writing I have all these years been in training.' Another statement was 'All the politics that are in me I learned in New Jersey.' Still another worth remembering is 'No man whom you deeply care for or look to for leadership is made up altogether of gentle qualities. When you come into the presence of a leader of men you know you have come into the presence of fire.' It is said of Mr. Wilson that he was a wholesale dealer in uplift. For the man who has ceased to struggle life is over,' is a statement made on one of his speeches.

The speeches of Woodrow Wilson delivered here and there on different subjects will never be forgotten by his listeners, and it means a great deal to the United States that his addresses, papers, which have been carefully edited by friendly hands, are available. As Mr. Kerney says "it will be by his fourteen points and his league enthusiasm, not by his shortcomings, that history will best remember him. How true the statement by Mr. Kerney that president Wilson 'was his own favorite confidant, at heart a solitary man, 'voyaging through stronge seas of thought alone.'"

The United States of America was the idol of Woodrow Wilson and he watched its forward march through the years of his life in the white house, and no soldier who lost his life on the battlefields of France was a truer or more loyal soldier than Woodrow Wilson, in his love for and pride in the United States of America.

This volume covers the political life of Woodrow Wilson as written by a friend as well as counsellor, and who was with him a great deal all during his presidency, in fact until he was called to pass on from life's battlefields.

Woodrow Wilson truly said of himself: "We live in our visions." He frequently quoted a couplet from the elaborate epitaph that has brought fame to the monument of James Louis Pettigru at Charleston:

"Unawed by opinion, unseduced by flattery, undismayed by disaster,
He confronted life with antique courage and death with Christian hope."

FICTION.

Mary Christmas. By Mary Ellen Chase, with a frontispiece by Maurice Day. The title of the little volume is the name of an Armenian woman, a true representative of her race, who spent her life peddling from village to village. The story of her life is most interestingly told here. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

The Black Flemings. By Kathleen Norris, whose books are the invited guests in thousands of families—she is known and loved by readers of books and readers of magazines everywhere. Someone has made the statement that she is one of the three, or perhaps four, of the most popular novelists in America. (Doubleday, Page & Co., New York.)

The Nest. By Anne Douglas Sedgwick, author of "The Little French Girl," whose collection of short stories, "The Nest," "The White Pagoda," "The Suicide," "Miss Jones" and "The Masterpiece," all of which readers thoroughly enjoyed, and while each of the stories has its own group of characters, its own incidents, its own scenes, each bears such a similarity that it is like the many chapters of a popular novel. (Houghton, Mifflin company, Boston.)

Flight to the Hills. By Charles Neville Buck, whose most interesting story has been written around Cynthia Meade, who went to Asheville, N. C., to take part in a film production. While the outward appearance of this young girl was not very appealing to those with whom she was thrown in contact, she really had the making of a fine woman, but like many men and women, she wanted all the sunshine that life could bring her without the passing clouds. But a catastrophe came, and there was flight to the hills, and it is from this time on that the reader will help in the unweaving of a wonderful plot. (Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, N. Y.

The Sunken Garden. By Nathalia Crane, author of "The Janitor's Boy," which we still remember with pleasure. And now this young author has given free rein to her imagination in a story that will please her readers. It is a real romance with plenty of adventure in which flashes of wit and beauty sparkle like the sunlight on the dewdrop. (Thomas Seltzer, publisher, New York.)

The Trail of Glory. By LeRoy Scott, with an introduction by William T. Tilden, II, who calls it "the greatest sport novel I have ever read."

The story is woven around Jerry McAllister's rise to the tennis championship of the world. In the introduction Mr. Tilden says: "Amateur sport is today on trial, and the author who knows sports and sportsmen—for he is the first and is the second—tells all the ins and outs of tennis playing. He discusses the junior players, whom he calls the champions of tomorrow."

While this story is filled with so much that will interest boys and girls who are now busy following the trail of glory, it is written for all readers who love sports, and especially those who are ambitious to become leading tennis players. (Houghton, Mifflin company, Boston.)

Rio Bravo. A romance of the Texas frontier, the name being the old Mexican name for the Rio Grande river. By Edwin L. Sabin. The historical background is most attractive. A young lieutenant of dragoons is saved from death by the splendid work of a Texas gambler, who gives his life to save the sweetheart of the young lieutenant. It is a most interesting plot in which a young Mexican girl plays the third hand. The story closes with a grand climax and the reader will feel that it is Sabin's best story.

The author writes a most interesting historical introduction that will appeal to any reader of history. (Macrae-Smith company, Philadelphia.)

The Belt of Seven Totems. A story of Massasoit. By Kirk Munroe, with four attractive illustrations by Emlen McConnell. "In the days when the land belonged to the red men" is frequently the introduction of a good Indian story. And no better story has been written than the one which tells about Nahma, son of Longfeather, the Peacemaker, across whose breast was stretched a belt of wampum on which were worked seven figures of a bird, beast and fish—which was called the belt of seven totems.

Critics call this one of the best Indian stories ever told. And the readers will find many explanations of why the little colony at Plymouth was spared, as well as other interesting things. (Lippincott's, Philadelphia.)

For the King. By Alan Douglas, with Jacket by Manning Lee. The story is woven around the mixed identity of twin brothers—one who was a trusted officer in Cromwell's forces, the other King Charles' right-hand man.

It is another story full of historical features that the readers of today are specially interested in. There is plenty of action, a most charming heroine called Mistress Kate, whose life is filled with plenty of work in trying to keep both roundheads and cavaliers from fighting over her instead of King Charles of England. Macrae-Smith Co., Philadelphia.

Proud Revelry. By Amber Lee, author of "The Woman I Am," who simply tells a story which might be a picture of this town and during this year. Anthony Sherrad is the son of a wealthy American family—one whose life, like the usual rich man's son of today, who is not given a half a chance to be the man that he probably would be on account of the atmosphere of his father's home. He is usually started out in his young boyhood by the sight of dancing and drinking parties—cocktails and highballs—with his father as the center of a group of men and women who sip and sip during a long evening of entertainment.

Amber Lee has created the character of Anthony Sherrad—a character that will be quite familiar, and yet the reader will find the story of Anthony's life one of special interest. Is it fiction? Read the story and decide for yourself. Thomas Seltzer, New York.

The Silk Coquette. By Edwin Bateman Morris, author of "The Narrow Street," "Our Miss York," "Mere Man," etc. Roger Markham had been known simply as a member of the president's cabinet, and while there may have been some inquiries about his "affairs," he remained out of the limelight until he could do so no longer without playing mere man.

Roger Markham's young daughter, who was a favorite in the social whirl as her father became in the political world, in some way met Tom Trevor, who immediately fell in love with her, though she was engaged to a wealthy young man of her own social set.

The story rings with realism; it is filled with love, ambition and power. If it were not for the humor that now and then bobs up it would really be a tragic love story. It is written in clever style and finally ends in a strong though emotional romance which is woven around characters whom we daily meet and know. Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.

The Old Home Town. By Rupert Hughes, whose books have always attracted unusual attention among the lovers of fiction, and his last books have been frequently subjects for argument around the library table. For instance, "We Can't Have Everything," and "What's the World Coming To?"

Mr. Hughes has written a story of perhaps 350 pages—all of which is devoted to the family life of Americans. He locates the story in the little town of Carthage, Iowa, which dozes its life away on the banks of the Mississippi river. But little towns sometimes have something to wake them up and this happened to Carthage when it woke up to find that a great dam was being built across the Mississippi whose red waters had silently flowed on and on, and whose old steamboat whistles could not be forgotten.

Carthage puts on new life, business begins to hum, and its citizens begin to wake up to the realization that the stranger had walked in and taken possession of the affairs of the town, in fact of them and their families, and here begins the real subject of this story. It is wonderfully written, the characters are truly human, the adventures and incidents are exciting and the reader will not find it too long in the interest it creates. Harper and Brothers.

A THOUSAND AND ONE NIGHTS OF OPERA.

This handsome volume is perhaps the most complete compilation that has ever been made, for it contains over 1,500 operas and ballets. And more than this, every opera is described, and "told about" in a most interesting style—there's a full account of the plot, description of the music, a discussion of the composer, and the history of the opera.

For instance, the story of "Madama Butterfly—From the Land of the Chrysanthemum." Who wrote it? Giacomo Puccini wrote it after John Luther Long's novel, dramatized by the author and Belasco. And then the storyk o fthis beautiful opera is told, not in condensed form, but every detail described so that it may be studied at length.

"Between the Ages" are operas that do not seem to belong to any one period, therefore these operas are given under the above heading. "The Glory That Was Greece" and "The Grandeur That Was Rome," as well as the operas that come under the head of "The Middle Ages" are quite popular. All ages and periods are classified by the author in a manner that makes it quite easy for the reader. There are two complete indexes of titles and composers, and more than that the most modern operas of all schools are included in the 1,001 operas.

The author has paid special attention to operas by American composers—this being one object "to give an idea of the principal American operas"—to describe the operas produced during the nineteenth century and the first quarter of the twentieth century, and to present the work in a style that it will be of value to the music student, and to the student of musical history. This is a most valuable volume to have in the library of every opera-going home, for without much effort you have an opportunity to study not one, but about 1,500 operas and ballets. (D. Appleton & Co., New York. Price $3.50.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

The Spell of the Turf. By Samuel C. Hildreth and James R. Crowell who tell in a most entertaining manner "The Story of American Racing." Some one said "My kingdom for a horse!" "The thudding of hoofs, the field as it flashes down the back stretch, and around the far turn for the final dash to the wire—a streaking thing of life and speed and courage—what excitement like the finish of a great horse race!"

This book is full of excitement, for it tells the story of race horses that will live forever, of jockeys who have gone down in the history of the turf, of the sportsmen who are known on both sides of the Atlantic, and of lovers of the race track.

The authors have covered a period of fifty years of racing—of the famous horses that were to be seen on the race track. The story is full of thrills, real sporting thrills, and there are few men and women in America today who have not felt the thrill of the race track, for the love of the horse is as strong as the love for the dog and Mr Hildreth, general manager of the famous Rancocas Stable can tell the story of the race track with all the zest and fervor of a true sportsman. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia. Price $4.)

Jazz. By Paul Whiteman, with attractive illustrations in which the author plays a most important part. He tells that the first jazz ever known was played on the streets of New Orleans in 1915—(by a negro band.)—eleven years later there were 300,000 members of jazz dance orchestras in the United States alone.

But we will leave it to Mr. Whiteman to tell his readers all about jazz. He ought to know all about it for his jazz records sell in the millions. He says that "jazz represents America's first serious contribution to music. He not only tells the story of jazz but also his own. (Price $3. J. H. Sears & Co., New York.)

DAN BEARD AWARDED GOLD MEDAL.

Daniel Carter Beard, national Boy Scout commissioner of America, more familiarly known as "Uncle Dan" Beard, has been awarded the gold medal of honor for distinguished service to the American people in the leadership of youth and the development of American character. No small part of this has come through his contributions to the literature of woodcraft, in the form of the numerous books which he has written on outdoor life for boys. Many of these have been published by J. B. Lippincott company in their American Boys Book Series, and includes such well-known works as "American Boys Book of Camp Lore and Wood-craft," "American Boys Book of Wild Animals," etc.

In addition to receiving the gold medal of honor, he was, while in Washington attending the annual convention of Boy Scouts, decorated by President Coolidge with the Order of the Silver Buffalo, as being one of the "Immortals in Scouting." Sir Robert Baden-Powell, another father of the Boy Scout movement and England's chief scout commander, who is visiting this country and who was in Washington at the convention, was likewise decorated. Sir Robert is also an author of distinction, and publishes his books on this side of the water, under the Lippincott imprint.

CURRENT MAGAZINES.

May Number of The Connoisseur.

The May issue of The Connoisseur contains an article on "Ship Models in the Collection of Colonel Henry H. Rogers," by Henry B. Culver, secretary and one of the founders of the Ship Model society in New York. In addition to the usual number of full page color plates, sales records and critical comments, this issue contains the following articles: "Nebot and Boitard; Notes on Two Early Topographical Painters," by C. H. Collins Baker; "Treasure Chests," by Major C. T. P. Bailey; "Carved Nuts and Fruit Stones," by Mrs. F. Nevill Jackson; "Early American Silver Shown at the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D. C.," by C. L. Avery.

Book Exhibition.

Lippincott announces that the "Old Mission Churches and Historical Houses of California" by Rexford Newcomb, designed by Edward Stratton Holloway, which we published a few months ago, was one of the 50 books selected by the American Institute of Graphic Arts in New York, for inclusion in their annual book exhibition of the "Fifty Books of 1926."

Writes in The Middle of The Night.

Anne Parrish is hard at work on a novel to succeed "The Perennial Bachelor" which, by the way, is now selling in its second hundred thousand. She told Harper and Brothers that the new novel is going so well that she often gets up in the middle of the night to write a chapter or two.

Crimes and Diamonds.

Massachusetts admires her governor, Alvan T. Fuller, and sympathized with him thoroughly when the press announced several days ago that Mrs. Fuller had either lost or been robbed of a very valuable diamond bracelet.

Perhaps this loss had something to do with the fact that the governor walked into L. C. Page and company's Beacon street office the other morning and purchased a set of their newly republished Celebrated Crimes (four vols.) by Dumas.

Joel Chandler Harris, printer, novelist, essayist, historian, but chiefly known as the creator of "Uncle Remus" has been honored by Georgia, by Emory university and the Uncle Remus Memorial association. A room for the preservation of his manuscripts and relics has been set aside by the university and the author's home is to be preserved as a shrine. Theodore Roosevelt, when he was president, said, "Georgia never did a greater thing for the union than when it gave Joel Chandler Harris to American literature." His home in Atlanta was called the "Wren's Nest" because he refused to disturb a mother wren nested in his letter box. He was reputed to have never had a complete wardrobe, as some article of clothing was the usual gift to anyone in need of it. "Uncle Remus: His Songs and His Sayings" is obtainable in a special gift edition as well as in the regular edition.

THREE LIVES CLAIMED IN GERMAN FLOODS

Berlin, June 5.—Flood waters in Wurtemberg had claimed three lives, partially interrupted railroad services and flooded many industrial plants, according to reports received here today. The Zeppelin plant at Friedrichshafen and the Maybach Motor works are reported flooded.

1,000,000th Studebaker Produced

The millionth Studebaker automobile made under the corporation's own name is now in use. The above picture shows President A. R. Erskine, of the Studebaker corporation, passing approval on the car—a Standard Six sport roadster. When it came off the assembly line recently, the millionth Studebaker was driven to Mr. Erskine's office by Vice President Paul G. Hoffman.

Prior to 1911, when Mr. Erskine came to the corporation, cars were made under the names of E M. F., Studebaker E. M. F. and Studebaker-Garford, as well as the Studebaker electric. The car shown above is the millionth gasoline propelled car made by the corporation exclusively.

PIERCE-ARROW LIGHTS MEET ALL STATE LAWS

Adjusted as carefully as the searchlight of a battleship, the fender headlights of a Pierce-Arrow Series 80 car assure owners that they will have no difficulty in meeting with the laws of all states, says L. E. Corcoran, general sales manager of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company.

Before Pierce-Arrow cars are approved for shipping, headlights are carefully tested at the factory. They must cast a wide spread of light that shows the edges of the road clearly, even against the lights of approaching cars. The beams of light are also adjusted so that they point downward on the road and at no point illuminate approaching cars higher than half way up the hood.

Besides being one of the most distinctive marks carried by any motor car in America, Pierce-Arrow's fender headlamps are decidedly useful. This type of lamp gives safer illumination on the road and when turning corners the driver gets quicker illumination of the roadway into which he is turning. Approaching drivers instinctively give a Pierce-Arrow a wider berth.

This is due to the fact that fender headlamps project farther forward and are spaced wider apart than ordinary bracket headlamps.

Memorial Services.

Tributes will be paid deceased members at the annual memorial exercises of Maple Grove No. 86, Woodman circle, this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Red Men's wigwam. Mrs. Clara Cassidy will preside and a musical program will be presented.

AUTO SERVICE IS A STANDARD COMMODITY

"It is the American view of business practice that automobile service should earn a reasonable return on the investment involved," says F. J. Leyerle, service manager of the Franklin Automobile company, who points out that profit in connection with automobile service is largely a matter of efficiency in the shop.

"Owner satisfaction is of course the primary goal of all service. Where the servicing of a motor car is subjected to scientific control of processes, such as is responsible for the economy and productiveness of American manufacturing methods, there is furnished the basis for making service attractive to the owner from the standpoint of low cost and at the same time profitable to the service station. When servicing becomes a standard economic commodity."

Mr. Leyerle states that service plant efficiency in Franklin's case results from a long period of investigation including the time studies of repair operations, and methods of procedure as well as standard tools and equipment. The result is a system which is a striking departure from any other method of automobile service; it affords the paradoxical situation of lessened cost to the owner, yet opportunity for increased earnings for the mechanic and the service station. One feature of Franklin service is a fixed price for the complete job, including labor, materials, parts, everything needed. These prices are uniform throughout the entire United States.

MANY OWNERS VISIT CHANDLER FACTORIES

"One of the most gratifying experiences this year is the great number of new Chandler owners who are visiting us to see their cars being built," said George M. Graham, vice president of the Chandler Motor Car company, Cleveland, yesterday.

"Many of these owners have traveled long distances to see the manufacturing operations connected with the building of their cars.

"Undoubtedly, the central location of Cleveland, where our factories are located, has much to do with the great number of visitors we receive. Cleveland, as you know, is on the Lincoln highway, and it is also centrally located in the Great Lakes touring district.

"Another and more compelling reason for our great number of visitors lies in the fact that we build such a great proportion of our product ourselves.

"When it is remembered that more than 94 per cent of the entire Chandler automobile is built complete in our own factories in Cleveland, it may be realized that the new owner will enjoy seeing the various operations that go into the building of his car.

"We have had many new Chandler owners visit us in past years, but never was the number so great as it is this year.

"In talking to a new Chandler owner from Los Angeles, I discovered that the delights of touring back to the wonderful west coast so appealed to him, that he decided to couple his new car purchase and his vacation into one period, and spend it enjoying the many beautiful sights of our country on his return trip.

"By the time this California Chandler enthusiast reaches home his car will have been properly broken in and he will be able to demonstrate it properly to his admiring friends.

"Another gentleman with his family stopped in Cleveland last week, who was returning from Florida. He had sold his Chandler while enjoying the winter season at Miami, and decided to stop at the factory and get a new Chandler before returning to his home in Boston.

"He marveled at the many precision operations he noticed in the building of our car. Perhaps these manufacturing operations reacted upon him in the way that it would to most people. He could hardly believe that it was necessary to have so many specialists engaged in the building of a motor car as he saw with his own eyes in our shops.

"He was a most interested spectator in our motor division. When the many hundreds of parts that go to make up Chandler's Pikes Peak motor were shown to this easterner, he appreciated the magnitude of the great automotive industry.

"Visitors are always welcome to the Chandler factories," continued Mr. Graham. We have special guides whose sole duty it is to explain every manufacturing operation to these interested owners and prospects who stop in and visit us when they come to Cleveland.

"Visitors are shown the big machine shops, the motor building department, the clutch and axle assembly departments. They watch the various operatives at work on the the vital units in our product."

DEALERS TO FROLIC AT OUTING THURSDAY

During the past week it was announced by Glenn Ryman, general chairman on arrangements for the annual summer outing of the Atlanta Automobile association, which will be staged Thursday, June 10, afternoon and evening, at Brookhaven Country club, that a departure would be made from the banquet served in the past in the clubhouse at 7 p. m., and, instead, a big barbecue will be staged at 6:30 p. m., on the clubhouse grounds. Following the barbecue, an entertainment and dance will be staged in the clubhouse, for which one of the leading orchestras in the city has been engaged. Tickets for the outing have been fixed at $1.25 each for all those attending the barbecue and dance, in order to encourage everybody connected with the members of the Atlanta Automobile association to attend. These tickets should be secured immediately from the executive offices, 1308 Citizens and Southern Bank building.

Entries for the championship golf tournament, to be staged the afternoon of the outing, have been pouring in to Frank Spratlin, in the Grant building, who is general chairman, handling arrangements for the tournament. The tournament is open to all members and their employees. Several beautiful silver trophies and a number of other beautiful prizes will be awarded to the winners.

A complete schedule of stunts, games, races, etc., has been worked out by the committee having this phase of the outing in charge, and these are open to men, women and children. These events will be staged on the clubhouse grounds, prizes being awarded to the winners.

Mr. Hohenstein, telephone Walnut 6937, is chairman of the committee having in charge arrangements for the ladies' bridge party, which will be staged at the clubhouse from 3 to 6 p. m. Those desiring to play bridge should telephone her immediately. A large number of entries has already been received.

For those who prefer tennis and swimming, the tennis courts and swimming pool will be open all afternoon.

Many of the members will close their places of business at 1 o'clock on the day of the outing, and quite a number are purchasing tickets for all their employees who wish to attend. Indications point to a record-breaking attendance.

The Triumph of a Principle

Eager Thousands Giving the
New, 90-Degree, Eight-Cylinder Cadillac
The Greatest Success In Its History

The buying habits of American motorists are under-going a profound change and reaching up to something better. The new thousands who are aligning themselves with the old Cadillac army are symptomatic of a general disposition to seek and find quality which is sound and assured. ¶ A new triumph is being spontaneously accorded to the time-proven Cadillac principle of manufacturing—hold fast to that which is good and strive constantly for the very best attainable. ¶ The effort to supplant Cadillac in public confidence has dwindled steadily through the years—Now Cadillac finds itself almost alone in its own fine field with new thousands flocking to the Cadillac standard.

RUST-PROOF PLATING USED ON OLDSMOBILE

A brilliant blue-white plating that is unaffected by climatic conditions and is practically rust and wear proof, has been perfected by Olds Motor works in cooperation with the General Motors corporation, and now is being on all Oldsmobile Six automobiles. This new plating is considered the most forward step in enhancing the appearance of a car and lengthening the life of its beauty since the development of Duco finish, which also was pioneered by General Motors.

Chromium, one of the hardest metals known, is used instead of nickel for plating such parts of Oldsmobiles as radiator shells and caps, bumpers, gear shift levers, crankhole caps, instrument board fittings, etc. It coats these parts with a metal covering approximately as hard as a sapphire and one that has high resistance powers against any kind of rust or corrosion.

From the automobile owner's viewpoint, the outstanding advantages of chromium over nickel plating are its durability; non-corrosive qualities; its brighter luster, and the fact that it never requires polishing. The only ca e required during the life of a car is an occasional washing to remove dust or mud.

The idea of plating with cromium is not new, but heretofore no method had been developed that would lend itself to industrial application. In fact, its status was more theoretical than practical until slightly more than a year ago when development work was started by W. M. Phillips, a member of the staff of the works managers committee of the General Motors corporation. He was assisted by experts of the General Motors research laboratories and the Oldsmobile organization, and the experiments were conducted in the Oldsmobile metallurgical laboratory and plating department.

The initial steps of chromium plating follow the identical process used in nickel plating. The part to be plated is taken as it comes from the stamping machine and polished on emery wheels to give it as smooth a surface as possible. It then is cleaned in solution developed by General Motors, after which it passes through an electro-copper plating bath composed of a copper cyanide base solution. A high electrical amperage is used to give a smooth, close grain to the plating.

After passing through a washing tank, the usual procedure is to buff the part being plated, but this step is eliminated in the chromium process. The part now is given a coating of nickel plating, which forms a white background and base for the final chromium coat. It then is buffed and again washed, and now is ready for the chromium plating.

The tank used for chromium plating, the solution, electrical anodes and process used were all developed by Oldsmobile and General Motors experts, and it is these points that make the new plating method possible.

After the part is taken from the chromium bath all that is done to it is to rinse it in cold water. No final buffing or polishing is required; in fact the chromium plate is so hard that a buffing wheel would have no effect on it. A glass-like finish nearest describes this new plating surface.

One of the tests chromium plating was subjected to before adopted by Oldsmobile was to place it under a salt spray formed by injecting a 20 per cent solution of common salt under pressure into a cabinet containing the plated part. Under this test nickel plating usually resists corrosion only from 10 to 20 hours. Chromium plating, however, was kept in the salt bath from 80 to 120 hours before any sign of corrosion developed.

149 Uses of Rosin In Industry and Arts, Says Brunswick Man

Brunswick, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—There are 149 recognized uses of rosin in industry and the arts, and more than 250 tints separable in the 14 commercial grades, according to A. V. Wood, president of the Glynn county board of education, whose active connection with the naval stores industry covers a period of 56 years. Probably the only use of universal knowledge is the negligible quantity that rosins the bows of the world's fiddlers from Ysaye to Mellie Dunham and John Carson.

Mr. Wood has lately constructed a mosaic panel of rosin cubes showing practically all the tints. This was for the Georgia State Woman's college at Valdosta, of which he is trustee. It will be used to show Georgia girls the wide range of tints in one of the state's crude products and the panel is entirely unique. It includes cubes of rosin of a grade produced at Sylvester, Ga., last year which under the tintometer is distinctly paler than the palest standard test cube in the government's grading set, and which seldom shows up in the trade.

Rosin, according to Mr. Wood, is much in the industrial limelight at this time. Research chemists at Mellon institute in Pittsburgh have succeeded in recovering abeatic acid from rosin, itself a valuable product but whose removal makes rosin valuable for certain important uses from which it is now barred.

Graham Brothers Trucks Supplant Australian Camels

Camels, those dependable beasts of burden, which have carried the wealth of the Orient since early Biblical days, are finding their usefulness in West Australia curtailed by the adoption of the motor truck.

In the vast stretches of grazing land in West Australia where sheep raisers number their flocks by the hundreds of thousands, camel caravans for years have been the media in hauling the wool clip to the warehouses near the seacoast. The loads they were able to haul were considered large for such beasts, but their gait was slow and often rising markets got away before they were able to make delivery of their wool clip.

But this condition is rapidly passing. Adoption of Graham Brothers trucks by these sheep raisers has enabled them to rush their wool clip more quickly to the marketing points and consequently convert it into money more readily.

This situation was disclosed by W. J. Winterbottom, managing director of the Winterbottom Motor company, dealers for Dodge Brothers, Inc., at Perth, W. A., and Rubert S. Harden, director of the Standardized Motors, Ltd., who, with Jack Kloster, works manager of the same company at Sydney, N. S. W., also Dodge Brothers dealers, are visiting the factory of Dodge Brothers, Inc., Detroit.

Mr. Winterbottom has the distinction of having imported the first Dodge Brothers motor car into West Australia. This was in 1915. Prior to this he saw the importation of the first American-made automobile into Australia, back in 1903. He has been a resident of Perth for 20 years and this is his third visit to Detroit. "Wool and wheat are the mainstays of our economic life in West Australia," said Mr. Winterbottom. "Sometimes we have drouths, but these appear only to stabilize our farming industry. We do not have much rainfall in our section, nor have we any rivers of consequence to drain our lands. Our mountains are not high and very little help from the snow is expected.

"Our farmers are rapidly turning to the use of the motor car and truck. We do not have the fine concrete roads in our rural sections that you have in the United States. Many of our roads are macadamized and have been down for years.

"The cost of motor cars and trucks in Australia is practically 100 per cent greater than that in the United States. This is due to the heavy import tax and the heavy freight charges. Petrol, or gasoline, costs approximately 60 cents a gallon with an additional tax of 6 cents a gallon for the state. We have no oil wells, although the Commonwealth has offered a subsidy of $100,000 for anyone who drills in an oil well of good production. All our oil and gas must be imported. Gasoline comes in four-gallon tin cans. Recently several American companies have opened gasoline and oil stations similar to those in the United States.

"Our sales of Dodge Brothers motor cars and Graham Brothers trucks have steadily climbed annually until in 1925 we did a gross business of 1,306,903 pounds sterling or $6,534,515. We have what is regarded as one of the finest motor car establishments in all the British Empire."

Rupert S. Harden, of the Standardized Motors, Ltd., is just as enthusiastic over the sales of Dodge Brothers motor cars and Graham Brothers trucks in New South Wales.

"We began handling Dodge Brothers motor cars back in 1919 and our first year's sales totaled 300 cars and trucks. We expect to sell 3,000 cars and trucks in 1926," he said.

"The Australians have much of the British conservatism in them and for this reason they wish dependability and sturdiness in their means of transportation. That is the reason Dodge Brothers motor cars and Graham Brothers trucks have found such ready sales in our country."

EATON COMPANY OPEN BRANCH HERE

Company To Operate Largest and Most Complete Bumper and Spring Service Station in South.

Another step in the advancement of automobile service was the opening at 18-24 Hunnicutt place, recently by The Eaton Bumper and Spring Service company, a subsidiary of the Eaton Axle and Spring company, of Cleveland, Ohio, one of the largest and most complete spring service plants in this section of the country.

GEORGE W. KLIER.

For years Eaton springs (formerly American and Perfection) have been standard equipment for many leading motor cars such as Cadillac, Chrysler, Essex, Ford, Hudson, Packard, White and many others. They operate and maintain one of the largest spring plants in the world.

The station just opened in Atlanta has all of the equipment that is necessary in the manufacturing of springs. They are especially equipped to reach, retemper and repair any kind of spring for any pleasure car or truck. Every leaf is uniformly heat treated and tempered in oil and reset to their original specifications.

The personnel of the Atlanta branch, being headed by George W. Klier, branch manager, and Al Howells, shop foreman, boasts of some of the most able spring service men in the country. Mr. Klier, has been in the spring business in this territory for the past ten years, formerly representing the American springs, and has a thorough knowledge of the requirements for this kind of automotive service.

To assist Mr. Klier, they have in Al Howells, who will have compete charge of their spring service department, a man of twevе years' experience with the Perfection Spring Service company of Cleveland, thus assuring the public of the very best knowledge of their spring ills.

This branch will direct sales and service for the states of Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida and eastern Tennessee, and in addition to being able to make or repair any spring on short notice carry the largest stock of springs and bumpers in this section, thus assuring prompt shipment on any orders received.

SECOND ATTACK MADE ON HOME OF DRY AGENT

Tiltonville, Ohio, June 5.—(AP)—Eleven bullets were fired through the home of Carl Aiken, dry agent, here early today. Two weeks ago a bomb exploded near the Aiken home. Sheriff William Allison, of Jefferson county, investigating the case, declared the shooting was in revenge for Aiken's liquor enforcement activities. Aiken, his wife, son and daughter, had narrow escapes, as the bullets went only a foot above their beds.

SPORT ROADSTERS GAIN IN POPULARITY

So successful has been the sale of the new Oakland Six sport roadster which was introduced early in January that 15 per cent of the total Oakland production for the first four and one-half months this year has been devoted to this one body style. There are six body types in the Oakland line and it is considered remarkable for a sport roadster to reach such a high proportion of total production.

During 1925 the Oakland roadster and sport roadster sales combined averaged approximately 5 per cent of total sales. Thus the proportion of new sport roadster production and sales so far this year has been 200 per cent greater than both these previous cars averaged last year. From January through May 15 the production of sport roadsters totaled 3,633, and as the factory is still behind in orders these figures are synonymous with sales.

The sales of this car have been particularly brisk in the west and southwest, yet the large production has been due to the unexpectedly large sales throughout the other sections of the country as well.

This car is one of the most colorful on the market, with body, hood and fenders in sharply contrasting Mount Royal blue and El Paso tan duco finish, strikingly set off by raised color mouldings. The body is by Fisher, trim and racy, with a sweeping rear deck that opens at a touch, revealing a roomy, cushioned seat for two additional passengers.

The upholstery is in genuine Spanish leather. Radiator shell, head and cowl lamps and windshield side supports are bright nickel, while a number of bright aluminum rails and supports for the folded top are built on the rear deck. A door on the right side of the rear deck makes for convenience in carrying golf clubs or packages. Decorative radiator cap inlaid nickel door handles add a touch of high light to a dashing ensemble.

Youth and Age Succumb To New Hupmobile Roadster

Here's a jaunty sport roadster, all trimmed up pretty, ready to go. It is a Hupmobile straight eight, and, although its "official" passenger rating is four, son Jack or sister Sue can crowd in the whole gang when they take off for a spin in the country, without any strain to anyone's comfort or good nature, according to F. E. Cauthorn, of the Thompson-Cauthorn Motor company, Hupmobile representatives in this section.

"The popularity of the roadster, however, is not limited to the more youthful drivers as might be presumed" continued Mr. Cauthorn. "It appeals as well to middle aged and veteran drivers who want something of the swank and swagger that goes with this car. It is the ideal companion for the business man who has a fondness for golf. With this speedy sport car he can be on time for all those important business appointments that are best kept in the open, preferably on a good golf course.

"We are very enthusiastic in expressing our praise for this car. Its flare of bright colors and nickel trimmings will command respect whether speeding along the highway or pulling up to the porte-cochere of the most fashionable country club. It is built in response to the many requests we have had for the powerful straight eight Hupmobile motor in a sport model. Its proved performance in smoothness, power, pickup and speed makes the motor especially suited to withstand the excessive wear and tear that comes to a car of this type.

"Mounted on the 125-inch wheelbase chassis this car is long and low with a sprightly array of colors and striping to accentuate its sportive lines. The body is finished in two shades of light green with darker green striping and belt line. Standard equipment includes five steel wheels and balloon tires and it lists at $2,045, f. o. b. Detroit.

"This car leaves nothing to be desired even by the most fastidious buyer. The list of equipment is especially suited to meet the needs of the sportsman. It includes removable California khaki top with natural wood bows and nickel-plated supporting rods; the car's colorful appearance is further embellished with a generous selection of nickel-plating on all lamps, windshield supports and windshield wiper. Adequate carrying space is provided in rumble compartment and the seat cushions may be easily removed if greater space is desired. Locker space in the rear deck is also reached by a convenient door on the right side."

WOMAN KILLED TRYING TO SAVE DOG FROM TRAIN

Springfield, Ohio, June 5.—(AP)—Mrs. Eva Boyer, 45, lost her life near here today when she attempted to rescue a stray dog from beneath the wheels of a Big Four passenger train.

As she reached to pull the dog to safety she was struck by the locomotive. The dog died with her.

Capital City Tire and Supply Company's New Home

CAPITAL CITY TIRE AND SUPPLY CO. TO SHARE BUILDING

The Capital City Tire and Supply company, which has long been known to Atlanta motorists as the enterprising representatives of Firestone Tire and Rubber company in Atlanta, will occupy a portion of the new building on Spring street at Mills, known as the Southern Wheel and Rim company building.

In the construction of this handsome plant the needs of the tire company in servicing the large patronage they have always enjoyed have been given paramount consideration. The retail tire store, where Firestone tires and tubes will be sold, occupies that portion of the building facing Spring steet and is approached through a covered "drive in" that eliminates traffic congestion and facilitates quick service in minor jobs. For the more lengthy jobs the customer's car will be driven into the spacious and well-lighted wheel, rim and tire service shop which occupies about ten thousand square feet of floor space on the Mills street frontage of the plant. Fifty cars can be easily and quickly serviced from the wheel spindles out in this shop and a large force of trained wheel and tire mechanics will render fast and willing service here at all times.

According to T. A. Fox, president of Capital City Tire and Supply company, the new layout meets his ideal of a tire sales and service station of the highest type and was designed after much careful investigation and study of the needs of the company. The sales volume of Firestone tires and tubes has been growing by leaps and bounds in Atlanta until these products are now possibly the leading tires in point of sales in this city. Willing and efficient service, which has always been the watchword of the Capital City company, has enabled the organization to accomplish a great record of sales.

W. F. GILLOOLEY, President of the Southern Wheel and Rim company.

T. A. FOX, President of the Capital City Tire and Supply company.

WHEEL COMPANY ORGANIZED.

The Southern Wheel and Rim company, for many years exclusive southern representatives of the leading motor wheel and rim manufacturers in America, now occupies its new home on Spring street at Mills.

The new structure is an especially designed building pronounced ideal for its purpose by building experts and covers a total floor area of approximately thirty thousand square feet. All of this space is necessary and will be utilized for the growing needs of Southern Wheel and Rim company, and the Capital City Tire company, which will occupy the building jointly with the wheel organization.

W. F. Gillooley, president of the Southern Wheel and Rim company, and T. A. Fox, vice president of the company, have spared no pains nor expense to make this new plant the finest thing of its kind in this section. It is estimated that the building and its equipment will amount to well over a hundred thousand dollars in value. All of the most modern efficiency devices for handling the work of the organization have been or are now being installed.

The work of the Southern Wheel and Rim company comprises the sale and service of the products manufactured by Kelsey Rim company, Hayes Wheel company, United Motors Service (Jaxon rims), the Motor Wheel corporation and Budd Wheel company. The territory covered by the local firm embraces all of the states of Georgia, Florida, Alabama, and parts of Tennessee and South Carolina.

Does Huge Annual Business.

The annual sales of the Southern Wheel and Rim company in these lines will approximate three-quarters of a million dollars and with the ambitious plan of business expansion marked by the erection of the new home may come closer to a million in 1926. This is a sales volume that is built strictly on the sale of wheels, rims and parts at retail and wholesale in this territory. A well-trained force of wheel and rim service men work the territory under the supervision of Mr. Gillooley.

According to representatives of the large wheel manufacturers the Southern Wheel and Rim company has built a business that compares favorably in volume and service efficiency with any distributing organization in the industry in the United States. The sales volume of the company is not exceeded even in some much more thickly populated sales territories.

INDIAN SPRINGS ROAD SEEKS STATE AID

Jackson, Ga., May 5.—(Special.)—Notice has been received here that the state highway board will hold a hearing on Thursday, June 17, at 10 o'clock in the morning in the capitol, Atlanta, on the Indian Springs-Fruitland highway.

This proposed highway, about 65 miles in length, would run from Loganville through Covington, Jackson, Indian Springs, Forsyth, Roberta, Ft. Valley to Americus and points south. Two meetings have been held in the interest of this route and much interest is being manifested by citizens of several middle Georgia counties.

The state highway board will be asked to adopt this route as part of the state highway mileage. The proposed highway traverses a rich and populous section of the state. H. H. Hardin, of Forsyth, is president of the Indian Springs-Fruitland highway.

Indications are the hearing will be largely attended.

CHAMPIONS WIN AT INDIANAPOLIS

In the face of the severest test that spark plugs have ever been called upon to meet, and before the largest crowd estimated ever to have witnessed a sports event in America, Champion spark plugs, for the third consecutive year, won the world's race classic at Indianapolis, Memorial day. It marked the 36th Champion victory in major race contests the world over since that company decided late in Speedway officials say that between 140,000 and 150,000 persons were in attendance.

Frank Lockhart, 23-year-old daredevil, in a Miller Special, driving his first bi gspeedway race, conquered the field of 28 starters, averaging 94.63 miles per hour—a figure indicating that the tiny "vest pocket" 91 1-2 cubic inch engines will deliver eevn higher speeds than their larger 132-inch predecessors ever were able to attain. Shortened to 400 miles by rain, Lockhart drove the entire race without relief. He stopped only once—to refuel with gasoline and oil.

Harry Hartz, in another Miller, was second, followed by Cliff Woodbury, another recruit from the dirt track ranks, and by Fred Comer, who was fourth. None of them changed a single spark plug throughout the race.

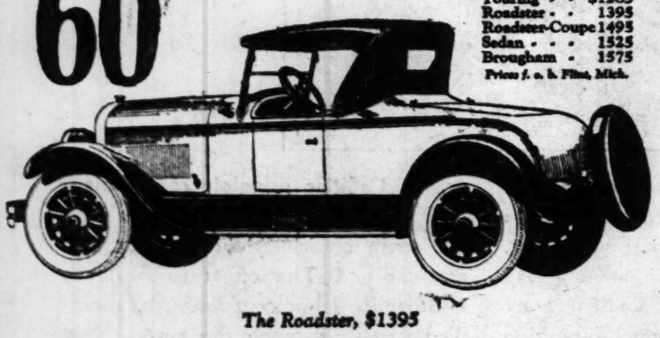

This year's classic served even more forcibly to illustrate the ability of spark plugs to withstand the severest tests without change. Valves, connecting rods, gears, timing apparatus and other engine parts, went down before the furious pace set by the pilots of the tiny cars. In further contrast to the ability of spark plugs, tire changes were also numerous. Only 13 of the 28 starters were running at the ifnish.

Lockhart, the unheralded former Pacific coast dirt track star, brought to Indianapolis as a relief driver, drove a masterly race, and in doing so thoroughly established himself as one of the most feared pilots of the roaring road. Never below fourth place after the cars were under way, he was constantly challenging the leader until he himself stepped in front at 152 miles. From that distance on, except for five laps, when he stopped to refuel, he maintained a consistent lead which he lengthened to two laps after 200 miles. His steady 95-mile pace from that point on gave him an apparent reserve of five to eight miles an hour, shoul that higher speed have been necessary.

"Champion's" performance in the winning cars again established a 100 per cent record, points out O. C. Rohde, chief engineer of the Champion Spark Plug company, who witnessed the race. "Of the 32 spark plugs used in the four winning cars, not a single one was changed. At the finish, every one of these spark plugs was firing with perfect efficiency, fully competent to drive each car at even higher speed than that car's maximum.

Real Estate NEWS

VOL. LVIII., No. 358. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 6, 1926.

J. M. High Co., Established 1882---On the Landmark at Whitehall and Hunter

Vacationists Come First to High's!

And then away—where fancy calls—Happy, Carefree! Supremely content in the conscienceness of a perfect appearance—anywhere, anytime! High's is ready with vacation needfuls, frilly, fancy or smartly plain. Apparel that fits ideally into your plans for the very happiest vacation ever! And remember, please, the prices are such that you will have plenty left for the trip itself—a very important thought, you will agree!

Smart Frocks

For the Train and to Wear on Arrival

There is something most flattering about the tailored frock of Georgette crepe. It distinguishes its wearer in any company, particularly when she is traveling. It is here in many versions, pleated or tucked, or effectively trimmed in white.

For golf, tennis, motoring, etc., are youthful, two-piece models in all white, in alluring pastel shades, or in daring combinations. For instance, there's a white combined with red, pleated in such a way that the color shows only when one moves. A white crepe achieves distinction with a bit of black fringe and embroidery, and so on.

Then there are superlative frocks of Georgette crepe, many of them trimmed with rich cream lace, with ribbons or with applique and embroidery touches that give individuality to every model.

HIGH'S, SECOND FLOOR

Fine Glove Silk

Underwear

$1.98

You can depend upon it, the summer girl is going to take glove silk underwear because it takes only a minimum of space in her trunk. Vests, step-ins and bloomers, also lace-trimmed Rayon. Pink, nile, orchid and peach. Exceptional values!

—Glove Silk Underwear in tailored or lace-trimmed styles, all shades. Vests, Bloomers, Step-ins, Teddies, $2.98.

—Glove Silk Underwear including Kayser's loveliest teddies, vests, step-ins. $3.98.

"As-You-Like-It"

Hosiery

$1.85

Smart women are choosing these stockings no less for their exquisite tones than for their proved wearing qualities. Of sheer silk or chiffon, smooth, flawless texture, in all the new wanted shades to say nothing of white.

—"As-You-Like-It" pure silk hosiery, between a medium and chiffon weight. Full fashioned. All wanted shades, $1.50 pair.

—"As-You-Like-It" all-silk chiffon hosiery in all the exquisite summer shades, $2 pair.

Floppy Hats

Picturesquely Frame Fashionable Faces

$10

Summer's most flattering hats are those that sweep out from the face, shorter in the back or sharply cuffed. They are most effective when expressed in soft, pliant milan—with smart bands of grosgrain or velvet ribbon or other tailored touches. They are here in vacation readiness, white, pink, black and navy blue. Other dashing new styles in medium and smaller shapes. Every wanted style and material, at $7.50, $10 and $12.50.

Trig little hats for travel, for sports and business wear are here in abundance—bangkoks, balibuntls, hairs, leghorns, viscas, and belting effects, priced from $5 to $18.50. No matter what type you have in mind, you'll find it here.

HIGH'S, SECOND FLOOR

Cool Tub Frocks

For a Summer's Day

$5.95 to $19.95

The summer girl, wise to the allurement of crisp, cool tub frocks, never leaves home without at least half a dozen tucked in her trunk to wear to breakfast or when idling on the veranda.

We've just received some delightful things in dotted Swiss, plain and printed voile . . . two-piece and basque styles, most of them trimmed in dainty lace, pearl buttons, etc. Light and dark shades. In sizes for misses and women. They are so reasonably priced that it is a temptation to own a variety in different colors.

HIGH'S, SECOND FLOOR

Travel in Good Company--this $30

Fitted Travel Case, $21.95

A good traveler—one that will not only take you to your destination in smart style, but will bring you back in equally good fashion. Genuine cowhide case, black cobra grain leather, fitted with a beautiful 9-piece toilet set in pearl or amber. Removable tray, heavy brass double lock.

Varsity Girls' Shoes

$10

Smart women know that when they want to put their best foot forward, they find High's shoes both fashionable and correct. The Varsity comes in twelve distinctive styles of sport oxfords and pumps, widths AAA to D. White kid and combinations of tan and reptile trim. Regular price is $12.50, tomorrow, one day only, $10.

For women and growing girls who prefer flat heels for walking or sports wear are special values in oxfords with crepe or leather soles, at $5.95.

HIGH'S, MAIN FLOOR

Sports Coats

For Every Vacation Need

$19.95 to $69.75

Coats for motor or steamer or whatever sort of vacationing you are indulging in. Lightweight, so you won't mind carrying them. Warm, so that when you need warmth it will be there. In soft flannels, novelty plaids, tweeds or lovely silks, with youth in their every line and movement.

In the color you prefer. Every one exquisitely lined with silk or crepe de chine.

HIGH'S, SECOND FLOOR

Brilliant Scarfs

$3 to $3.50 Values

$2.39

Scarcely any costume is complete without its contrasting or harmonizing scarf, and here are the loveliest ones in plain, flowered or embroidered Georgette, subdued in tint or brilliant with color.

Week-End Case

Regularly $6.50

—Only 15—they'll go to the first 15 women who call for them tomorrow. Made of Dupont Fabrikoid, black cobra grain effect, lined with cretonne. Shirred pocket in top and sides. Two sizes, 22 and 24 inches.

HIGH'S, MAIN FLOOR

Bathing Suits

All-Wool Ones, Special for

$3.69

If you are only going away for a few days, there may be an occasion when you'll want to take a cool plunge, so take your suit along, even if you don't expect to use it.

Trim and smart all-wool suits in solid colors of jockey, navy, orange, blue and green, many with combination stripes at the bottom of skirt. Other suits variously priced from $4.95 to $6.95. Caps 50c up, shoes $1, belts 25c.

Rogers Realty Announces New Sales Manager

Announcement has been made that A. A. Watson has been appointed salesmanager for the L. W. Rogers Realty and Trust company to succeed J. S. Larramore, who resigned recently to take his place upon the staff as a regular salesman.

Mr. Watson is well-known in business circles of Atlanta, having had wide experience in business here. He also has had wide experience in the real estate field, many large deals being credited to him. His many friends and associates predict a splendid success for him.

J. S. Larramore, the retiring salesmanager who takes a place upon the sales staff of the company, is one of the best-known real estate men in the city. He has taken part in many big transactions, both sales and lease contracts, and is known as one of the most valuable men on the Rogers staff.

Announcing

The Installation of a Real Estate Department
Brannan & Beckham

The firm of BRANNAN and BECKHAM, well-known dealers in First Mortgage Bonds and other Investment Securities, announce to the public that they have now installed a REAL ESTATE DEPARTMENT to meet a long-felt need in their company.

It is the aim of this organization to conduct their real estate business on the same strict lines of fair dealing with which they have built up their reputation in the financial field.

With this idea in mind, the firm has connected with it men of long experience in all phases of the real estate business in Atlanta, and the facilities of the department are such that any sort of deal may be handled to the mutual satisfaction and profit of the company and to the Investor or Homeowner.

"HOT DOG"

SOLD ANOTHER BUNGALOW. Just one week after it was completed it was sold. HOPKINS bungalows sell as fast as completed. They are different—that is the answer. Another one, 994 Byron Drive, Sylvan Hills, will be complete in ten days. You will be delighted and surprised at the price. The kind you pay eight and ten thousand dollars for in other sections that are no better. My price, $6,750.00. Brick; large elevated lot; 6 rooms; thoroughly modern. It's cozy and neat; it's conveniently arranged; it's DIFFERENT; it's homelike; so much so that you will want it as soon as you see it and—like all others—you will say: "I do not see how they can sell it at the price while others get almost twice as much."

REAL ESTATE AS AN INVESTMENT

Real estate is the safest of all investments. When you buy a piece of real estate, you know that you have something that represents real tangible worth. Before real estate can be considered a safe investment, it must be worth the price paid. If it is to increase in value, it must be properly located and in the path of development.

* * * *

The fact that real estate in a locality or section is changing hands often does not necessarily indicate that it is a good investment. High pressure sales methods, long time terms, with very small cash payments will create an apparent demand for anything.

* * * *

The Atlanta Real Estate Board knows that it takes a specialized knowledge to make the buying of real estate a safe and profitable investment. It admits to membership firms and individuals that have this specialized knowledge and who pledge themselves to live up to the rigid rules of fair dealings specified in its code of ethics.

* * * *

In Atlanta those firms and individuals who have thus pledged themselves have the right to use the word "REALTOR." This word is your protection. Deal with those who have the right to use it and you will find your real estate investments safe and profitable in fact as well as in theory.

A REALTOR

A real estate broker, who is a member of a local board having membership in the National Association of Real Estate Boards, an organization incorporated in 1908 for the advancement of the interests of real estate brokers and the protection of the public from unprincipled agents or brokers.

THE green tile roof blends harmoniously with the cream-colored walls of this Villa. This home is located on a 125-foot sloping lot on Villa Drive. The different types of architecture are clearly illustrated—the Italian roof, the French doors, the Venetian windows, the Moorish arches and the Spanish Patio and balconies. The special features of this house are a Fernery, Miracle doors, special hardwood floors and a living room with a barrel ceiling. The walls of this room are finished in Tiffany, decorated with a gold background high-lighted in blue, with a Solarium in gold. This house is now for sale and may be seen by appointment.

OUR HOUSES are making history in Atlanta. Others have copied our plans and built plastered houses on wood frames and they are a discredit to the builder and an eye-sore to the public.

OUR HOLLOW TILE buildings are like Gibraltar. They are standing here through the years and watch with a smile the cheap and cheating buildings come and go.

Truth has always survived sham. Quality withstands time and time shows up inferiority.

Drive out through the higher class home subdivisions and see the many new homes being built of Hollow Tile for the rich.

Investigation will prove that our Prices and Terms are within your reach. For the first time in Atlanta this "Wonder House" is made available to the man of moderate means.

Justifiable Pride!

WE take pride in the Used Cars we sell—pride in their appearance—Pride in their performance—Pride in the value they offer.

THIS pride is certainly reflected in the Certificate of Guarantee that is given to all purchasers of Martin-Nash Certified Used Cars—a guarantee that is as explicit in its promises of service and worth as that placed behind any new car on the market.

HERE you can buy safely—Here you can buy confidently—Here you can buy well.

LOOK over the list of splendid values given below. Come in and see them.

Battle Ground of Peachtree Creek Struggle Now Becomes Site of Lovely Haynes Manor

Quarter of Million Invested by Real Estate Leader In Developing Beautiful Subdivision.

After an expenditure of a quarter of a million dollars in developing and improving Haynes Manor, one of the most attractive residential districts in the south, that section will be thrown open at once to the public, according to announcement Saturday by Eugene V. Haynes, owner and developer. All that part of the property north of Peachtree Battle avenue and on both sides of that avenue will be included in the first allotment opened to the public, Mr. Haynes announced.

With paved driveways and sidewalks and completed with water connections, curbings and other street improvement finished or contracted for, this division is now ready to be opened for the public, complete and ready for the erection of buildings.

It will be the policy of the Haynes Manor development to provide Atlanta with a close-in residential section for erection of worthwhile homes by people who appreciate the artistic and beautiful natural surroundings and who will lend their enthusiasm as residents in making this section one of the residential show places of the entire south.

Mr. Haynes will set the pace in this development himself by erecting 10 modern residences built on plans of master architects. These homes will be offered complete in every detail. Mr. Haynes has reserved an attractive part of the division for a magnificent home for himself. The lot will have 400 feet frontage and the grounds will be converted into beautiful Italian gardens under the direction of landscape gardeners.

Subdivision Includes 375 Lots.

In the subdivision just opened are 375 lots, ranging from 60 feet to 100 feet front, some of them running back to a depth of 350 feet.

Haynes Manor is intersected by Peachtree Battle avenue, which connects Peachtree road and Howell Mill road, along the creek valley. It is only 15 minutes from Five Points, and is situated in a rolling hill region which is one of the prettiest spots of natural beauty around Atlanta. In carrying out his development Mr. Haynes has worked for more than four years and has planned the entire project with a view of utilizing the natural beauty of that section as appropriately as possible.

Mr. Haynes has obtained the services of Andrew Auten, member of the American Society of Landscape Architects to aid in carrying out plans to create this beautiful and attractive subdivision. Mr. Auten also will serve as a member of the sales force and will be on hand at the administration offices of the development to give advice to purchasers concerning the best way to beautify the grounds. Every lot in the subdivision has been graded and cut so as to become a part of the general contour of the entire project.

Haynes Manor has all the beauties of a subdivision located many miles from the heart of the city, yet it is convenient to the business section of Atlanta. It is located a sufficient distance from the smoke and traffic of the city to provide a peaceful and quiet residential section, yet can be reached in a few minutes from the heart of the downtown business section.

Thousands of people have paid special visits to Haynes Manor and many thousands drive through the development every week on their way to and from other suburban home developments. Haynes Manor immediately adjoins some of the most attractive residential sections of Atlanta. Visitors to the properties have been enthusiastic in praise of the arrangement of the pretty paved driveways, the wooded sections of the property and the beauty of the views glimpsed in all directions from the crests of the rolling hills.

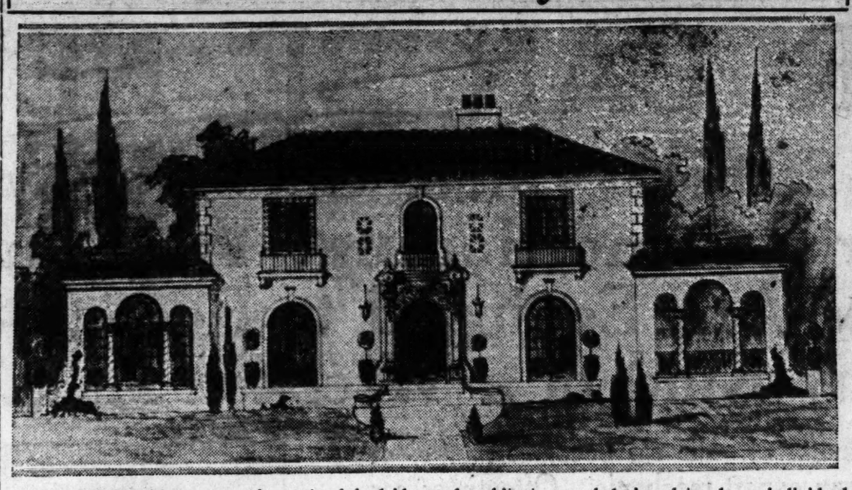

This countryside is rich in historical interest. All of the plat of land now in Haynes Manor was the center of the battle of Peachtree creek, fought July 20, 1864, which was the first phase of the battle of Atlanta, fought two days later. General Sherman's army moved down from Chattanooga late in May and, arriving at Marietta, was separated into three army corps, one under command of General Thomas, one under General Schofield and one under General McPherson. These corps were instructed to approach Atlanta from different directions and to form a junction at a point near Grant park. The main object of this maneuver was to cut off the Georgia railroad, the chief artery supplying forces of the Confederacy in Atlanta under the command of General Hood. Generals Schofield and McPherson took the circuitous routes in flanking the city, while General Thomas, with 50,000 men, took his position on the hills north of Peachtree creek, now a part of Haynes Manor. The main Confederate line under General Walker stretched from a point where the residence of J. J. Spalding now stands to a point on the west side of the Howell Mill road. The two forces met July 22, 1864, in one of the bloodiest battles of the war. Eight thousand men were killed or wounded. After the battle General Thomas moved his forces around the Confederate line and effected a junction with Generals McPherson and Schofield as planned.

Devoted Friends Divided.

On July 22, two days after the battle of Peachtree creek, the battle of Atlanta was fought. In this conflict General McPherson, of the federal troops, and General Walker, of the Confederates, were killed within five minutes of each other. They had been roommates for four years at West Point prior to the outbreak of the war, and both had served as lieutenants in the same command in the Mexican war. Thus were two heroes, devoted friends in youth, called upon to make here the supreme sacrifice, each the adversary of the other.

On one of the prettiest hills in the Haynes Manor property on Peachtree Battle avenue, Colonel Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana, commanded a regiment of Indiana troops. He was severely wounded in this battle and was breveted brigadier general on the field. He afterwards served as president of the United States. In the valley below this hill, Walter Q. Gresham, afterwards a distinguished secretary of state and justice of the United States supreme court, was wounded. He limped the remainder of his life as a result of this wound. In grading new streets and digging foundations for buildings, numerous relics of the battle have been found. The field fairly was sowed with "minnie balls" during the battle and many Atlanta young men dug them up and sold the lead to junk men in the early days after the war.

New Home Built in Haynes Manor

Beautiful residences carrying out original ideas of architecture and designed to please individual tastes will grace Haynes Manor, the attractive subdivision developed and owned by Eugene V. Haynes. In the accompanying picture is shown one of ten residences of the kind to be erected in Haynes Manor by Mr. Haynes.

Georgia Woman Aspirant For Gubernatorial Post

:: TATTNALL COUNTY SCHOOL TEACHER ANNOUNCES ::

Georgia will have a woman aspirant for gubernatorial honors in fall primaries, according to the announcement Saturday by Miss Lavonia Seals, of Reidsville, that she "is in the race to the finish."

Miss Seals, a resident of Tattnall county, is a native Georgian and was born in Glascock county just 48 years ago. She has taught school since 1901 and her work has carried her into nearly a score of Georgia counties, including Johnson, Telfair, Laurens, Jenkins, Bulloch, Screven and others.

"I am a democrat and a Baptist," Miss Seals said, but emphasized that neither party affiliations nor religious belief would be permitted to sway her "better judgment" in matters of state in event she is elected.

"I've spent the better part of my life in the school room," she continued. "I know something of the needs of Georgia children and good roads. We can do a great many things for the state if we lay aside dissension and petty politics, and I am for the state."

Miss Seals believes that "everyone should work six days in the week and rest on the other day," and she also advocates a pension for aged school teachers, provisions of which, however, she had not worked out upon her visit to Atlanta Friday and Saturday.

Georgia's first woman candidate for governor will canvass the state in an automobile, she said, meeting voters and outlining her views of conditions and remedies she will insist upon if elected, she said here.

MISS LAVONIA SEALS.

FAMILY OF FOUR KILLED BY GAS

Everett, Wash., June 5.—(AP)—A family of four, M. C. Crosey Thayer, 49; his wife, Norline, 47; a son, James, 22, and a daughter, Cornelia, 16, were found dead on the second floor of their home here today. Death was caused by asphyxiation.

Gas was discovered flowing from a main supply line on the first floor, which was unscrewed. Officials who investigated the case united in declaring that Thayer turned on the gas.

Suicide of Baroness Klinger Recalls Previous Tragedy

:: MEYERLING CASTLE DEATH ALMOST SIMILAR ::

Vienna, June 5.—(AP)—Details of the tragic suicide of the beautiful Baroness Klinger and the duel between her husband and her princely Russian admirer, Cyril Vladimir Orloff, are slowly coming out. Viennese society is greatly shocked as the story recalls that of the Meyerling castle tragedy, which cost the life of Crown Prince Rudolf.

That tragedy occurred in 1889, and was reported to have been the outcome of a quarrel between the crown prince and two foreign officers over the beautiful Baroness Vetsera, who on witnessing the death of the prince, fell dead either from a shot fired by herself or by one of the guests at the castle.

In a deposition today the chauffeur who drove Prince Orloff from Vienna to Raab describes the meeting of the prince and the baroness at the castle. The baroness, attired in a hunting costume and accompanied by a dog, received Orloff, and taking him aside pointed in the direction of a nearby wood. The prince proceeded in this direction and disappeared, to return later with his arm almost severed at the shoulder. He bade the chauffeur drive quickly to a hospital, but, finding the wound so serious, he drove, instead, to a gendarme's post where the prince admitted that he had fought a duel. He then was taken to the hospital.

Baron Klinger in the affair between him and Orloff was shot in the lung. Both men are reported to be in a serious condition. Various accounts are current as to the real nature of the engagement between Klinger and Orloff. One had it that Orloff fired the first shot and that Klinger replied with a charge of buckshot from his hunting gun.

A Hungarian friend of Prince Orloff's, Emmerich von Somogyi, who accompanied the prince from Vienna, was arrested. It is learned that Orloff is a descendant of the famous feudal family of Orloffs of the Crimea, dating back to the middle ages, of whom three handsome Orloff brothers were especial favorites of Catherine the Great, who enriched them nobly. The Orloff family owned literally millions of acres in the Crimea and many castles and served in the crack regiments down to the time of the great war.

Orloff's hereditary power was broken up by the bolshevik revolution, several members of the family were murdered and others expatriated. All the survivors now are roaming the world as exiles, although considered still wealthy.

Baron Klinger is also a rich landholder and owns textile factories in Czecho-Slovakia. The drama of Raab is almost the sole topic of conversation in Vienna, with the wounded men hanging between life and death.

The suicide of Baroness Klinger when she learned of the duel gives the incident an even more tragic atmosphere, for she was youthful and considered one of the most beautiful women in Austria.

JOHNSON WINS $6,000 CHALONER PRIZE FOR ART

New York, June 5.—(AP)—Erle L. Johnson, 22, a third-year student in the Minneapolis School of Fine Arts, is the winner of the annual $6,000 Armstrong Chaloner prize, it was announced here today.

The winner, who competed with 16 other art students recently, will leave in September for Paris and will study painting there for at least two years, after which he may pursue his work elsewhere abroad if the trustees of the foundation consider him sufficiently advanced.

LABOR CONFERENCE ADJOURNS IN GENEVA

Geneva, June 5.—(AP)—The international labor conference adjourned today after adopting a resolution requiring steamships to furnish inspectors for men emigrants and women nurses for female emigrants. It will meet again Monday for a second conference to discuss the draft of a convention for the protection of seamen, which may give rise to heated debates.

Sleep Study Proves Mind More Alert Before Retiring

:: SLEEPER CHANGES POSITIONS FREQUENTLY ::

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 5.—(AP)—An extensive study of the psychology of sleep at the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research here has indicated that the mind is more alert before retiring than immediately after a night's rest. It has also shown a sleeper changes position frequently, even during restful slumber.

Those observations were made today by Dr. H. M. Johnson, former assistant professor of psychology at Ohio State university, in summarizing results of experiments which he conducted on the subject over a period of several months. He was assisted by G. E. Weigand, also formerly associated with Ohio State university, and by a dozen students of the University of Pittsburgh, who volunteered themselves as subjects for scientific observation while they slumbered.

The scientists found the sleepers performed a mental test better at night than in the morning, but that the morning results were improved after a short period of setting-up exercises. Through recording apparatus it was determined that the average rest period, or the time the students slept without moving was 11.6 minutes, tending to disprove, Dr. Johnson pointed out, the popular impression that a sleeper changes position only a few times in eight hours. Subjects in the sleep experiments moved on an average of 33 times nightly.

The scientists organized their sleeping class last October. For five nights each week throughout the winter the students retired at 11 p. m., and arose between 6:45 and 7 a. m. They slept in a single large room, adequately heated and ventilated, each occupying single steel beds of standard dimensions.

Each bed was mounted on four pendulum supports having double bearings which permitted the bed to yield to movements of the sleeper so that instruments attached to it would record changes of posture.

"Our results in their present form contradict a number of proverbs regarding sleep," Dr. Johnson said. "One of these is that the earlier hours spent in bed are the most restful. This is true only for a small minority of the subjects. For a number, the periods of longest rest are pretty evenly distributed among the four quarters of the night. For some, the last quarter is most free from activity."

Recalling advice frequently given students to do their studynig "before breakfast while their minds are still fresh," the scientist pointed to the result of the night and morning mental test as at variance with that belief but emphasized that a decision was yet to be made on what interpretation that result will best bear. He held that "recuperative effects of sleep undoubtedly exist but they are obscured by other factors for some hours."

Schooner Ends Long Search For Scientific Specimens

:: RETURNS FROM 15,000-MILE CRUISE ::

Charleston, S. C., June 5.—(AP)—After a two and a half years' voyage spent in gathering evidence as to the origin of life, the schooner Blossom, bearing the expedition of Cleveland Museum of Natural History, dropped anchor at Charleston today.

More than 4,000 specimens of plant and animal life were on board the vessel, and other thousands of specimens had been shipped to the Cleveland museum from various ports touched during the voyage, which had carried the scientists to many places visited by Charles Darwin in the development of his theory of organic evolution.

In a restricted area of the continent of Africa, the scientists collected representatives of two-thirds of the families of birds that are natives of that continent. A new species of rail was found in Africa, and four of the five varieties of frigate pelicans are represented in the Blossom's collection.

Captain George Finley Simmons, curator of natural history at the Cleveland museum, and commander of the expedition, also reported the discovery and naming of two islands, both in the Martin Vas group in the south Atlantic, off the coast of Brazil. The smaller island was named Blossom island and the larger Dom Pedro Segundo, in honor of a Brazilian.

A careful study of the tides was conducted by Captain Titta Vanzetti, navigating officer of the expedition, and the data will be forwarded to the hydrographic office at Washington. The scientists also visited and recharted the island of Fernando Noronha, used as a convict prison by Brazil.

Of a crew of college men which left New London, Conn., aboard the Blossom in November, 1923, only four remained with the schooner throughout the voyage, including Captain Simmons and W. Kenneth Cuyler, of the department of zoology at the University of Texas, who served as biologist of the expedition.

Virtually the entire first crew left the ship when it arrived at Dakar, West Africa, after swinging past the Cape Verde islands. They were replaced by natives, many of whom, in turn, left the ship when it reached Rio de Janeiro. Thence the little schooner dipped far down into the south Atlantic ocean before touching St. Helena island, Ascension, Fernando de Moronha and Charleston.

Mrs. Simmons, wife of the captain, accompanied her husband to West Africa where she left him almost two years ago. She met him at Charleston today, accompanied by their 15-months-old baby whom he had never seen.

Perfection is Always the Mode

The moment an authentic piece of Duncan Phyfe furniture is found, scores of eager buyers hover about it, all admiration, anxiety and desire.

In the designing and making of his furniture, Phyfe, the American Sheraton, exercised a reverent regard for perfection. His furniture is called "jewel-like."

The mounting of perfect gems by Freeman is in the Phyfe manner, intensified by the exquisiteness of the jeweler's art.

A Freeman jewel, patterned in response to the mode, has yet about it a classic style, permanent and precious.

Proctor-Robinson Plans Are of Interest to Society

Of cordial interest is the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Margaret Virginia Proctor and Walter Leonard Robinson, of Hartwell, Ga., whose marriage will be a lovely social event of Saturday evening, June 12, taking place at 6:30 o'clock at the College Park Methodist church.

Rev. Irby Henderson, pastor of the College Park Methodist church, will perform the impressive wedding ceremony in the presence of many friends and relatives. The musical program will be in charge of Mrs. J. C. Hale and Miss Ellen Kener, assisted by Miss Mabelle Barrett.

Miss Proctor will enter with her sister, Miss Emma Proctor, and her maid of honor will be Miss Cornelia Proctor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Rachelle Farmer, Miss Edith Edwards, Miss Dorothy Cook and Miss Clara Neville. Misses Frances and Zeddie Lee Harrison will be her junior bridesmaids. Little Miss Dorothy Hale and Miss Jane Webb will be the dainty flower girls, and Master Ira Thomas Longino will be the ring-bearer.

John Odom, of Columbus, Ga., will act as Mr. Robinson's best man. The groomsmen will be Hugh Durant, George Robinson, Lewis Proctor and Walker Lewis Curtis and the ushers will be Dan Stephens, Penniston Smith and Clifford Longino.

Miss Proctor has been the recipient of a number of delightful social affairs since the announcement of her engagement. Saturday Miss Edith Edwards entertained at a beautiful luncheon. The invited guests included the members of the wedding party and a few close friends. Miss Ciara Neville complimented Miss Proctor and Mr. Robinson at a lovely party. The invited list incuded fifty friends.

Saturday Miss Gladys Mewborn will be hostess at a luncheon at the Henry Grady honoring Miss Proctor. The guests will include only the wedding party. Miss Rachelle Farmer entertained Miss Proctor at tea Saturday, June 5, inviting more than one hundred and twenty-five guests.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Proctor will entertain Friday evening following the wedding rehearsal. The guests will include the members of the wedding party and the out-of-town guests.

Mrs. R. C. Brown will compliment Miss Proctor at a bridge-tea and Miss Dorothy Cook will be hostess at a bridge-luncheon, and a number of other parties have been planned, the dates to be announced later.

Mrs. Wilson To Present Students in Recital.

Mrs. R. Wayne Wilson will present her students in recital at the Woman's club auditorium Tuesday afternoon, June 8. Some of these pupils are conspicuous for their technique, quality of tone, splendid rhythm, among them being Master Harry Bak May, Eugenia Snow, Mary Regan, Marion Calhoun, Jacqueline Moore, Alice Smith and Nancy Simpson, who will give a good reading of the first movement of the Beethoven concerto in C minor with the Leschetitysky cadence from manuscript.

The exceptionally sweet voice of Miss Natalie Hammon, the richness of Miss Caroline Holliday's, mezzo, and the brilliant tone quality of Miss Ann Couper.

The pupils to be presented by Miss Wilson include Henry Bak May, Emily Evins, Verdery Odell, Frances Odell, Emma Middlebrooks, Winship Gregg, Bettie Gregg, Virginia Hurt, Catharine Newman, Rose Mary Manry, Frances Orr, Bettie McDuffie, Ann Alston, Louise Calhoun, Eugenia Snow, Rosa Miller, Marion Peel Calhoun, Julia McClatchey, Miriam Fleming, Elizabeth Collier, Betsy Weyman, Ruth Odell, Mary Clarke, Nancy Simpson, Caroline Cole, Sara DeSaussure, Ann Couper, Mary Bryan, Jacqueline Moore, Alice Smith, Caroline Holliday and Natalie Hammond.

Miss Frances Dodson Given Shower.

Miss Frances Dodson, an attractive bride-elect of June, was honoree at a miscellaneous shower Saturday afternoon at which Miss Eloise Chapman, Mrs. C. H. Thompson and Mrs. G. M. Murphy were hostesses at the home of Mrs. Thompson in East Point. Several interesting contests were enjoyed, prizes being won by Mrs. Hammett and Mrs. Hood. Punch was served throughout the afternoon by Misses Erma Shelnutt and Mary Thompson.

A reading, "How To Manage a Husband," by Mrs. G. M. Murphy, and music by Mrs. W. W. Jones, were enjoyed very much.

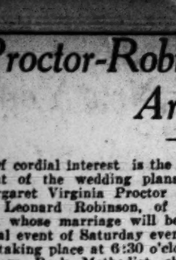

The lovely gifts were brought in to the honoree by little Hermione Shelnutt and Dan Pate, after which delightful refreshments were served.

Those present were: Misses Erma Shellnut, Reba Murphy, Frances Dodson, Mary Thompson, Eloise Chapman, Katherine Dunn, Mrs. M. H. Hammett, Mrs. Calvin Baugh, Mrs. W. W. Jones, Mrs. Will Smith, Mrs. E. Clark-Hull Wedding Plans Are of Interest

The announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Allie Louise Clark and Elmer Bassford Hull, whose marriage will be an event of Thursday, June 10, is of interest to a wide circle of friends.

The ceremony will take place at 8:30 o'clock in the evening at the St. Paul Methodist church. Rev. Wilkie Collins, pastor of the church, will perform the ceremony.

The musical program will be in charge of Bennett Eubanks, organist, and Mrs. Paul McDowell, soloist.

Miss Clark will be given in marriage by her father, J. P. Cark, and the groom-elect will be attended by his brother, Robert Hull, who will act as best man.

Mrs. J. P. Clark, mother of the bride-elect, will be matron of honor, and Miss Elizabeth Meadors, cousin of the bride-elect, will be the lovely maid of honor. The bridesmaids will include Miss Dorothy Hill, Miss Effie Hart, Miss Ruth Will and Mrs. Mose Hayes.

Acting as groomsmen will be Charles Hull, Jr., brother of the groom; Paul White, Goodwin Black and Guy Eaves.

The ushers will include Eugene Clark, J. P. Clark, Jr., Hugh Clark and Julian Clark, all brothers of the bride-elect.

Little Edwin Cook, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Cook, will be ring-bearer, and the flower girls will be Virginia Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Parker, and Mary Hayes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hayes.

Immediately following the marriage service Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Clark, Sr., will entertain the bridal party at a reception at their home.

Miss Clark has been entertained at several parties. Mr. and Mrs. Mose Hayes will entertain the bridal party at a buffet supper.

Porter-McCurry Wedding Plans Are Announced Today

The wedding plans of Miss Marie Bee Porter and Asben Alpha McCurry will be of cordial interest to a host of friends throughout the south.

The ceremony will be performed by Dr. F. C. McConnell, at the Westminster Presbyterian church, on Wednesday, June 16, at 9 o'clock in the evening.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Edwards Johnson and Mrs. Ruby Delaperriere will render a musical program.

The bride will be given in marriage by her brother, George Homer Porter, Jr., of Richmond, Va.

The attendants in this event will be Miss Virginia Bahe, maid of honor; Mrs. William B. Reeves, Jr., and Mrs. Charles W. Sullivan, matrons of honor; Miss Inez Willingham, Miss Pattie Harbor, Miss Mildred Bausel, Miss Sarah Hines, bridesmaids. The dainty flower girls will be Laura Winona Powell and Katherine Sewell Gould, of Gainesville, Ga., little cousins of the bride.

Mr. McCurry will have A. N. Alford, Jr., of Hartwell, Ga., for his best man. The groomsmen will be Enoch Benson, Jr., of Hartwell, Ga.; Gene Clark, Charles Sullivan, Robert Adamson, Richard Hull, James Thornton. The ushers will be Grady Black, Alva Walton, Robert Williamson and W. S. Boston.

The bride's book will be kept by Mrs. Morgan Wynne.

Many prenuptial parties have been planned for this popular bride-elect.

Miss Martha Farrer Weds F. J. Kimsey.

The wedding of Miss Martha Farrer, of Ideal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Farrer to Fletcher J. Kimsey, of Cartersville, Ga., was an event taking place Thursday, May 27, at 2 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. K. Sanders, of Oglethorpe and Ideal, officiating, before a large assemblance of guests.

Misses Dorothy Felker and Laura Lane Barfield were flower girls. The ring-bearer was little Ruth Jinks.

The bride entered with her father, who gave her in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Frank McLeod.

Of powder blue georgette was the bride's beautiful costume, and it was trimmed in silk lace and velvet. She wore a leghorn hat, trimmed with blue velvet and a large rose. Her shower bouquet was of roses and lilies of the valley.

Immediately after the ceremony Mrs. Thomas L. Farrer, mother of the bride, entertained with an informal reception at her home.

During the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Kimsey left for Rome and Clayton, from whence they will return to Cartersville to make their home.

Catholic Club To Honor Anita Tully, Artist.

At the meeting of the Atlanta Catholic Club of Business and Professional Women to be held next Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. George W. Corley, on Peachtree road, Mrs. Gene Bergmann, better known to Atlantans as Anita Tully, will be the honor guest.

Mrs. Bergmann is an Atlantan meeting with success on the stage in New York. Before coming to Atlanta in May she and Mr. Bergmann, who is in the city with her, had just completed an engagement with Robert Mantell. For the past two years Mr. and Mrs. Bergmann have directed their own plays. When they return north after a visit with Mrs. Bergmann's mother on Piedmont road they expect to tour Canada with their own company, known as the Slouf-Bergmann players.

Four years ago while on a previous visit to her home, the club entertained Anita Tully and the gathering of Tuesday evening centers unusual interest. Supper will be served at 6:30 o'clock, after which there will be a short business meeting and musical program.

Miss McCorkle Weds James P. Wheeler.

A marriage characterized by beauty and simplicity was that of Miss Mary Katherine McCorkle and James Pasco Wheeler, of Sebring, Fla., which was solemnized Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. James B. McCorkle, at 1507 Rogers avenue, East Point, in the presence of a large company of friends and relatives.

The spacious living room in which the ceremony took place was artistic in its decorations of white and pink roses and green foliage.

The improvised altar was beautiful with stately palms which formed a dense background, and was relieved by pedestal baskets filled with white lilies, and was lighted with candelabra which cast a soft mellow glow over the surroundings.

A musical program was rendered by Miss Mary M. Brown while the guests were assembling. Just before the entrance of the bridal party, Miss Maude H. Sewell sang "At Dawning" and "The Sweetest Story Every Told."

The ushers, Bruce and Charlie Lindsay, were the first to enter. They were followed by Miss Nell Caveny, maid of honor, who carried the bride's bouquet. Miss Caveny wore a beautiful gown of peach-colored georgette crepe over yellow satin with hat to match. The flower girls were little Misses Maggie Louise Blake and Katherine Vinson, who wore dainty frocks of pink and blue chiffon and carried hand baskets filled with rose petals.

Lovely Bride.

The Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin heralded the approach of the bride, who entered on the arm of her brother, W. Clayton McCorkle, who gave her in marriage. The groom entered with his best man, C. W. Bridges, cousin of the bride.

Dr. J. H. Jennings, of Dawson, uncle of the bride, officiated, using the ring ceremony.

The bride wore her going-away suit of tan crepe romaine with trimmings of embroidery. It was fashioned along semi-straight lines with coat effect. She wore a large semi-colored picture hat with a cluster of French roses. Her only ornament was a strand of pearls, a gift from the groom.

The bride is the only daughter of Mrs. James B. McCorkle and the late James B. McCorkle, formerly of Dawson, Ga., and is a niece of Dr. Dean B. Bridges, a prominent physician of College Park, and is a graduate of the Decatur High school and of Lanier university.

Miss Rose Eichberg Weds Mr. Schaenen, of New York

An event of unusual beauty and interest taking place Tuesday, June 1, at high noon, was the marriage of Miss Rose Eichberg to Nelson Schaenen, of Basking Ridge, N. J., which was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Fichberg, on West Fourteenth street.

Decorations of palms and ferns and cut flowers in delicate shades transformed the spacious rooms of the lower floor into a bower of beauty. The ceremony was solemnized in the living room before the large fireplace where an altar was erected of palms and ferns as background for tall vases of vari-colored blossoms and cathedral candelabra holding white burning tapers.

The impressive service was read by Dr. David Marx, while the wedding march was exquisitely rendered by Miss Edith Holliday. The bride descended the stairs with her father, David Eichberg, who gave her in marriage; they were joined at the altar by the groom and his best man, Frank Smith, of Sarasota, Fla.

The bride formed a picture of girlish loveliness in her nuptial robes of ivory tinted duchesse satin fashioned along modish lines, the only trimming a bertha of rare old point lace. Her veil of misty tulle was fastened to her lovely blond hair with a bandeau of real lace, a wreath of orange blossoms forming a finish at the back of the head. She carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas and valley lillies. After the ceremony, an elaborate breakfast was served to the assembled guests.

Mrs. Schaenen is an attractive, cultured blonde of winsome disposition, a gradute of Girls' High school and of Smith college, and has had several years travel and residence abroad. Mr. Schaenen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mendell Schaenen of New York and Basking Ridge, N. J. He is a graduate of Cornell university, where he was a popular member of the Delta Upsilon fraternity.

Merry Hill, N. C.

"I have been using Pratts Buttermilk Baby Chick Food and Pratts Buttermilk Growing Mash and can say without doubt that I have never used anything to compare with them. What more could one expect of pullets than to weigh 2½ pounds each when 8 weeks old? I have used many kinds of poultry feeds but that is the best I've ever had any to do. Nothing can come up to Pratts for starting and keeping pullets growing. Very truly yours, J. W. KEETER."

Tom Thumb Wedding To Precede Recital.

The pupils of Mrs. J. T. de Lieseline will give a recital at her studio on East Fourth street at 2:30 o'clock Saturday. Preceding the recital there will be a Tom Thumb wedding. Little Ethel Shipp will be the bride and Master Jack Thomas the groom. Little Francis Lanier will be the maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be Francis McCoy and Margaret Bell. The groomsmen are Bill Thomas and Carlisle Smith. Carlton Shipp will be the best man and Joe Alexander will be the minister.

Just before the ceremony Phoebe Rogers will sing "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Mary Claire Shipp. Margaret Smith will play the wedding march from "Lohengrin" and Mac Dowell's "To a Wild Rose" during ceremony. Mary Claire Shipp and Phoebe Rogers will play a duet, Mendelsohn's wedding march, as the bridal party marches out.

Mrs. Madison Bell Is Hostess To Pioneer Society

A delightful event was the beautiful tea at which Mrs. Madison Bell was hostess on Wednesday afternoon, at her home on Alexander street, honoring the Women's Pioneer society.

The home was decorated with old-fashioned flowers. In the dining room the table was graced with a low silver bowl filled with Shasta daisies, golden California poppies and feathery ferns.

Receiving with Mrs. Bell were her daughters, Mrs. Mary Stephens, Mrs. Nellie Scott, Mrs. Cora Hammock and her son, Madison Bell.

This being the last meeting of the Pioneers before disbanding for the summer, a few business matters were attended to before the social features. A check of $10 was sent to the Authors' Grove association instructing it to engrave the name of Charles Hubner on their bronze tablet in Authors' Grove, in Piedmont park, as a tribute of honor conferred on him by the Women's Pioneer society.

Mrs. Cooper To Present Pupils in Recital.

Mrs. Rebecca Cooper will present a group of pupils in a piano and violin recital at her home, 726 Spring street, Tuesday afternoon, June 8, at 4 o'clock. Those taking part in the program are: Ruth Key, Lilly Mitchell Barnett, Mary Lohman, Louise McCauley, Irma Morris, Evalyn Morris, Zelma Peixotto, Myer Rosenstein, Purcell Roberts, Chester Kitchings, Mrs. James L. Key and William Theophilus Hunter.

Little Miss Jones To Give Recital.

Miss Elizabeth Jones, 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Jones, and piano pupil of Miss Gladys Rowland, will give a piano recital Wednesday evening, June 9, at 8 o'clock at Steinway hall, 181 Peachtree street.

Her repertoire includes selections from Greig, Bach, Beethoven, and Tschaikowsky, and her program will be rendered entirely from memory. She will be assisted by Miss Hattie Connally, violinist; James Rowland, pianist, and Miss Louise Donehoo, who will recite. The public is cordially invited.

Engagement Recently Announced

Miss Uvah Elizabeth Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hughie H. Hughes, of Lithonia, whose engagement was recently announced to Emory L. Jenks, of this city.

Hadassah Plans Children's Carnival.

A lawn party is being planned by sponsors of Hadassah for Tuesday, June 8, at the home of Mrs. J. Weiss, at 479 Washington street.

This annual children's carnival is being sponsored by Mrs. E. H. Lippman and Mrs. P. Koplin, who are planning various forms of entertainment such as side shows, games, pony rides, picture taking, fortune telling and grab bags.

Admission is ten cents, and mothers are urged to bring their children at 2 o'clock in order to attend the various attractions.

'La Dance de Vie' Will Be Given Monday Evening

Society will be present at "La Dance de Vie," the brilliant program in which the Potter-Spiker pupils will appear Monday evening, June 7, at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium, at 8:15 o'clock. Tickets are $1 each, may be obtained through the officers of the Fine Arts club, for which organization the program is being by Mrs. Potter-Spiker in compliment to their work this season along artistic lines.

"La Dance de Vie," a colorful pageant showing dances of many nations, is being superintendent by Mrs. Potter-Spiker, with Mrs. Pierpont Spiker as musical director, Miss Caroline Gray, violinist, and Mrs. Robert Alston, president of the Fins Arts club, in charge of tickets.

A charming group of young girls will usher, including Miss Margaret Moss, Miss Virginia Moss, Miss Olive Hall, Miss Jane Reilley, Miss Friendly Haushalter, Miss Lois Moore, of Baltimore; Miss Shirley Beauchamp, Miss Elizabeth Stanton, Miss Mercedes Fisher and Miss Adele Anderson. Miss Leonora Anderson, chairman of publicity, will be in charge of the ushers.

The officers of the Fine Arts club and other distinguished Atlantans will occupy boxes. Tickets are still to be obtained at Jacobs' store in the Ponce de Leon apartments, at Marshall's Pharmacy at Tenth street, the Atlanta Woman's club and Phillips and Crew.

Circle No. 2 Entertains At Lovely Party.

Circle No. 2, division 195, Grand International auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, entertained the division and their husbands at Redmen's Wigwam hall Tuesday, June 1. Mrs. C. R. Kadel, chairman, had arranged the program of songs and dances for the Joel Chandler Harris school Glee club; readings by Mrs. C. E. Evans and Miss Edith Kadel; piano solo by Miss Nellie Ruth Hardegree; a vocal solo by Mrs. C. E. Evans, and a dance by Miss Watson. Refreshments were served in the dining room where the tables were decorated with baskets of flowers. Little Miss Mary Alma Evans gave thanks.

Automobile Association Plans Large Bridge Party

A most enjoyable feature of the annual summer outing of the Atlanta Automobile association Thursday afternoon and evening, June 10, at the Brookhaven Country club, will be the bridge party for the ladies, at the clubhouse at 3 o'clock. Mrs. C. V. Hohenstein, 241 East Sixth street, telephone Walnut 6937, is in charge of arrangements for the bridge party and those desiring to play should telephone her immediately and make reservations. Tables can be furnished only for those who make reservations. A number of beautiful prizes will be awarded to the winners at each table.

Besides the bridge party, a number of events have been arranged on the clubhouse grounds, in the afternoon, for those who do not play bridge. Quite a large number of children are expected to attend, to participate in these various stunts and games, prizes having been secured to be awarded to the winners. The lake and tennis courts will be open for those who prefer this kind of sport.

Another feature of the outing will be the championship golf tournament to be staged during tre afternoon on the Brookhaven course. A number of beautiful silver trophies and prizes will be awarded to the winners. A large number of entries for this event have been received by Frank Spratlin, of Spratlin-Harrington & Thomas, general chairman handling the golf tournament.

At 6:30 o'clock on the clubhouse grounds, an immense barbecue will be staged, which will be followed by an entertainment and dance in the clubhouse. Those who attend the barbecue and dance must secure tickets a t $1.25 each from the executive offices, 1308 Citizens & Southern bank building. Others coming out for the afternoon only need not secure tickets.

Talented Georgian Heard in Recital.

Of interest to the friends of Miss Manora Conley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Conley, of College Park, is the success of her graduation expression recital given recently at Sullins college, Bristol, Va. She is a pupil of Mrs. H. H. Martin of the Curry school of Boston.

The first two numbers of the program were "Grandma's Minuet," by Dodge, and "A Lesson With the Fan," by Guy D'Hardelot. In these numbers the reader was dressed in colonial costume and was a lovely personification of the old time southern girl. During the reading of "Grandma's Minuet" two couples wearing colonial costumes danced the minuet.

In the second number Miss Conley, dressed in a little boy's costume, depicted the various moods of a small boy as told by James Whitcomb Riley in "Bud's Fairy Tale."

The third number was "Maggie Mahoney Has an Idea," by Helen Workman. In the last number "Cherry Blossoms," by Stephens, the artist was charming as a Japanese maiden. Miss Conley was assisted in this number by Miss Eva Lee Summers, of Birmingham, Ala., who played "Madame Butterfly," and several other selections from opera on the organ.

Peachtree Hills Club Has Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Peachtree Hills Women's club was held at the home of Mrs. C. C. Sommerville, Wednesday at 3 o'clock.

It was decided at this meeting to have a lawn party for the members of the club and their families and friends in celebration of the second anniversary of the club June 19. At the corner of Peachtree Hills avenue and Fairhaven circle from 5 until 7 oclock. One new member was taken in the club, Mrs. Sanford Bell.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. H. G. Tillis at 76 Peachtree Hills avenue, July 7, at 3 o'clock.

Associate Matrons' Club Holds Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Associate Matrons club O. E. S., was held at the home of Mrs. Sallie McElroy, associate grand matron, at Norcross, Ga., Wednesday. Visitors were: Mrs. Rosa Mae Ashby, worthy grand marshal of the general grand chapter; Mrs. Nannie Rapp, Mrs. Bell Haley, Mrs. Hubert, past matrons of Atlanta chapters; Mrs. Robinson, Miss Myrtis Kelley, Mrs. Craig, of Lawrenceville, Ga., and Mrs. Willingham, of Norcross, Ga.

Interesting talks were given by Mrs. Ashby, Mrs. Rapp and Mrs. Haley. The next regular meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Minnie Booth, 300 West 14th street, July 14.

"Un Mot Ici, Est Bien"

BY MRS J. J. HARRIS,
State Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Our state treasurer, Mrs. Tillman, this week issues an urgent call for all chapters to pay their dues before the closing of the books for the fiscal year. This is only asking that the routine business be carried out according to regulations and means a great deal to the finish of year's work. It will be well for all chapter presidents to be governed accordingy. Not only will it mean great help to our state treasurer who labors for us faithfully and well and is due that much consideration, but we are also due the state to make as creditable showing as possible at the state convention next October in Statesboro.

Our hearts are made happy by the prospect of the state Children of the Confederacy conference which will be held in Dublin, Georgia, July 1, 2 and 3. Great preparations for this event are under way and those who are expecting to be present are feeling the anticipatory thrills of inspiration which contact with our children in their undertakings ever brings. The invitations are issued from the Adeline Baum chapter, Russel Brinson, president, and those who expect to attend are requested to communicate with Miss Helen Baum, Dublin. The state officers of the United Daughters of the Confederacy have received invitations and all should make special effort to be at this conference. No more laudable work could be carried on and encouraged than that our children early, should be taught the beauties of patriotism, the cause for which we fought and the reverence, which we, as Daughters of the Confederacy feel for the wearers of the gray. Our Children of the Confederacy, are in a most flourishing condition owing to the earnest efforts of Mrs. W. Bankston and Miss Adeline Baum, and many others who have devoted so much time and energy to this cause.

The U. D. C. chapter of Perry, Ga., has undertaken quite a unique project, in that it has never been done before to our knowledge. They are assembling in one large group the four highest ranking officers in each seceding state of the Confederacy. Each state is asked to send names and pictures (rotogravure) of their general, major general, lieutenant general and brigadier general. Their object in assembling these heroes is to place this wonderful group in each school before the children that they might honor and love the brave men of our southland. Mrs. W. H. Dobbins, who writes most charmingly of his project, requests each division president to put this before each chapter in her state as these pictures are offered at a very low rate, and each school should be in possession of one. The pictures will be delivered, a large, handsome group, appropriate for the school wall and ready for framing. Since this project emanates from a chapter in the Georgia division and we expect the chapters from all the other southern states to assist in it, it seems most fitting that each chapter of our own division should feel in accord and send the small amount necessary for the purchase of this wonderful group.

It was the pleasure of the state editor to attend the meeting of the Atlanta chapter when the new officers were installed last Thursday. It was most beautiful and inspirational. Mrs. Perdue, the outgoing president, has been most energetic and deserves much praise for the efficient work put forth. That she has been made chairman of the Alexander Stephens fund donated through the Atlanta chapter by one of its self-effacing members is proof enough of the esteem in which she is held. Mrs. Seidell and her corps of brilliant officers bid fair to launch the Atlanta chapter onto a most brilliant sea of enterprise and advancement.

Mrs. R. M. McMaster, president of the Waynesboro chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, and our very own chairman of the Mrs. Norman V. Randolph relief fund sends in an urgent plea for the chapters to send in their donations immediately following the June meetings. If the contributions arrive at the last moment they cannot be included in Mrs. McMasters' convention report or Mrs. Lane's report as the books close October 15. Mrs. McMaster wishes that all remaining chapters send in their money ($2 or more if possible) by the last of June and for all the chapters to send in the report of their local work from last September to September 1, 1926. This is most important and should be complied with. Mrs. McMaster's and Mrs. Tillman's most efficient work along this line should not belayed on account of "deferred payments!"

Another cry which reaches our hearts and registers a tear is from our own school at Rabun Gap, Ga., which burned recently. Our chairman of this enterprise, Mrs. Ed A. Caldwell writes that plans will be arranged at the next board meeting. Her heart is in her work for she writes most feelingly of the needs of the school and the good it has accomplished during the past years. The entire library building with all the books, the accumulation of years, was burned. She suggests that all chapters as well as individual members could send books and all chapters could arrange for showers to relieve the present tension, until official plans could be made to relieve the condition. No more beautiful way could be conceived than to close the work of the fiscal year with generous donations toward this institution which up until the present has been in a position to do so much for us and now in a way seems dependent upon our efforts to bring its condition to normalcy.

Our chairman of the Alexander Stephens institute, Mrs. H. M. Holden, sends in a most interesting letter replete with interesting facts about the school. Just one hundred years ago a charter was granted for this institution. At the death of Alexander Stephens in 1883 while governor of the state, the name of the school was changed from Crawfordville academy to the Stephens High school, and when the Georgia division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy took the school as a part of their work it was again changed to Alexander H. Stephens institute. Mrs. Holden has been kind enough to accept the chairmanship again upon the resignation of Mrs. Benton, of Augusta, and is deeply interested in the work. Her letter, which appears today, is full of interest and is well worth clipping for the scrapbooks which conserve the workings of our organization.

Our state president, Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, is out of the state attending the graduation of her son, who finishes at Harvard this year. She had intended attending the biennial at Atlantic City, but changed her plans at the last moment unavoidably. During her absence from the state our most efficient first vice president, Mrs. S. G. Lang, Sandersville, will take over the presidential problems. A most interesting letter appears today from Mrs. Lang in regard to this and asking the help of the division to assist her in the various ways needed to round up the work during the absence of Mrs. McKenzie.

Mrs. Lang to Act As Mrs. M'Kenzie Leaves on Trip

Sandersville, Ga., June 2, 1926.
Dear Daughters:

For the next few weeks our beloved president, Mrs. McKenzie, will be out of the state on a most delightful pleasure trip, filled with some duties; all of this will bring her back with renewed energy and enthusiasm.

In her absence, Mrs. McKenzie has requested me to look after the many interests of Georgia division. This I shall deem a pleasure and privilege, in so far as I am able to comply. Kindly let me know if I can in any way be of service.

The summer, with is long, as well as warm days, is upon us. Do not allow yourself to forget the multitude of active duties you may perform in this high season of the year. Because most organized work takes, as it were, a vacation at this time, is all the more reason why each and every one of us may accomplish wonderful things in an individual manner.

Do not fail to bring just as many of your friends as possible into the ranks. There is scarcely a southern woman who is not a potential daughter; help her to realize her birthright and privilege. Persuade her to enter the organization for the splendid things the United Daughters of the Confederacy stand for, that she may help those of us already enlisted.

This vacation season of the year is very favorable to a renewal of your historical research and study. You see, we relax from activities; then let us improve the time by going to school, mentally, as it were. If we are released from the routine of meetings, programs, committees and numerous other calls, may we not write essays upon some of the interesting subjects assigned by both the general and state committees? You now have the opportunity for research and study.

Bear in mind the well-rounded whole the state is striving to attain this fall. Let your sympathy and interest keep you reminded of every phase of activity we are striving to carry forward. There is no limit to the possibilities before us, if we only do our very best.

If you find where I can help you in anything you are undertaking, do not fail to let me know. I am looking forward to next fall's convention being the very best we have ever held. This is as it should be for growth and achievement.

When we count the beautiful, thoughtful, useful, helpful, inspiring deeds of the year, let us be able to say: "We have forgotten none, we have slighted none."

In the reckoning time we desire to be as "cornerstones polished after the similitude of a palace." We hope for full garners of worthy activities that there may be peace and plenty for every daughter who has labored during the year.

Faithfully yours,
(Mrs. S. G.) SALLIE M. LANG.
First Vice President Georgia Division U. D. C.

Mrs. Stafford Seidell Is Elected President Of Atlanta Chapter

Mrs. Stafford Seidell was elected president of the Atlanta Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, to succeed Mrs. John A. Perdue, retiring president, at Thursday's meeting at the chapter house on Juniper street. Other officers elected were: Mrs. Frank Mason, first vice president; Mrs. J. M. High, second vice president; Mrs. Cleve Webb, third vice president; Mrs. T. F. Hemminger, recording secretary; Mrs. Chauncey Smith, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. A. Clements, treasurer; Mrs. Moreland Speer, registrar; Mrs. J. N. Bateman, historian; Mrs. B. K. Boyd, auditor; and Mrs. Forrest Kibler, custodian of crosses.

Mrs. Perdue was presented a handsome silver centerpiece by the chapter for her loyal service as president during two consecutive terms and for her outstanding achievements in the administration of the chapter's affairs.

During the summer months there will be no meeting and, beginning with September, meetings of the chapter will be held the second Tuesday in each month. In pursuance of a custom of many years' standing, the Atlanta chapter is planning to cooperate with the veterans in celebrating the birthday of Jefferson Davis on June 3.

Mrs. Seidell, the newly-elected president, is a life member of the organization and has served on the executive board for 14 years, the last two years as chairman. She was chairman of scholarships and the Helen Plane Memorial Educational Fund. In addition, Mrs. Seidell has always been vitally interested in the welfare of old veterans. A visit from Mrs. J. J. Harris, state editor, who spoke on the necessity of publicity, was of interest, and brought the realization home of assisting in the advancement of the official page.

The South Justified in Secession

BY MAJ. B. W. B. HALE, ROCKY MOUNT VA.

In justification of the south, in order to prove that the south had the constitutional prerogative to withdraw and establish an autonomy—a self-government—I had an article published in The Veteran of July, 1925, quoting from a number of distinguished statesmen and authorities—all from the north—upholding the constitutional right of the south to secede. Among the authorities quoted were Lincoln, Webster, John Quincy Adams, Rev. Charles Beecher Stowe (son of the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin") and Judge Black, all of whom expressed in a positive way that the south in no manner violated a fundamental law of the nation in withdrawing from the union.

Of course, the sequel proves that the act at that time was impolitic and, in some respects, decidedly indiscreet, inasmuch as the possibility of war and coercion were not sanely considered. No proper steps were taken by the south in preparing for a possible conflict, relying, as it did, solely on a generally accepted dogma that each state in itself was a sovereign, a nation. The south failed to appreciate the character of the ruling factors of the north, who have always fostered the principle that might is right, and in maintaining that, idea, have never hesitated, before the war and since the war, to carry it out regardless of justice, humanity and morality. May I mention here the injustice, ingratitude and inhumanity of the McKinley-Hannah administration when that iniquitous crime was committed against the people of the Philippine islands (allies of the United States in the war with Spain; and who had practically won their independence from Spain) in making them subjects of the United States by might and cruel force against their will and strenuous opposition?

Senator Wellington, who had worked against the ratification of the clause which made the Filipinos subjects of the United States, called on President McKinley, who, he positively states, told him that it was not his purpose "to hold the Filipinos against their consent;" and, upon that promise, he changed his vote and voted for the ratification of the treaty. "Without my vote," said he, "it would not have been ratified." The above statement by Senator Wellington was reiterated and read before an audience at Cumberland, Md., on September 4, 1900. This government at that time was a de facto republic, and would no doubt still be so but for the duplicity of a republican president. It is now an empire and has been so for the last twenty-five years, the date of the Filipino subjection.

In the War Between the States 200,000 of the best and bravest of the south were innocently and ruthlessly slain or wounded, and billions of her property wantonly destroyed. On the other hand, 600,000 northern troops were killed or wounded. What a catastrophe! And what for? Lincoln said "it was not to free the negroes." Grant said it was not for that purpose. Said he: "If I thought it was, I would resign and join the southern army." A great many of the northern soldiers were forced into the ranks. The troops of the south were mostly volunteers, and knowingly fought against invasion and for the right to self-government, the same incentives for which our revolutionary fathers fought. The withdrawal from the union was no public crime, no immoral act. It was simply an act to peaceably separate from a section of the union with which the south, for many reasons, could not harmonize, from a section that disclaimed the validity of the constitution, the fundamental organic law of our common nation; a section that publicly indorsed the vile, incendiary purposes of that assassin, John Brown, who came south armed with pikes, spears, cutlasses, guns and pistols to help the slaves to murder their master in order to accomplish their purpose; a section that furnished such war implements to John Brown and his band; a section that has erected mohuments to his memory and mourned in its churches over his summary execution; a section where a state, by legislative act, voted to appropriate $2,800 to preserve the John Brown cabin at Ossawatomie, Kan., in memory of the notorious assassin, who murdered 17 men from the south, who had settled in Kansas, four of whom were from Virginia, tenants of Robert E. Lee, who gave them money and means to emigrate. These men were raided during the night by Brown and his band and "led out into the yard in presence of wife and mother and slashed to death. Their lone crime was that they came from a slave state." From a section that made it a daily custom to deride the south, and which published to the outside world that we were ignorant, without honor or morality, and grossly cruel to our slaves. How much longer could we remain united with a people so abounding in hatred against the people south of the Mason and Dixon line?

The war was inevitable. "Forbearance had ceased to be a virtue." Had we not parted at that time, our children would have surely done so. Our northern maligners were not, as a body, in the majority; but at that time they held control of the government. "Had a referendum been taken, coercion never would have bene adopted." "Let the south go in peace," was loudly clamored, "for it has undoubtedly the constitutional right to do so." So strongly was this opinion manifested in the north that Mr. Davis could not be tried for treason, a decision come to after two years' deliberation.

This article is written, in my 86th year, positively free from malice. It has been written simply for the purpose of justifying the cause that rendered secession a natural desideratum and to prove that no fundamental law was violated in so doing, that our act was in legal accord with the constitution of the United States. Having proved this to be true, how can I hesitate in placing the responsibility of that horrible four years of war on Mr. Lincoln and ris fanatical collaborators. Some of the northern historians were strongly prejudiced and have published many statements untrue and unjust in regard to the War Between the States. In a measure, they were ignorant of the real facts. Today I believe many of those statements would be retracted or modified, as the virulence that characterized their dislike has in a great measure been abated. Since the war I have traveled much in the north, and its citizens have always met me with kindness and hospitality. At Buffalo, N. Y., I was a guest of the city for an entire week in company with 20 southern gentlemen in advertising and displaying the products of the south and inviting capital investments. Our reception was grand and our quondam enemies were exceedingly gracious. The people of the north, save the fanatical element, are a splendid population. They are coming south in great numbers, and we heartily welcome them—just so they leave their John Brown at home. They have helped to resuscitate the south. Her resurrection has been wonderful, and today she is the liveliest territory in the United States.

Further Opinions.

In conclusion, I wish to insert a few more opinions publicly expressed on the subject matter by the most distinguished statesmen and writers of the north. President Buchanan wrote to Stanton, secrtary of war: "There is no power under the constitution to coerce a seceding state." Charles Summer said: "Nothing can possibly be so horrible, so wicked, or so foolish as a war against the south." William Seward wrote to The Lodon Times, April 4, 1861: "It would be contrary to the spirit of American government to use force to subjugate the south." He also wrote to Charles Francis Adams, April 10, 1861: "Only a despotic and imperial government can coerce seceding states." George Lunt, Massachusetts historian, said: "The majority of the north believes that Lincoln had no right to coerce the states."

In the platform of the republican party, we find the following: "We denounce the lawless invasion by armed force of the soil of any state, no matter what pretext, as among the gravest crimes." Senator Wade, Ohio, said: "I am not one to ask the south to stay in such a union as this. The people of the south have the right to secede."

John Quincy Adams, while president, in a speech to West Point cadets, said that each state had a right to secede. Salmon P. Chase, chief justice of the United States, who was then the governor of Ohio, talking to W. D. Glover, said: "I do not wish to have the slave emancipated because I love him, but because I hate his master." In Morse's "Abraham Lincoln," volume II, is the following: "It was not the army, nor was it congress that prevented compromise and peace in the fall of 1862, but Lincoln with his mailed hand on the throats of the border states, and by these alone that he was against the south succeeding in its purpose."

I have gathered these statements from a number of books, journals, and pamphlets which I have been filing for a number of years for future use, and presented them in a concise form that readers of The Veteran may diagnose and form an authoritative conception of the cause and character of that war which deluged the states south of the Mason and Dixon line with blood and horrors. "Let this tongue of mine cleave to the roof of my mouth, and this right hand forget its cunning" if I fail to vindicate at the bar of history the name and fame of the land I love.

"Ah, realm of tears! but let her bear
This blazon to the end of time:
No nation rose so white and fair,
None fell so pure of crime."

Mrs. Horace Holden Is Seeking Funds for Stephens Institute

To the Chapters of the Georgia division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy:

Soon after the death of Alexander H. Stephens, vice president of the Confederacy, the Stephens' Monumental association was formed. It purchased Liberty Hall and the grounds around it consisting of about 12 acres in Crawfordville, Ga., and erected a monument in honor of the memory of Mr. Stephens on Liberty Hall grounds. The association now owns Liberty Hall and the 12 acres of land around it. On property adjoining Liberty Hall grounds is Alexander H. Stephens' institute, one of the best preparatory schools in the state. It has this year twenty-seven graduates.

A board of education known as the Georgia Educational Society supplied the funds with which the expenses of Mr. Stephens for the first two years at the University of Georgia were paid. After his graduation he paid back with interest the amount that had been advanced to him. Later in life he aided with his own money over fifty young men and women to obtain an education.

The Stephens' Monumental association has for one of its objects aiding young men and women to obtain an education at the Alexander H. Stephens Institute. The association desires to erect on Liberty Hall grounds dormitories in which boys and girls can have rooms without expense and obtain meals at actual cost, and desires money for the purpose of erecting these dormitories. The association also desires established scholarships whereby all expenses of young men and girls attending the institute will be paid with the understanding that they repay the amount loaned.

The association desires contributions from the U. D. C. chapters to aid in accomplishing the objects above referred to.

The money heretofore contributed by the U. D. C. is in a bank drawing 4 per cent interest. It has not been used for any purpose and is subject to such use as the U. D. C. may direct.

No more suitable monument could be erected to Mr. Stephens than the construction of dormitories and establishing scholarships to aid young men and women to obtain an education, as part of the expenses of his education was paid with money borrowed and repaid.

It is to be hoped that the chapters of the U. D. C. of Georgia will contribute liberally to the accomplishment of the objects above named. Several years ago the Georgia Division of U. D. C. passed a resolution appointing a committee for the purpose of raising funds to aid this school.

It is said an effort will soon be made by the association to get funds itself to supplement the donations by the U. D. C. to accomplish the desired objects.

MRS. HORACE M. HOLDEN,
Chairman of U. D. C. Committee on Alexander H. Stephens' Institute.

CHAPTER REPORTS

Clement A. Evans Chapter.

The Clement A. Evans chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, at Brunswick, recently held their annual meeting, with election of officers. Reports of committee chairmen and officers showed the chapter to be in good financial condition, with much work accomplished during the past year under the guidance of Mrs. J. W. Simmons, president.

New officers elected were, Miss Maria Blain, honorary life president; Mrs. C. H. Leavy, president; Mrs. J. S. Wright, first vice president; Mrs. P. W. Fleming second vice president; Miss Jennie Boyle, third vice president; Mrs. J. W. Simmons, recording secretary; Mrs. Frances Beach, assistant recording secretary; Miss Lucile Bruce, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. L. Hammons, treasurer; Miss Lila Stallings, registrar; Mrs. E. C. Bruce, historian; Mrs. R. E. L. Burford, recorder of crosses; Mrs. S. L. High, parliamentarian; Mrs. R. Y. Smith, custodian; Mrs. C. D. Terrell, auditor. Mrs. Leavy, the newly elected president, is ex-regent of the Brunswick chapter, D. A. R., and prominent in club work in Brunswick, and the other new officers are prominent in club and patriotic endeavor, and with this corps of officers, Clement A. Evans chapter is sure to accomplish much good work for the chapter.

In line with the progressive movement of zoning Brunswick, the U. D. C. took action to foster a movement for a modern recreation park. A delightful dinner will be tendered the Confederate veterans, their wives and widows, next Wednesday. This is an annual custom, and one the men who wore the grey always enjoy to the fullest. The chapter sponsored special exercises on Memorial day, with a splendid program, with the veterans as guests of honor. All graves of veterans in Brunswick and Glynn county were decorated on this day.

Cordele.

The Cordele chapter, U. D. C., is in a most thriving condition. Besides carrying on our usual activities, we are planning to erect a chapter house, which we hope to be a thing of beauty and historical interest, as well as an assembling place for the chapter. At the May meeting the following officers were elected: Mrs. J. M. Hunt, president; Mrs. A. M. White, first vice president; Mrs. Maude Webb Cannon, second vice president; Mrs. John R. Brown, recording secretary; Mrs. C. E. Brown, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. C. Reynolds, treasurer; Miss Tallulah Atkins, registrar; Mrs. P. C. Clegg, historian; Mrs. George D. Hartsborn, reporter.

St. Anthony's Guild To Have Benefit Bridge.

A bridge party for the benefit of St. Anthony's guild will be held at the Ansley hotel, June 15, from 3 to 5 o'clock. Tables are $2, single tickets 50 cents. For reservations call Mrs. C. C. Shipley, chairman, West 1620-W, or Mrs. C. T. McGuire, co-chairman, West 1750-W.

To Chapter Treasurers

Vacation is almost here, when most of us will be putting our work aside for the summer months. However, before doing this, I wish to call your attention to the fact that more than one half of our chapters have not yet sent me their per capita taxes for the year 1926. May I respectfully insist that those chapters who have not paid their dues please do so at once before you adjourn for the summer months? Last year, more than $1,100 was received by your treasurer after her books were closed. Will you not please cooperate with me and our president to the extent that all dues for 1926 will be paid before the state convention, in order that a splendid financial report can be submitted?

Faithfully yours,
MRS. CHARLES T. TILLMAN,
Treasurer, Georgia Division, U. D. C.
Quitman, Ga., May 25, 1926.

Kirkwood Civic League Hears Reports of Progressive Work

Kirkwood Civic league held the May meeting Wednesday, Mrs. A. I. Branham in the chair.

The four section vice presidents gave reports of progressive work going on in all sections of Kirkwood. Several new families have recently come to Kirkwood to live. Mrs. Oscar Spruell announced two new members.

The forestry department reported the planting of eight trees, two dozen rose plants, and 800 bulbs, and displayed the silver vase presented Kirkwood Civic league at the recent fifth district meeting and won by this department under the leadership of Mrs. L. F. Cassels. The civic committee gave a concise report of the clean-up campaign, and announced the civic tea at "Three Oaks Tea Room," at 5 o'clock Saturday. Mention was made of having a reception in Bessie Branham park in the near future, the Kirkwood Civic league and the Kirkwood P.-T. A., being joint hostesses. Mrs. Kate Green Hess, chairman of the project of beautifying the Georgia railroad crossing reported $122 spent for this purpose, with a balance of $182.50 to help complete the work in the fall.

A prize was offered the section vice president for the coming year who excels in the following points: regular attendance at the meetings, getting the most members, having and handing in written reports, and in general efficiency.

Announcement was made of the study club under the direction of Mrs. Raymond Thompson. Announcement was also made of the concert to be given by Mrs. W. L. Wood and her small son, Charles McDaniel Wood, Friday evening, June 11, in the Kirkwood school auditorium, admission 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children.

After an interesting discussion it was voted to purchase the lot next to the one already owned by the league, at a price of $800, Mrs. A. I. Branham, the president, to take the necessary steps toward this project.

This being the first meeting of the new year, Mrs. Branham announced her commitees for the different departments as follows: American citizenship, Mrs. C. O. Fitts, chairman, Mesdames A. F. Almand, T. M. Smith, Karl H. Burger, C. P. Foster, Fred Norris, J. P. Roguemore, J. M. House, W. D. Langley, W. O. Mitchell, O. T. Brown; "American Homes," Miss Nellie Embry, chairman; Mesdames A. F. Almand, T. M. Starke, C. W. Carter, C. A. Vaughn and W. H. Berry; applied education, Mrs. Kate Green Hess, chairman; Mesdames L. J. Cassels, C. L. Langly, W. T. Hunnicutt, J. W. Templeman, E. Catchings, H. G. Parks and A. E. Wilson; public welfare, Mrs. R. H. Bell, chairman; Mesdames T. P. Connell, C. W. Rushin, E. S. Carlyon, M. S. Ransom, S. L. Owen H. T. Johnson and W. W. Nash; fine arts, Mrs. E. H. Pickett and Mrs. Vernon Shearer, co-chairmen; Mesdames R. F. Gilliam, Raymond Thompson, J. L. Jackson, J. M. Harrison and Miss Zula Foster; legislation, Mrs. W. L. Hunnicutt and Mrs. Kate Green Hess; publicity, Mrs. H. G. Parks.

There will be no July and August meeting, except those of the executive board.

Social Notes From Marietta.

Miss Lois Maer, of Memphis, Tenn., is the guest for several days of her father, R. F. Maer, Miss Maer is a pianist of unusual ability, studying in Memphis with Mrs. Mary Bolling Chapman, and afterward she studied in New York with Sigismond Stojowski. A lovely informal program was given by Miss Maer Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Tom Brumby, on Kennesaw avenue.

Harry DuPre, Jr., enterteined a congenial group of friends on Friday evening at a dance at the Marietta Golf club.

Miss Mary Teem was hostess at a bridge party on Friday afternoon at the Marietta Golf club, in compliment to her sister, Mrs. Edwin Hiaton, of St. Petersburg, Fla., and her sister, Mrs. Clarence Worley.

Bass P.-T. A. Gives Party To Senior Class.

Wednesday afternoon was the occasion of an alfresco party given on the grounds of Bass Junior High school by the Parent-Teacher association to the five hundred boys and girls graduating from that institution this year. At each of the tables were seated a class with the home room teacher and a P.-T. A. sponsor.

Mrs. Henry Bauer, the retiring president, welcomed the ninth grade and introduced Mrs. C. H. Morirs, the new president.

The entertainment features were a daisy dance by 7-A-13, Miss Jessie Lowe's class; a stunt in the form of a clever burlesque on ninth grade boys and girls by 8-A-4, Miss Maribel Richardson's class; and numbers by the Bass orchestra, Miss Marion Wayne, director.

The decorations were planned by the individual classes and the prizes offered by the P.-T. A. were awarded by Mrs. R. G. Stephens to 9-A-5, Miss Claudie Hensler's class, for the most artistic decoration and to 9-B-1, H. O. Burgess' class, for the most original decoration.

Woman's Union Bible Club Has Meeting.

The Woman's Union Bible club meeting regularly on Thursday at 10 o'clock at Wesley Memorial church, extends a cordial invitation to women and girls of all denominations.

This club, taught by Mrs. T. R. Kendall, is a center of spiritual inspiration, and a study of the Bible by books. The gospel of St. Luke is now under study.

Clubwomen Urged To Attend School.

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, urges the club members to attend the school in parliamentary law, sponsored by the League of Women Voters, June 9, and conducted by Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, well-known authority, Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, following a lecture on the subject by the instructor, at 591 Piedmont avenue, (corner 3rd street.)

Miss Helen Douglas will address the club on "The Legal Status of Women." Reservation for the luncheon must be made in advance.

'Sunshine' To Be Given At Parish House.

The Business Women's League, of the Church of the Incarnation, will present a new play, "Sunshine," in the parrish house, on Lee street, across from York, Thursday evening, June 10, at 8 o'clock.

This is the third play these talented young ladies have given. "Sunshine" is an unusual style play to be given by local talent, and is full of keen interest, humor, and pathos, brightened by soft music furnished by Mrs. Jack Williams and her orchestra. The cast is composed of the following young ladies: Miss Mary Head, Miss Rebecca Head, Miss Dorothy Childs, Miss Elizabeth Marshall, Miss Grace New, Miss Katherine Childs, Miss Maude Eberhardt, Mrs. Cargyle, Mrs. Johnson, and Mrs. Beverly Rockwell.

Mrs. Helbig Makes Annual Report On Buckeye Club

The annual report of the Buckeye Woman's club as submitted by its president, Mrs. Edwin M. Helbig, shows that the year 1925-26 has been one of development and achievement. Mrs. Helbig attributes much of the success to the spirit of harmony that pervades the club; also the good fellowship and loyalty that have been dominant, as well as splendid attendance at club meetings.

Mrs. Helbig said in part: "The state president, Mrs.2 A. P. Brantley, stressed 'Attendance' in her address recently given in Augusta. Out of a membership of 41, seven members attended every meeting this year; 10 have been absent but once, and the percentage of attendance is 70, probably as close to the 100 per cent mark as any group of 41 women could make it. The club adopted a resolution expressing earnest approval of the project of purchasing Kennesaw Mountain for memorial purposes and urging upon congress of the United States the enactment of legislation necessary to its consummation, and heartily endorsed "The Pledge of all Good Atlanta Citizens," which originated in the Boulevard Park Civic league. A letter was sent to the governor endorsing the Vital Statistics law; seven "spend-the-day" parties were given at which 280 garments were made for the Home of the Friendless and the Needlework Guild, contributing 350 garments to the Needlework Guild, leading the other clubs of the city; Christmas, a half dozen bags were filled for the Red Cross for soldiers and sailors at distant ports; five bushels of fruit were given to the children at the Home of the Friendless as an Easter greeting; the health chairman, with several assistants, helped in putting on "A Health Conference" for the mothers of the Sheltering Arms.

Better Homes No. 1 which took the national prize last year, was purchased by one of the members, and during "Better Homes Week" the club acted as hostess for one of the homes.

Memorial Tree.

A memorial tree has been planted at the Uncle Remus Home. Because of her many noble traits of character, because of her having been honorary life president of this club, and because she had the honor of being "First Lady of the Land," have we named the tree "Florence Kling Harding."

Distinguished visitors including Mrs. H. G. Hastings, Mrs. Murray Howard, Mrs. Leila Dillard (National W. C. T. U. director of peace and arbitration); and the president of the city federation, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, have attended the meetings.

Four members joined the club during the year. Sociability has been stressed and promoted by the many spend-the-day parties, and by a dinner party, with club husbands as guests, given at the Atlanta Women's club recently, when the club celebrated its twelfth birthday. All of the federation dues have been paid; and in giving $45.00 to Tallulah school the club tripled its part towards the maintenance fund of that institution.

Last year, in giving to the Student Aid Loan fund, only one club in the state, (Fitzgerald Woman's club) surpassed the Buckeye club in the amount donated to that cause. This year $25.00 was given to the Student Aid fund, and $35.00 was given to the special Student Aid girl at Martha Berry for her personal needs.

Dreams Realized.

With the close of this club year, the Buckeye Woman's club sees the realization of its cherished dream—namely, that two proteges—our adopted daughters (through Student Aid), Bessie and Leona, stand fully equipped, ready to face the world, and to launch out in the stream of life. The first Student Aid daughter, Bessie, is graduating from Wesley Memorial hospital June 8. So proficient and efficient is she that the hospital authorities have offered her a position at the hospital for $38 a week, and she expects to pay her Student Aid Loan Fund debt in full by Christmas. The second Student Aid daughter, Leona, graduated from Martha Berry schools at Christmas and on January 4, she became principal of a school at Barney, Ga. Both girls are well and happy and they write regularly.

The programs have been especially interesting, helpful, and of a cultural and educational value during the entire year. Patriotism has been stressed, study of Forrestry, Burbank, the plant wizard, Edgar Guest, Shakespeare and others.

Miss Elizabeth Mann Is Entertained.

Many parties are being arranged in compliment to Miss Elizabeth Mann, whose marriage to Kenneth Aikens, of Brunswick, will be an interesting event of June.

Miss Mae Williamson was hostess at a matinee party Tuesday, June 1, at the Forsyth theater, followed by tea at Nunnally's. Twenty guests were present. Miss Lucile Nolan and the Adair school faculty entertained at an informal luncheon Wednesday, June 2. The honor guest was presented a set of sliver salad forks.

An affair of Thursday afternoon was an informal tea at which Mrs. Arthur Tufts was hostess at her home at Emory university. The honor guest was presented an imported pottery vase. Miss Elizabeth Abbott entertained at a bridge-tea Saturday, June 5, at her home on Park avenue.

Woman's Club of Hapeville Names Standing Committees

The appointment of standing committees, plans for a big barbecue in conjunction with the city council, arrangements for the purchase of a piano, and the further improvements of the city auditorium were the main features of Thursday's business meeting of the Hapeville Woman's club.

The meeting was held at the Hapeville auditorium, with Mrs. Fred Johnson, president, presiding. The other newly elected officers assumed their respective positions. Mrs. J. L. Fulghum offered the invocation and Mrs. W. W. Bruce read the minutes of the previous business meeting, as well as those of a call meeting of the executive board, which was held at the home of the president, and of the regular meeting of the board, held Monday morning, at the home of Mrs. G. F. Hunnicutt.

Mrs. Bruce was asked to read the names of the committee chairmen, which were recommended by the board. They were approved by the club and are as follows: Finance, Mrs. C. H. Pinson; resolutions, Mrs. John D. Humphries; house, Mrs. J. B. Simmons; membership, Mrs. W. A. Detrick; ways and means, Mrs. P. T. Reddick; social, Mrs. J. Raymond Cathy; department of better homes, Mrs. Arthur Allen; civics, Mrs. D. B. Evans; public welfare, Mrs. Homer Sims; junior department, Mrs. Thomas Lewis; library extension, Mrs. L. J. Howard; music, Mrs. W. J. Gower; department of literature, Mrs. Boone Felker; telephone, Mrs. Reuben Arnold; Tallulah Falls; Mrs. Emma Moore; hospital, Mrs. J. H. Hodges; scrap book, Mrs. Eugene King; citizenship, Mrs. Jere A. Wells; benevolence, Mrs. Hayden Stanley; better films, Mrs. W. M. Schneider; special committee for improvement of auditorium, Mrs. Erma Moore. It was decided that chairmen should choose their own co-workers.

Barbecue Planned.

Mrs. W. B. Stewart, who was appointed by the executive board to confer with the city council in regard to a joint barbecue and basket picnic, reported that the council was glad to have the club join them in this expression of appreciation to the county forces, who have recently been at work in this section. In addition to the county commissioners and other county forces, all the citizens of Hapeville, who will bring an old fashioned picnic basket are invited. No funds will be solicited for any purpose, at the picnic.

The committee appointed by the board to select a piano for the auditorium made a report on its selection. This was approved by the club and the committee authorized to make the purchase. The committee consists of Mrs. Emma Moore, chairman, Mrs. S. E. Treadwell, Mrs. D. B. Evans and Mrs. G. F. Hunnicutt.

Mrs. Emma Moore, chairman of the committee for improving the auditorium, reported the completion of the new floor and asked cooperation in raising funds for other improvements of the auditorium. A motion was passed that the club continue to improve the auditorium, with the purchase of a new stage curtain as the next step. Mrs. Moore was asked to go, with the president, to the city council and ask for a written statement that the club shall continue to use the auditorium, without charge, for all functions, until a clubhouse can be obtained.

Mrs. G. F. Hunnicutt announced that the date of the Big Bethel Choir program had again been changed and would take place on the evening of June 8 instead of June 10.

The advisory board of the Annie Crusoe club will meet at the club home, 125 Washington street, Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Kirkwood School Honors Mothers.

An invitation composed in poetry by Miss Julia Brenner was given each child of Kirkwood school to take to their mother, from the faculty of the school, inviting them to a party, last Wednesday. The mothers were entertained by a song from the faculty, and piano solos by Misses Floree Bond and Edna Lewis. Mrs. Parks, president of Kirkwood P.-T. A., read an original poem of love and esteem dedicated to the principal and faculty.

An interesting and original contest featuring the family names of the school was enjoyed. The prize was won by Mrs. H. G. Parks. A consolation prize was given each mother present.

Kappa Delta Kappa Chapters Hold Annual Banquet

An elaborate banquet was held in the green room of the Henry Grady hotel by the Omega and Sigma chapters of the Kappa Delta Kappa fraternity of the Tech High school and University School for Boys Thursday evening at 7 o'clock.

Mrs. Charles Lutes, Mrs. W. E. Beckham and Mrs. W. T. Graham had charge of the arrangements of the lovely affair. The color effect was beautifully carried out with decorations of red and gold, the fraternity colors. Red roses were used in profusion on the banquet table.

The guest of honor for the evening was Joe Harvey, a member of the Tech High school faculty. Mr. Harvey was received into the "brotherhood" with a beautiful ceremonial initiation and a hearty welcome was extended him. Among those present were several grand officers of the grand council of the fraternity, and many prominent alumni members.

Throughout the evening interesting speeches were made by various members about the old days of Kappa Delta Kappa and the remarkable progress of the two Atlanta chapters of the national body. Plans for the next year's business and social functions were made. The banquet was closed at 10 o'clock with an interesting talk from Francis Scott Bennett, the toastmaster of the evening.

Among those present were Frank Bennett, Charles Lutes, Robert Beckham, John Lyle, Fred Jacobs, "Tal" Graham, Theo Chopin, Mr. Whittington, Vincient Connerat, William Graham, Thornwell Jacobs, Jr., Tom Wells, Rodney Peck, Joe Harvey, George Connerat, Mr. Pelham, Eddy Thompson, Hunter Ellis, Dick Winchell, "Tom" Bragg, Charles Wheeler and Wesson Oliver.

Mrs. Paxon Calls League Meeting.

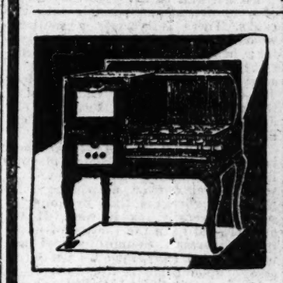

Mrs. Frederic J. Paxon, president of the Business Women's league of the Second Baptist church, calls a meeting of the league for Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, at which Dr. W. H. Faust will speak on "Breaking Alabaster Boxes." The famous chorus choir of Big Bethel church will sing several old-fashioned spirituals.

Circle H, under the chairmanship of Miss Elsie Kuettner, has arranged an attractive program. As this will be the last meeting of the league for the summer, Mrs. Paxon urges the attendance of all members and friends.

VOL. LVIII., No. 358. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 6, 1926.

June Brings Gay Summer Social Affairs

Even the warm days of June have not caused a lull in the whirl of social gaities involving Atlanta society! With a number of prominent weddings scheduled to take place during the week, a bevy of attractive visitors lured to the city by Tech commencement festivities and other pleasures, with schoolgirls and boys arriving on every train to spend their vacations at home, and with an elaborate program of cultural and social events previously arranged, the week bids fair to excel in brilliancy and gaiety even the preceding weeks.

Among the most prominent of the weddings which will feature the month of brides will be that of Miss Grace Boyd Goldsmith to Charles Harman Cox, which will be solemnized at noon Saturday at the home of the bride on Piedmont avenue. The wedding will be attended by a small group of relatives and close friends.

Miss Nancy Elizabeth Linthicum, another lovely bride-elect of the week, will wed Thomas Cobb Hull at 5:30 o'clock Monday afternoon at All Saints' church, the ceremony to be followed by an informal reception at the bride's home on Fifth street.

Memphis, Tenn., has contributed one of its most charming members of society to the week's festivities in the person of Miss Elizabeth Reeves, who is receiving much social attention as the guest of Miss Rebecca Ashcraft.

Miss Anne Spalding is entertaining a group of college belles at a house party at her home on Spring street during the Tech commencement gaieties. Her guests include Miss Adelaide Douglas, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Louise Phinizy, of Athens.

Another popular belle of the school set is Miss Julia Bradshaw, of Paducah, Ky., and Athens, Ga., who is visiting Miss Martha Maddox at her home on Peachtree road.

Misses Edna Belle and Dorothy Raine have as their guests Miss Mary Hall Tupper, of New Orleans, and Miss Fannie Aiken, of Brunswick, who are being feted by the members of the younger set.

Dr. and Mrs. T. P. Hinman are entertaining as their guest Miss Alice Hinman Hand, of Pelham.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Cockrell, of Palestine, Texas, are prominent visitors in the city who are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cockrell at their home on Mt. Perrian road.

The final program will be presented by the Atlanta Fine Arts club at 8:15 o'clock Monday evening at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium. The event will be one of the most elaborate and interesting occasions ever sponsored by this prominent cultural organization, and the program will be called "A Pageant of Beauty," over 100 Atlanta girls taking part.

Tech commencement will be brought to a brilliant close on Monday. The graduation exercises will be held on the Tech campus at 10 o'clock Monday morning, the address to be given by Senator Walter F. George. The Pan-Hellenic costume ball, noted throughout the south for its gaiety and color, will furnish a scintillating climax to the season of festivity Monday evening at the Tech gynasium. The dance will be led by Marthame Sanders, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., and Miss Martha Maddox. Assisting them will be Arthur Edge and Miss Edna Belle Raine. Outstanding events during the evening will be the class leadouts and an especially arranged stunt by the Five club. The members of the club are Will Spalding, Mac Thorpe, Marthame Sanders, Lonnie Lyda, Walt Godwin and Six Carpenter.

Dinner-Dance at Driving Club.

A large number of members and visitors assembled at the regular Saturday evening dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club last evening, which proved one of the most enjoyable affairs of the week. Dinner and dancing took place on the attractive terrace of the club, which was a lovely setting for this occasion.

One of the largest parties of the evening was the one at which Charles Boynton, Jr., was host as a compliment to Miss Nancy Carr, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Sr., who has recently returned from Bryn Mawr, Penn., and Miss Henrietta Mikell, who has returned home from National Cathedral school, Washington, D. C. Covers were placed for Miss Carr, Miss Mikell, Miss Mary Fitzhugh of Memphis, Miss Mary McCarty, Miss Jennie Hodgson, Miss Lucille Stone, Miss Catherine Cannady, Richard Courts, John Stewart, Rolf Sims, Edward Van Winkle, Hugh Carter, Dummy Long, Welborn Cody, Harlan Bucknell, and Mr. Boynton.

Miss Mark Orme was hostess to a party of friends. At her table were Miss Frances Floyd, Miss Eleanor O'Beirne, Miss Sara Hurt, Gus Ashcraft, Albert Howell, III, Howard Smith, William Harbin of Rome, Ga., Lloyd Hatcher, Frank Harrell, Ralph Williams of Griffin, and Sam Tupper.

Mrs. Frank Orme, and Mr. and Mrs. Julian Chambers were together.

A congenial party of friends having dinner together were Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gray, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. James Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spratlin, and Dugas McCleskey.

Sam Carter entertained a party. Covers were placed for Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarke, Mrs. Lucy Hoke-Smith Simpson, Mrs. Cecil Barron Strobhar, Spotswood Grant, Allen Krebs, and Sam Carter.

Mr. and Mrs. Carrol O. Bicklehaup entertained a group of friends. Covers were placed for eight at their table.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Dick were hosts to a party of ten guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, entertained at the dinner-dance, honoring William J. Harrison and James G. Doyle of Los Angeles, and Harry Tipton, of New York.

Others having guests were Dr. and Mrs. William F. Spallenberger, Mr. and Mrs. Guss Dodd, and C. M. Frederick.

Mrs. Watson, Mrs. West Honor Their Mother.

Mrs. L. D. Watson and Mrs. Charles W. West celebrated the birthday of their mother, Mrs. S. A. Campbell, with an informal tea Saturday afternoon at their home in Ansley Park. The guests, numbering 50, included the members of the Woman's Bible class of Ponce de Leon Baptist Sunday school.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with quantities of garden flowers. The dining table had as a centerpiece a beautiful birthday cake surrounded by blue bowls of larkspur and snapdragons, and silver candlesticks holding pink unshaded candles. Silver comports held bon bons and nuts.

Little Miss Wilbanks Celebrates Birthday.

Little Miss Charlotte Wilbanks entertained 12 young friends at a party celebrating her fifth birthday, Friday afternoon, at her home, 1839 Peachtree road.

A number of interesting games were played. The young hostess wore a dainty frock of peach crepe de chine.

Assisting Mrs. Wilbanks in entertaining was Mrs. Dave Prince.

Miss Miriam Perkins To Wed Lieut. Irvine.

Cordial social interest centers in the marriage of Miss Miriam Elizabeth Perkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Perkins, and Lieutenant William Harris Irvine, which will take place Wednesday morning, June 9, at 10:30 o'clock at St. Philips cathedral. Dean Thomas H. Johnston will perform the ceremony, which will be witnessed by a group of close friends.

Fort McPherson Social Notes.

General Joseph D. Leitch, Mrs. Leitch and their daughter, Miss Dorothy Leitch, who have been at Camp McClellan, near Anniston, Ala., will spend Sunday at Fort McPherson.

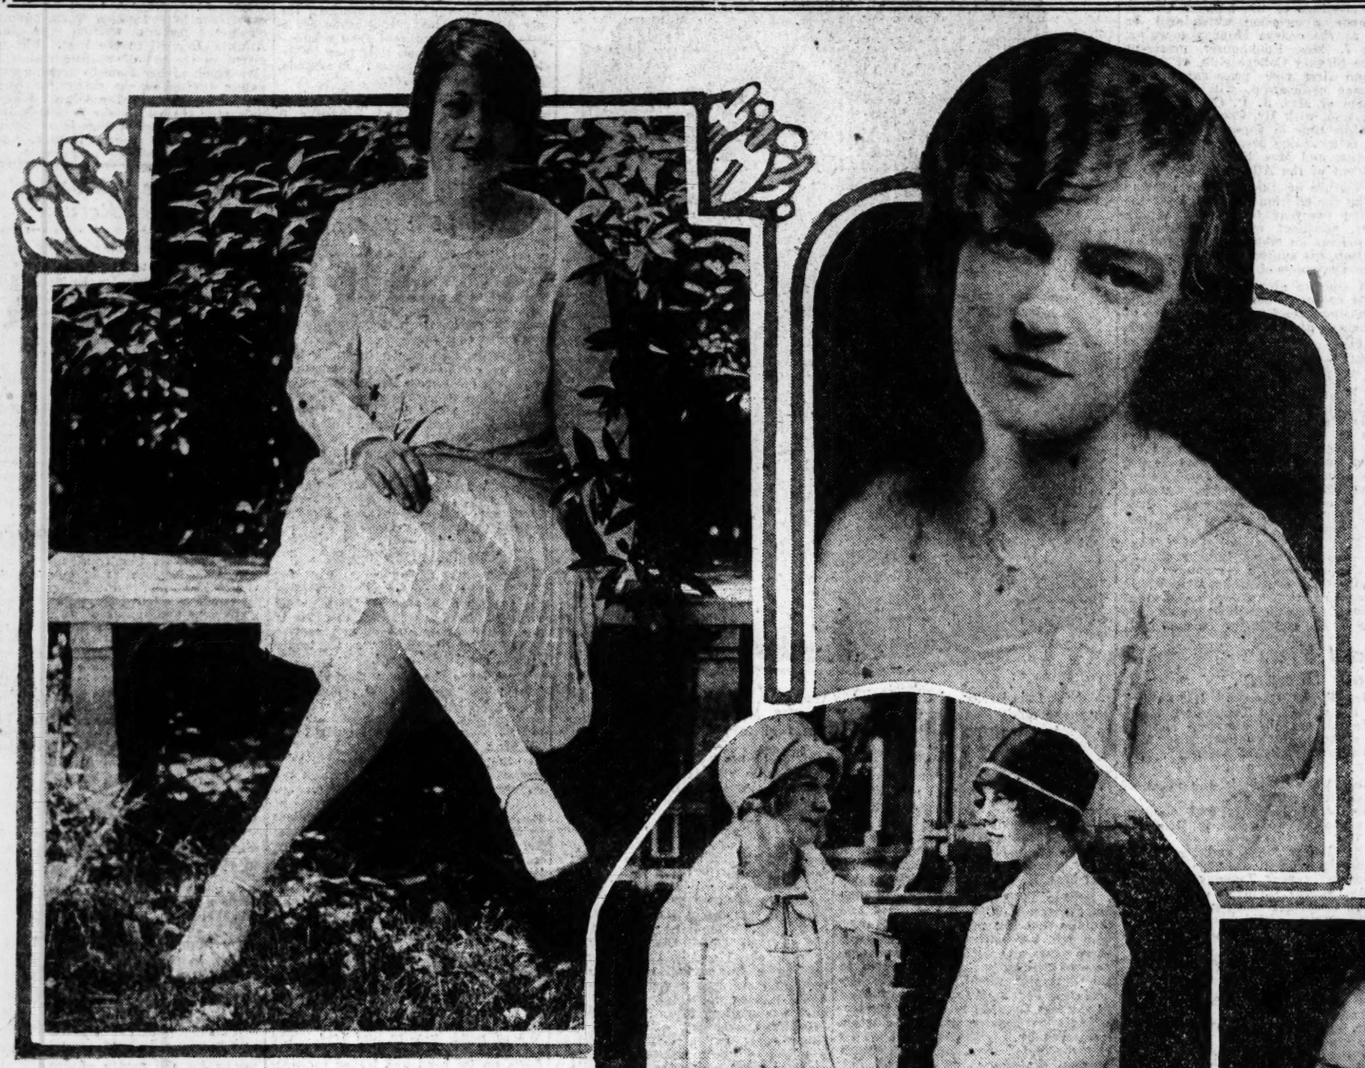

Lietenant A. M. Parsons and Mrs. Parsons arrived at Fort McPherson last week from the Hawaiian islands, where they were detailed. Mrs. F. M. Patterson entertained at dinner Saturday evening at her quarters complimentary to Lieutenant and Mrs. Parsons.

Mrs. Clyde Johnston and daughters, Misses Helen and Doris Johnston, left Saturday for Anniston, Ala., where they will join Captain Johnston, who is detailed for duty there at present.

Colonel and Mrs. Melville S. Jarvis leave Sunday on a motor trip for a visit to relatives in Virginia and West Virginia. They will also motor to Washington, D. C., and West Point.

Captain P. T. Greene leaves Sunday for Camp McClean to report for duty.

:: Attractive Visitors and College Set Beauties ::

The lovely figure seen at the upper left is Miss Elizabeth Reeves, debutante daughter of Mrs. W. D. Reeves, of Memphis, Tenn., who is being extensively entertained as the guest of Miss Rebecca Ashcraft at her home in Druid Hills. At the right is Miss Susan Broyles, schoolgirl daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Broyles, who will join her mother at Fisher's Island, Maine, where they will spend the summer. Miss Broyles has been a student at St. Timothy's school, Baltimore, during the past winter. The attractive central group includes (left) Miss Adelaide Douglas, of Washington, D. C., and her hostess, Miss Anne Spalding, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Spalding. Miss Douglas and Miss Spalding are among the popular belles attending the Tech commencement festivities. Pictured at the lower right is Miss Susette Heath, beautiful sub-deb daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Health, who returned last week from Hollins college in Virginia to spend the summer with her parents. Miss Marion Smith Will Wed Mr. Belle July 7

Sincere and cordial interest accompanies the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Marion Wiggins Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Robert Smith and Hugh Inman Bell, which are made known today.

The marriage will take place on Wedneday evening, July 7, at 8:30 o'clock, at the First Baptist church. An uncle of the bride-elect, Rev. Dr. John R. Gunn, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., will perform the ceremony, assisted by Dr. Charles W. Daniel, pastor of the First Baptist church.

Miss Smith will be given in marriage by her father, James Robert Smith. She will have as her maid of honor her sister, Miss Catherine Smith, and her matron of honor will be Mrs. Julian H. Lifsey, of Miami, Fla., another sister.

The bridesmaids will be Mrs. Robert T. Jones, Jr., Mrs. Sam DuBose, and Mrs. James Robert Smith, junior.

Mr. Bell's best man will be Sam DuBose, and the groomsmen will be Walker Inman, of Augusta; Harry Bewick, Robert Smith, Jr., and John Bell.

Little Martha DuBose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam DuBose, will be the flower girl, and the ring-bearer will be Tommy Lifsey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Lifsey, and nephew of the bride-elect. The train bearer will be little Blanche Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Inman Bell, niece of the groom-elect.

A reception will follow the ceremony at the home of the brother and sister of the bride-elect, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Smith, Jr., on Rock Spring road.

Howard-Speer Engagement Is of Wide Social Interest

The marriage of Miss Janie Margaret Howard and John Sims Speer, which will be solemnized June 14 at 5 o'clock in the afternoon in the West End Presbyterian church, is of cordial social interest throughout the south.

Miss Howard is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Howard, of Atlanta, and is a graduate of Washington seminary. During her post-graduate course she was the efficient president of the Art club. She is a musician of ability, having studied pipe organ with Miss Eda Bartholomew.

Miss Howard's paternal grandparents were the late Stephen M. Howard, pioneer lawyer and soldier of Tennessee, and Margaret Meacham Howard, descendant of the Meacham and Jackson families of Virginia. Her maternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. John Randolph Hornady, and she is great-grandaughter of Dr. Henry Carr Hornady, noted preacher and patriot, who was president of the Soldiers' Relief association, and whose work in behalf of Confederate widows and orphans made his name beloved throughout the state.

Miss Nina Hornady, noted educator, and Mrs. Horace Presson, of Atlanta, are aunts of the bride-elect, and Rev. G. A. Hornady, of Alabama, and John Hornady, of Atlanta, are her uncles.

Mr. Speer is a young man of unusual business ability, having been connected with the Bank of Lumpkin County for several years. He is a leader in the social and business life of north Georgia. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Speer, of Leslie, Ga., and his distinguished family has for generations taken a leading part in the social, religious and commercial development of south Georgia.

Miss Howard will be honored at a number of lovely parties prior to her marriage.

Miss Eileen McKinney will entertain at a kitchen shower for Miss Howard at her home on Columbia avenue on Wednesday, June 9, at 3 o'clock.

Thursday, June 10, Miss Margaret Whittle will give a bridge-luncheon and linen shower at 1 o'clock at her home on Peachtree road honoring Miss Howard.

On Friday, June 11, Miss Howard will be honored by Miss Mildred Bradley at a miscellaneous shower at 3 o'clock at the home of Miss Bradley, on Peachtree road.

Miss Howard will be complimented by Miss Edythe Matthews at her home on West Peachtree street at 8 o'clock Saturday, June 12, at a bridge-tea.

On Saturday morning, June 12, from 10 until 1 o'clock, Miss Howard will be hostess at a trousseau party at the home of her mother, Mrs. Murray Howard, on Myrtle street.

Miss Alice Hand To Be Honored At Many Affairs

Miss Alice Hinman Hand, of Pelham, Ga., is the attractive guest of her sister, Mrs. Thomas P. Hinman, at her home on East Fifteenth street, and will be entertained at a series of social affairs during her visit. Mrs. Hinman was hostess at luncheon Saturday at the Piedmont Driving club, the occasion assembling twelve members of the college set to meet Miss Hand. Madonna lilies and delphinium were used as the central decoration of the exquisitely appointed table. The guests included the young girls who were at Clemmons Cove camp near Asheville, N. C., with the honor guest last summer.

Miss Caroline Crumley's swimming party Monday afternoon, June 7, at the Piedmont Driving club, and Miss Harriet Grant's luncheon at the Piedmont Driving club Tuesday, June 8, will be followed by a swimming party.

Miss Barbara Coles will give an informal party Thursday at the Piedmont Driving club in compliment to Miss Hand, and Miss Mary Ann Carr's luncheon Friday, June 11, will also honor this popular visitor.

Saturday, June 12, Miss Helen Alvis Howard will entertain for Miss Hand at luncheon at the Capital City club, and Mrs. Charles Rawson and Miss Caroline Paullin will be hostesses at social affairs, the dates to be announced later.

Mrs. McElroy Honors Associate Matrons' Club.

Norcross, Ga., June 5.—Mrs. J. E. McElroy, associate grand matron of O. E. S. of Georgia, was hostess to the Associate Matrons club of Atlanta at her home in Norcross on Wednesday afternoon. The reception rooms were decorated with garden flowers and Mrs. W. H. Willingham assisted Mrs. McElroy in entertaining her guests. Mrs. May Spier is president of the Associate Matrons club and presided over the business meeting, after which a delightful social hour was enjoyed, and a delicious salad course served. Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, worthy grand marshal, was honor guest and addressed the club on "Efficiency."

Goldsmith-Cox Wedding Plans Of Much Interest

The marriage of Miss Grace Boyd Goldsmith and Charles Harman Cox, will be a brilliant event of Saturday, June 12, taking place at high noon, at the residence of the bride-elect's parents, Dr. and Mrs. William Stokes Goldsmith, on Piedmont avenue. Dr. Richard Orme Flint, pastor of the North avenue Presbyterian church, will perform the ceremony in the presence of immediate relatives and close friends.

Mrs. Frederick Leeds Duggan, of Spring Lake, N. J., and Mrs. Aquilla J. Orme, Jr., will be matrons-of-honor and the only attendants at the wedding, save the little flower girl, Mary King, of Chattanooga, niece of Mr. Cox, who will have as his best man, his brother, Harman Cox, of Chicago, Ill.

An informal reception follows the ceremony, and Friday evening, June 11, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Orme, Sr., will entertain the members of the bridal party at their home on Peachtree road after the rehearsal.

Among the out-of-town guests who will arrive next week for the marriage are Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Cox, of Chattanooga, Tenn., parents of the bride-groom-to-be; Mr. and Mrs. Henry King, and Miss Mary King, also of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Dr. and Mrs. Cornelius Coleman, of Durham, N. C.; Harman Cox, of Chicago, Ill.; Albert G. Hancock, of Baltimore, Md.; and Dr. and Mrs. Belsher, of Augusta.

Commercial Senior Is Given Dance.

The bridesmaids will include Miss Mary Frances Witherspoon, of Atlanta, Miss Laura Frances Marbut, of Atlanta; Mrs. Talmadge Leeke, of Miami, Fla.; Mrs. W. M. Tribble, of Lithonia; Mrs. Edgar Davidson, of Bradenton, Fla., sister of the groom-elect; Miss Sara Joe Tribble and Miss Martha Johnson will be junior bridesmaids. Master Charles Marbut will act as ring bearer, and Mrs. M. Clay, of Atlanta, will keep the bride's book.

Henry McLemore, of Emory university, brother of the groom-elect, will act as best man. Alton Tribble, Andrew Tribble, Robert Tribble and Walter Tribble, brothers of the bride-elect, and Edgar Davidson, of Bradenton, Fla., formerly of Montreal, Canada, will act as groomsmen. Coleman Daniel, of Atlanta; Cogdell McElmore, of Sarasota, Fla., and Charles Phillips, of Bradenton, Fla., will act as ushers.

Preceding the ceremony "The Shepherd Song" Bacarolle and "Traumeri" will be played by Mrs. O. B. Marbut. Miss Lillian Everitt, of Atlanta, will render two vocal selections, "Because" and "At Dawning." Mendelsshon's wedding march will be used as the processional and Wagner's Lohengrin as the recessional. "To a Wild Rose" will be softly played during the ceremony.

Miss Tribble is being honored with a series of delightful pre-nuptial parties.

Miss Vickery Honors Miss Lane.

A prenuptial affair of Thursday evening was the bridge party given by Miss Mildred Vickery at her home on St. Charles avenue in honor of Miss Gladys Lane, whose marriage to Robert Hunter Tarrant will be an interesting social event of June 15.

The reception rooms, where the game was played, were beautifully decorated with spring flowers, carrying out the color scheme of pink and white.

The hostess was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. J. F. Vickery and Miss Marie Vickery. Twenty-four guests were invited to meet Miss Lane.

"Spinster Party" Featured By Many Original Ideas

A delightful social affair of Wednesday was the "spinster party" given by Dr. Elizabeth Lightfoot-Broach and her sister, Miss Annie Mae Broach, at their home on Highland avenue. The guests were received in the living room, transformed for the occasion into a tea room, called "Jolly Spinsters' Tea Room."

The guests were served at daintily appointed tables for four. The place cards were tiny old-fashioned ladies in wide skirts and plumed hats. Center piece on each little table was a crystal vase of Dorothy Perkins roses and the menu cards were hand-decorated. First course: Unbecoming conduct for a spinster (spooning). Second: What a spinster can not be called again (spring chicken); what an old maid would like to be showered with (rice); what spinsters long for (love-nest, made of law, olives for eggs); old maids' only use for rolling pin (biscuits); old maids' solace (tea). Salad course: Objects of envy and a symbol of marriage (pears and cheese-rings). Dessert: What I do when a man tries to kiss me (I scream); things of the past (sweet hearts); sadly missed (dates with nuts); ardently longed for (kisses). Miss Lucy Harris made highest score filling it out. The prize she won was a luster "teapot for two."

At this juncture lights were lowered and in funereal tones the assembly was addressed in doggerel about the proverbial "family skeleton" and so forth, which ended thus, "And now, in silence dread—no prattling—we are to bare our souls, and tell of lovers gone or dead, and why we've never wed. The bleaching bones a rattling, while each her story doles." In the hush of darkness, a door noiselessly swung open revealing two skeletons that resulted in a scream as if a mouse had crossed the floor.

Clever indeed were the stories of these charming young women, purporting to be their reasons for choosing "single blessedness," a number of them being written in rhyme. Miss Katie Fenton was voted first prize and special mention given the "poetic effusions" of Miss Kent, Miss Willie Terrell, Misses Julia Killian and Naomi McElreath and Miss Lucy Harris.

The china powder puff box white wigged lady was won by Miss Rusha Wesley for first prize in a Shakespeare romance game. This was followed by cake cutting for "fortunes" written on tiny cards. The dining room was also decorated in a profusion of Dorothys, the beautifully embossed cake in pink and white stood on a pedestal banked with the rose clusters, surrounded by crystal candlesticks with unshaded pink candles.

By unamious vote, "The Jolly Spinsters" became a permanent organization in burlesque. Dr. Broach being elected president or the ("Big Green Parrot"); Miss Rusha Wesley, secretary or the ("Scratchy Cat"), the treasurer or ("Grizzly Gray Cat") to be elected at next meeting.

Club flowers: Old maids and bachelor buttons. Those present were: Miss Mary Randolph Kent, Miss Nan Head, Miss Lucy Harris, Miss Erin Hayes, Miss Nora Kincaid, Miss Emma Wesley, Miss Rusha Wesley, Miss Katie Fenton, Miss Willie Terrell, Miss Naomi McElreath, Miss Madge Stubbs, Miss Martha Stubbs, Miss Julia Killian, Dr. Elizabeth L. Returns for Brief Vacation Wearing Theatrical Laurels

Miss Lois Hardy, charming young Georgian, member of an aristocratic southern family, who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hardy, in Senora, wearing theatrical laurels won in New York.

By Bessie S. Stafford.

WEARING deservedly won theatrical laurels, awarded in a Broadway production, "The Creaking Chair," a mystery play presented at the Lyceum theater, Miss Lois Hardy has arrived from New York to spend a brief vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hardy in Senoia.

Seldom it is indeed that a young actress meets with the success and acclaim that has come to Miss Hardy, who left her native heath less than three years ago with the avowed purpose of making a place for herself in the dramatic world. That she has achieved her ambition is proclaimed in the fact that she returns to the metropolis to appear in a production sponsored by Livingston Platt, under the direction of a noted producer, Eugene Walters.

It was Carl Reed, manager of "The Creaking Chair," who first discovered he had a "find" in this promising newcomer. From office to office she went and the answer always was the same: "Nothing today." At last, when all hope seemed lost, Carl Reed saw her and took her address. He recalled it when Eleanor Griffith was suddenly taken ill, and the result was Miss Hardy made her stage debut that night in Miss Griffith's part in "The Creaking Chair" at the Lyceum.

As a distinguished member of the Triangle theater, she appeared before the "sophisticates," a circle of such celebrities as Daniel Frohman, Burr McIntosh, Ned Wayburn, Ethel Barrymore, George Cohan and Grace George, all looking for possible talent in New York's only theater located in a triangular cellar. It is under a Chinese laundry, down on Seventh avenue, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, just on the outskirts of Greenwich Village, where all sorts of plays are presented by Kathleen Kirkwood, a former newspaper woman.

The patrons, who are admitted by subscription, sit at tables smoking and sipping ginger ale, and chatting between acts. Its freshly painted door, ornamented with a modest triangular sign, directs the elite of the literary and artistic world to this theater, which acts as a magnet to New York's intellectuals nightly composing the audience.

This pretty little southerner possesses expert technique and throws herself wholeheartedly and comprehendingly into her work. Deep in her heart there is an overwhelming love for her artistic profession and before long Miss Hardy's name will flash in glittering electric letters above a Broadway playhouse and the rosy day dreams of the plucky little Georgian will be realized.

The Price Gilberts' New Home.

"THAGEE," the new home of Judge and Mrs. Price Gilbert, crowns the tip-top of a hill on Wesley road. The site was selected by the owners more than three years ago for the natural beauty of the woods as well as for the sparkling spring on the sixteen acres of land.

The two-story colonial house is built half and half of Stone Mountain granite and gray shingles topped by a green and tiled roof with its windows shuttered by green blinds.

Mrs. Gilbert left untouched the dogwood trees and amazingly lovely wild azalea, nature's gift to the acreage, and she began two years ago the cultivation of the garden which may well be termed a "friendship garden" as intimates residing in California, New York, Venice and London have contributed to the four terraces which are a-bloom with gorgeous flowers. Boxwood borders the pathways, rose vines climb upon the terraces, the walls are built of ruble stones, and there is an atmosphere of blissful quietness and enchantment. The garden will be at its loveliest when Judge and Mrs. Gilbert take possession next week.

Thagee takes its name from the ancestral home of Mrs. Gilbert, owned by her grandfather, the late Ralph Howard, and occupied by her brother, Ralph Howard, in Russell county, Alabama, in which four generations of the family have lived. Four successive presidents of the United States signed the various land grants as the plantation was bought from time to time from the Creek tribe of Indians, taking its name from the Thagee creek which winds its babbling way through the property. Here it was the chatelaine of the new "Thagee" on Wesley road saw the "light of day," and tremendous amount of sentiment figured largely in the christening of her new home. A winding driveway leads from the road up to the entrance of the house, and stately trees stand guard over the lawn. The center stone over the hospitable doorway was presented Judge Gilbert by Hollins Randolph and is a part of Lee's statue from the Stone Mountain Confederate memorial and the mantelpiece in the living room which looks like onyx, is made of stone from Pine mountain, the gift of a friend of the distinguished owner of Thagee.

Mrs. M. Obeys Her Mother.

JUDGE JOHN S. CANDLER'S recent appeal to return to the "Christian school and the old-fashioned altar of mother's knee," made before the LaGrange college graduating class, pointed out the fact that adherence to these two ideals will do much towards rightly building the future life of a boy and girl.

An incident relative to this very subject and one giving concrete evidence of the influence of a mother's early training, the belief in her power of judgment which is regarded to this day, is revealed in the following story. Mrs. M., a former Atlantan, resides in New York, having lived there ever since she married. She is the petite mother of a lovely 17-year-old daughter attending a fashionable school in the east, and she was a visitor here last week, coming down for a short stay with her mother, Mrs. S. Joining a luncheon party at which she was honor guest, and stylishly gowned in a model of black taffeta, she apologized in these words for being a little late: "I am sorry, but my mother thought my skirt entirely too short and she asked me to lengthen it before I left the house."

And, with this sentence finished, Mrs. M. turned back the hem to show over an inch of material added to the skirt of that taffeta gown, which came direct from some smart Parisian shop.

A feeling of respect and admiration surged through every woman at the party, significant for the adult who wasn't ashamed to heed and obey her mother's request.

A PILOTS' club exists in all its youthful glory in Macon, its membership composed of the feminine sex in the college set who gave a banquet at the Hotel Dempsey last week. An interesting program featured the affair. With apologies to the sterner sex, and The Macon Telegraph for the clipping, the following humorous opinion of the banquet hostesses on mere man is herewith published.

MEN

What They Are For.

Men are what women marry. They have two feet, two hands and sometimes two wives, but they never have more than one collar button or one idea at a time.

Like Turkish cigarettes, men are all made of the same material; the only difference being that some are a little better camouflaged than others.

Generally speaking, they may be divided into three classes: Husbands, bachelors and widowers.

Bachelors are a commodity, husbands a necessity and widowers a luxury—especially when making love.

Bachelors come in two varieties—eligible and ineligible. An eligible bachelor is a body of vanity surrounded with women. An ineligible bachelor is a mass of obstinacy surrounded by suspicion.

Husbands are of three varieties—prizes, surprises and consolation prizes. Making a husband out of a man is one of the highest plastic arts known to civilization. (Making a man out of a husband is second highest). It requires science, sculpture, common sense, faith, hope and more especially charity.

In these days of feminism, a husband is of no importance whatever until you have tried living your whole life without one. Then you may find yourself wistfully wondering even if a dead or divorced husband isn't better than none at all.

It has long been a matter of scientific wonder how a fluffy, soft, tender, violet-scented little thing like a woman should enjoy kissing a big, awkward, stubby-chinned, tobacco and bay-rum scented thing like a man.

"The Call of the World."

WITH an appreciative eye for poetry of exceedingly high type, the seniors of the Girls' High school accorded to Miss Rachel Eve Neely the honor of publishing her sonner, "The Call of the World," at the beginning of the 1926 annual.

Ever since she was a tiny girl this talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Neely has shown a decided poetical gift, and had her parents permitted their newspaper friends to do so, Miss Neely could easily have won as much recognition as Nathalie Crane, who startled the world in her babyhood days with her ability.

Miss Neely was an honor pupil at Girls' High, enters Smith college in the fall fully prepared to establish her remarkable record upon the historical pages of that institution of learning, following in the footsteps of her brilliant and charming mother, who as Miss Rae Schlesinger enrolled her name upon its famous roster.

The Call of the World.

This earth, this world, this sphere of earnest mortals
Is striving, now and ever, for the goal
Of learning; seeking for the magic portals
Of wisdom, gates that open to the soul
Whose mind is pure and free. The realm of Youth
Lifts up its head and learns concerning life—
Its mansions, people, gracious or uncouth.
Today, Youth heeds life's tale of woe and strife.
And we, the very fount of youth discuss
The movements of the world—here, work; there, play.
We, too, now that the aerth has need of us,
Can answer to its call; now we can say:
"We've learned our duty to the world. Yes.
We come. O! God, our every effort bless."

—RACHEL EVE NEELY.

Mrs. Stockbridge Will Handle Woman's Club Publicity

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, announces Mrs. Basil Stockbridge as press chairman of the organization, to succeed Mrs. John R. Hornady, who has served the club in this capacity for the past three years and who now holds the office of first vice president.

Mrs. Stockbridge has had unlimited experience in newspaper work, having conducted feature writing for the Atlanta Journal in the past. She is gifted in the art of writing and will give much of her time to keeping the public advised of the many activities and achievements of the Atlanta Woman's club, in which she is deeply interested. Mrs. Stockbridge is an unusually attractive young woman, and possesses a charming personality.

Mrs. W. C. Dumas will assist Mrs. Stockbridge and each department of the club will have its press representative, in order that all worthwhile work may be reported. The officers of the club will lend every assistance to the new committee, which is composed of young and enthusiastic club workers.

Mrs. John R. Hornady, before becoming a resident of Atlanta, handled publicity for various clubs in Alabama. She was also a prominent worker in the many liberty loan drives put over during the late war, and achieved much success in her particular line. She conducted the publicity of the club throughout the administration of two presidents, in a very able and efficient manner.

Miss Nellie Sullivan Will Present Revue.

A musical song and dance revue will be presented Friday evening, June 11, at 8 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium by the Nellie Sullivan dancers under the direction of Miss Nellie Sullivan. The program will be most artistic and modern. Stories, songs and customs of all the old countries of the ancient classics to the most eccentric jazz, will be interpreted by finished dancers beautifully costumed.

The 'Gypsy Inn," starring the little tots, will be one of the featured numbers. Introducing the big stars impersonated by the little stars, Freda Sullivan, Nickey Zackary, Toots Dunbar, Jeanette Young, Clotele O'Rourke, who are very familiar to the theatergoers, having appeared professionally already at their early age.

Another beautiful number, Oriental Mysticism" introduces a novel and gorgeous effect, which well carries out the title. Dancers as mummies come to life and execute the movements of the dance of ancient Egypt, and weave a story in pantomime of an Egyptian prince and a slave girl. With the special costuming and lighting effects it will be the most fascinating episode. Samuel Clarke, Atlanta's most versatile boy dancer, takes the part of the Egyptian prince, and in his Circassian dance his remarkable skill is noted in his high leaps and aerial work. Lucyle Beale takes the part of the slave girl and in team-work they show equally extraordinary skill and talent.

A special orchestra has been selected and directed by Mr. Richard Gordon, who has charge of the musical department of the school.

Tickets are $1 for adults and 50 cents for children, and may be obtained at the door.

Mrs. Buchanan To Present Pupils.

On Monday evening, June 7, at 8 o'clock in the Kirkwood school auditorium a number of pupils from Mrs. Natalie Buchanan's classes of piano and expression will appear in recital.

This is the first of a series of recitals arranged by Mrs. Buchanan's pupils for the month of June, marking the close of school term and opening of summer classes. Certificates will be awarded to pupils having completed their grades and an interesting programme of music and readings will be rendered. Those appearing on the program Monday evening are: Marguerite Orr, Alice Atkinson, Marion Respess, Bertha Simpson, Susan Morris, Burnie Lee Brannon, Mary Jenson, Mineola Stewart, Jack Almand, Mary Eleanor Camp, Frances Gatlin, Amelia Pulliam, Becky Fincher, Jane Woodhouse, Margaret Brantley, Mary Hill Ostley, Betty Parks, Louise Smith, Virginia Britton, Elizabeth Fulbright, and Kathryn Hargrave.

City Federation Members Urged To Attend School

Members of the City Federation of Women's Clubs are urged to take advantage of the opportunity offered by the Atlanta League of Women Voters to attend an all-day citizenship school June 9 at 591 Piedmont avenue. The morning session begins at 11 o'clock and will consist of a lecture and drill on "Parliamentary Usage" under the competent leadership of Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, one of Atlanta's ablest club women. Lunch will be served at 12:30 o'clock, after which there will be a most interesting explanation of a chart showing how the League of Women Voters work through the standing committees in the national, the state and the local organizations.

Club members who belong to the League of Women Voters may attend the school without cost, but non-members of the league will pay the nominal sum of 25 cents. The lunch will be 50 cents per plate to all women. Those wishing reservations are requested to phone league headquarters Walnut 8264, by Monday evening.

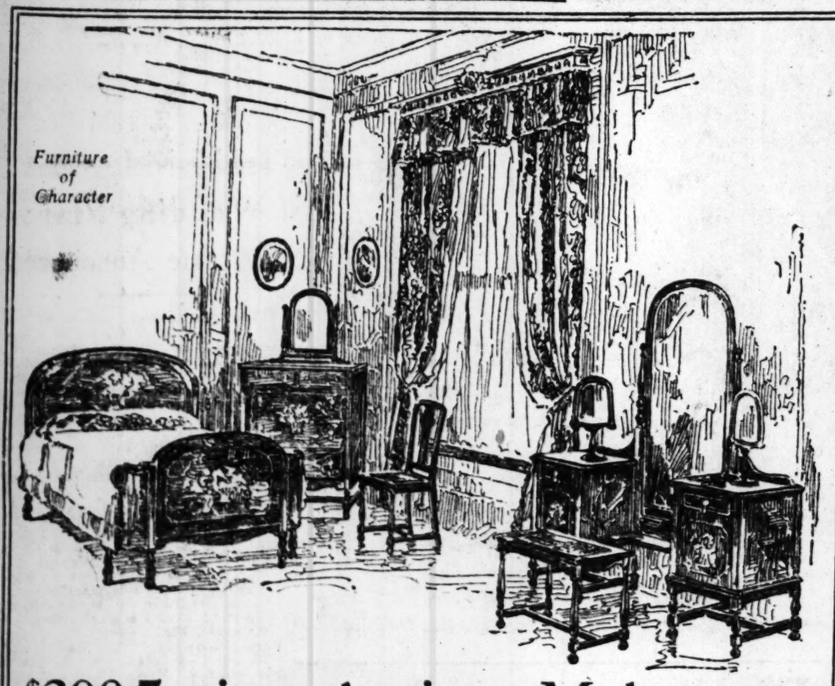

Young Matrons' Chapter Formed by Mrs. Jones.

Wednesday afternoon, June 2, at 3 o'clock, a group of young women met at the Atlanta Woman's club and 'under the able supervision of Mrs. Sam D. Jones, who made a most interesting talk, organized a new chapter of Service Star Legion, to be known as the "Young Matrons' chapter."

They will "carry on" the work and ever uphold the high ideals and purposes of this oldest patriotic organization of women of the world war, as represented by the five points of the star, namely, sisterhood, education, relief, remembrance and vigilance.

The following officers were elected to serve the first term: President, Mrs. Frank Allcorn; first vice president, Mrs. Montague Boyd; second vice president, Mrs. Clarence Haverty; recording secretary, Mrs. Julian Robinson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. John L. Tye, Jr.; treasurer, Mrs. Allen Burdett; registrar, Mrs. Charles Wood; auditor, Mrs. William Candler.

The next meeting of the Young Matrons' chapter of Service Star Legion will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. Frank Allcorn, and the committees will be appointed and complete plans for the year discussed.

Social Activities Feature Woman's Club Summer Program

The Atlanta Woman's club is offering many unique forms of entertainment during the summer months. While the regular civic and cultural activities have been suspended, as usual, until September, it is the desire of Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president, that the club shall become a community center for the benefit of all members, their families and their friends.

The spacious banquet hall and terraces are particularly adapted to teas, card parties and luncheons, only a day or two's notice in advance being necessary to provide a delicious plate luncheon, salads, sandwiches, etc. The fine concrete swimming pool is open week days and nights, and all members and their families are welcome. Swimming parties of eight or more may consist of some members and friends who are non-members. Heretofore, a larger minimum was required, but the ruling has been changed, as stated, to eight or more. This will appeal to members and their guests desiring a two-table game of bridge before a swim.

Mrs. Price-Smith wishes each member to consider the club a second home, and to this end, she has appointed a special committee to extend her personal invitation to every woman whose name appears in the year book to come and meet with her and the other officers of the club.

Particular attention is likewise being given to the junior division activities, and not only will the younger contingent be afforded the privileges of the club proper, but may enjoy open house at the attractive junior lodge in Avondale.

Special committees, such as finance, house, membership, and others, will continue to function at all times.

Mrs. Wilmer Moore, chairman of membership, and her committee have already enlisted 20 new members. With their active cooperation and the support of the executive board and other members, it is anticipated that 100 new members will be enrolled by the end of the year. Members of the hospital committee pay weekly calls upon the patients, flowers are placed in the club wards, and everything possible to bring cheer and comfort to the sick abed has been and will continue to be done. A request is made that everyone wishing to send flowers to the hospitals will kindly leave them at the clubhouse, so that they may be properly distributed.

Look 10 Years Younger

New, Easy Way Quickly Removes Tell-Tale Wrinkles, Rings and Lines

No longer need any woman endure the embarrassment of flabby face muscles, lines and wrinkles, says Marie Nielé, famous beauty specialist. Thanks to her discovery—Marsha Tissue Creme, you can quickly erase those blemishes which ravish youth and beauty. Deep creases in the face, lines about the eyes, rings and shadowy hollows disappear as if by magic. In their place returns your smooth radiant skin of youthful firmness.

Marsha Tissue Creme actsnot only on the surface as do ordinary creams but penetrates deeply into the pores and throws off all the dust and grime which irritate the skin. Its antiseptic, tonking and invigorating natural oils assist nature in its work of nourishing and building up the tissues. Then it removes those dimly imbedded impurities which cause enlarged pores and sallow complexions. The way is prepared for the abundance of nature's work of building up sagging facial muscles to be accomplished. The skin is then left clear and velvety, shows an immediate improvement, looks younger. Outstanding features: Marsha Tissue Creme on this offer. If you are not satisfied with results Dr. Hoke Smith's Freckle, Tan, Sallow Complexion Lotion, wrinkle eradicator, should be used in conjunction with Marsha Tissue Creme. Both are guaranteed. Needlework Guild Sets Goal For 10,000 Garments

The Atlanta branch of the Needlework Guild has set 10,000 garments for its 1926 goal and if all section presidents, directors and laymen will cooperate and try to increase their contribution of garments the goal can easily be reached. Plans to organize junior auxiliaries, patterned after the one at the Girls' High school which has already been formed and the girls have made a number of garments and expect to make more during their vacation days, are being formed.

A committee composed of Mrs. E. S. Harrold, Mrs. W. P. Felker and Mrs. B. L. Aldmand was appointed at Tuesday's meeting held at Mrs. Murray Howard's on Myrtle street to organize junior auxiliaries. Clubs having junior departments, as well as Sunday school classes, Girl scouts, Camp Fire Girls and neighboring groups, are asked to cooperate with the above committee.

The Kentucky, Hoosier, Buckeye Woman's clubs are sponsoring spend-the-day parties at which the women members will make garments that will benefit over forty charitable institutions in the city.

Girl Scouts are members of the National Guild. This work is recognized in connection with community service award requirements, one of the highest scout honors. Four garments count one point, and making of baby kits is especially stressed for Camp Fire Girls with a handcraft honor given as reward.

A speakers' bureau from Atlanta senior department has been formed with Mrs. Fred Stewart as chairman. Any individual, any Sunday school teacher, any organization or any neighborhood group desiring information concerning the work of the guild or information of junior auxiliaries please telephone Mrs. Stewart, West 0838, and a speaker will be supplied. Mrs. Arnold Broyles, Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. Fred Paxon and Mrs. M. H. Smith, complete the committee.

The Atlanta branch collected and distributed over 7,000 garments last fall, to over forty charitable institutions of this city. The public at large is asked to help in reaching the goal for the 1926 collection.

The officers are: Mrs. Murray Howard, president; Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, first vice president; Mrs. H. G. Hastings, second vice president; Mrs. W. H. Moor, third vice president; Mrs. E. R. Lowry, fourth vice president; Mrs. W. W. Alexander, secretary; Mrs. E. S. Harrold, assistant secretary; Mrs. S. B. Mitchell, treasurer; Mrs. Fred Patterson, publicity chairman.

The Needlework Guild is non-secretarian in its membership; all creeds, classes and sects working together, and aids no specific charity, but ministers to many charities.

Mrs. Vereen Weds Major Queener, of Tenn.

Montezuma, Ga., June 5.—A marriage of social interest was that of Major W. E. Queener of Knoxville, Tenn., to Mrs. Cecil Hicks Vereen of Montezuma, which was solemnized Sunday morning, May 31, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Colon Hicks. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Marvin R. Heflin in the presence of the immediate family and a few close friends.

The bride is a young woman of rare culture and charm. After graduation from high school she continued her studies at Hollins and Wesleyan, winning for herself hosts of friends throughout the south. Major Queener, who has been superintendent of the Montezuma school system for three years, is well known in educational circles in Georgia, having taught in the Marshallville school and in the Georgia Military college at Milledgeville before coming to Montezuma.

SARAH DICKINSON.

The Sarah Dickinson chapter, of Newnan, held their annual meeting in May, and elected the following officers: Regent, Mrs. T. J. Jones; first vice regent, Mrs. C. S. Colly; second vice regent, Mrs. T. J. Fisher; recording secretary, Mrs. L. S. Sewell; corresponding secretary, Mrs. D. S. Cuttino; treasurer, Mrs. Sam Banks; auditor, Mrs. N. L. North; historian, Miss Maud Arnold; registrar, Mrs. J. H. Powell; chaplain, Mrs. M. C. Farmer; editor, Mrs. Wade Stallings. This chapter is compiling the "Chronicles of Coweta County," and most of the material is now ready for the printer, and the history will be delivered in the fall. All state and national obligations have been met, and the chapter is on the honor roll.

COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

The Council of Safety chapter, D. A. R., of Americus, recently held their annual meeting, and elected the following officers: Regent, Mrs. J. L. Sparks; first vice regent, Mrs. Howell Elam; second vice regent, Mrs. H. B. Simmons; treasurer, Mrs. R. F. Poole, Jr.; registrar, Mrs. Henry Glover; recording secretary, Mrs. E. B. Anderson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Walter Rylander; historian, Mrs. J. L. Burgin; chaplain, Mrs. Z. A. Littlejohn; parliamentarian, Mrs. Frank Harrold.

SAVANNAH.

Officers elected at the annual meeting of Savannah chapter, in May, resulted in the following being chosen: Regent, Mrs. J. W. Daniel; vice regent, Mrs. R. H. Roux; recording secretary, Mrs. Edgar J. Oliver; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Tiffany Wilson; treasurer, Mrs. Karl Oppenheimer; historian, Mrs. C. Burford Smith; registrar, Mrs. John Calais; editor, Mrs. J. Conrad Puder; chaplain, Mrs. J. A. Thomas. Members of the board are Miss Henrietta Caphton, Mrs. James N. Carlee and Mrs. Frank Oliver. The retiring regent, Mrs. Frank Johnston, gave an excellent report of the year's work, and was presented a silver vase by the chapter in token of their love and esteem. The ex-regent's bar was also presented the retiring regent, from the executive board.

All past regents will hereafter be designated as honorary regents. A fine report of contingental congress was given by Mrs. Wilbur M. Coney, after which a most interesting mothers' day program was presented.

OCHLOCKNEE.

The Ochlocknee chapter, of Thomasville, recently held their annual meeting and elected officers for the ensuing year. Financial condition of the chapter was reported as excellent. The chapter is contemplating changing the name to that of "Thomasville," and this will be voted on at the first fall meeting.

HANCOCK.

The granite marker which will be erected by Hancock chapter, of Sparta, on the old Creek Indian trail in the upper part of the county, is nearing completion. It will be of Hancock granite in the form of a huge boulder, with three sides left rough, just as it was taken from the quarry. On the smooth side the inscription will be carved. This boulder will mark the historic spot where the Creeks held their last treaty with the white men of that section, before moving westward, and is on the course of the old trail used by the Indians in those far-away days.

The Sesqui-Centennial.

When the sesqui-centennial international exposition opens formally in Philadelphia on July 4, there will be offered to America an elaborate representation of the nation's progress in science, invention, mechanics and the arts; a fair motivated by what is termed a "national thanksgiving for a century and a half of freedom." Preliminary exercises were held at the exposition grounds on May 31, when President Coolidge sent a message, and the "informal opening" occurred on June 1, but the formal opening ceremony will take place on independence day, the sesqui-centennial birthday of the nation. Millions of dollars have been expended on buildings and grounds, and exhibits will be shown from every state in the union, and many foreign countries.

A reproduction of Mount Vernon, in Virginia, and of Sulgrave Manor, the Washington ancestral home in England, will be placed on a quiet, flower bordered stretch of road that leads into a representation of the High street, Philadelphia, as it was in the days when the voice of the liberty bell sent its message ringing out to the world. This exhibit, the gift of the women of Philadelphia, will bring again into visible existence Benjamin Franklin's printing shop; the Girard counting house; the Quaker meeting house; the Robert Morris house; the Shippen house; the Indian Queen inn; the market house, and a number of other of these quaint old houses, which make it seem a long way back to the dawn of American independence.

Five thousand dollars was appropriated by the last continental congress, D. A. R., which will be expended [illegible] furnishing the replica of the house in Philadelphia in which [illegible] Washington lived while in that city, and in which Jefferson and Madison consulted over the declaration of independence, the signing of which this stupendous exposition commemorates.

The exposition will last until December 1.

Mrs. Aldredge Honors Miss Heringdine.

Mrs. J. C. Aldredge entertained Saturday afternoon with a beautiful miscellaneous shower at her home on Beecher street in compliment to Miss Pearl Heringdine, a bride-elect of June.

After the arrival of the guests an interesting contest was held, Mrs. G. W. Cleveland winning the prize, which was a beautiful atomizer. The gifts were brought into the living room in a Cupid's express wagon and presented the bride-elect by little Miss Allie Ruth Fitzpatrick, of Macon, Ga., niece of the hostess.

Delightful refreshments were served and boutonnieres of orange blossoms were presented as favors.

Those invited were Mesdames M. L. Aldredge, D. R. Mathews, W. A. Ivey, Loy Lee Edmondson, James Fitzpatrick, of Macon, Ga.; Eugene C. McConnaughey, H. G. Towers, Roy C. Johnson, G. W. Cleveland, J. H. Twilley, W. L. Culbertson, Z. A. Ryan, R. E. Baron, Mae Ivey, J. T. Fincher, Jack Garfield and Misses Agnes Steed, D. T. Denson, Gertrude Mott, Evelyn Mayes, Louise Aldredge, Clara Baker, Martha Fincher, Lucy Henslee, Inez Hale, Ruth Kemp, Oneilda McConnaughey, Lucile Turner, Anna Bailey, of Washington, D. C.; Rosalee Steed, of Washington, Ga.; Marion Mathews and Hazel Wells.

Mrs. Aldredge was assisted in receiving by her daughter, Louise, and Miss Agnes Steed. The guest of honor was lovely in an afternoon dress of maize georgette with French flowers and silver trimming.

Fifth District W. C. T. U. Will Meet in Decatur.

The next quarterly meeting of the fifth district W. C. T. U. will be held in the Decatur Baptist church September 1, as announced at the session held Monday afternoon in the College Park Methodist church June 1.

Reports from unions in the district were made, showing that 451 members had been added to the roll of the organization since October with 200 members from 17 unions embraced in this district present at the meeting, according to Mrs. W. R. Reeves, secretary.

Mrs. Marvin Williams, acting state president in the absence of Mrs. Mary Harris Armour, and Mrs. E. C. Atkins, state field secretary, were principal speakers at the closing session. Demonstrations by children and mothers of College Park, a recital on "Loyal Temperance Legion," by Miss Elsie Moles, and prayers finished the program.

The unions embraced in the fifth district union are College Park, Decatur, Bolton, Douglasville, Druid Hills, East Point, Mary Latimer McLendon, Patterson, Piedmont, Red Oak, Capitol View, Conyers, Emory university, Florence Atkins, Grant Park, Kirkwood and Peachtree road.

Mrs. Foster Heads Hoke Smith P.-T. A.

The outstanding feature of the last regular meeting, for the terms of '25-'26 of the Hoke Smith Junior High Parent-Teacher association, was the election of officers.

Mrs. Charles Foster was unanimously reelected to serve as president. Other officers reelected were as follows: First vice president, Mrs. W. C. Slate; second vice president, W. A. Vermoy; recording secretary, Mrs. Tippen, and treasurer, Mrs. Whitley. Mrs. C. A. Ball was elected financial secretary and Mrs. J. R. Morgan corresponding secretary. Under the able administration of Mrs. Foster, the year's work has been most constructive and efficient.

"Crosses" Are Given At Meeting by R. E. Lee U. D. C. Chapter

The Robert E. Lee chapter, U. D. C., College Park, met Tuesday, June 1, at 3:30 o'clock in the home of Mrs. V. C. Mason, Virginia avenue, the president, Mrs. R. L. Proctor, presiding.

Invocation was made by the chaplain, Dr. Irby Henderson. The president, assisted by the recorder of crosses, Mrs. B. D. Gray, delivered four "crosses of service," as follows: Lieutenant Eugene Cunningham Whitehead; Sergeant Q. M. C. Samuel E. Lang (overseas); Addison Montgomery Hughie, Jr. (navy); Lieutenant Baron DeKalb Gray, Jr.

Mrs. Proctor gave words of approval to these World war heroes and announced that Lieutenant Gartrell Webb would be awarded his "cross of service" at the September meeting. Hope was expressed that his mother, Mrs. Frank Webb, would have a speedy recovery from her present illness.

Another feature of the program was a delightful surprise to the president. Mrs. William J. Mills presented to Mrs. Proctor in the name of the chapter a handsome silver carving set with the following words: "It give me great pleasure to present this from the chapter. We hope our beloved president will enjoy using the gift as much as we enjoy giving it."

Mrs. Proctor responded with appreciation.

The hostess, Mrs. V. C. Mason, and social chairman, Mrs. Lily M. Love, served refreshments and the Robert E. Lee chapter adjourned for the summer months.

Miss Kopkins Speaks To East Point Club.

Miss Jessie Hopkins, librarian of Carnegie library, addressed the club Friday afternoon at the literary meeting held at the home of Mrs. Frank Upchurch.

Miss Hopkins chose for her subject, "New Books and Biographies." Her talk was interspersed with humorous or pathetic stories of the author's life.

Mrs. Hugh Couch sang a group of solos, accompanied by Miss Jeanette Spaugh.

During the afternoon Mrs. J. T. McGee, the president, called a short business session and disposed of several small business items.

After the June business meeting the club will discontinue the meetings during the summer months except now and then a called meeting.

Electa Chapter O. E. S. Has 29th Birthday.

Tuesday night, June 1, marked the 29th milestone in the history of Electa chapter. Quite a gathering of the order and their friends helped to make this occasion a success. The hall was bright with spring flowers and the color scheme in the banquet room was pink and white.

Through the united efforts of Sisters S. L. Davis and Caroline B. Dodd, a splendid program was offered to the enjoyment of all. We regret the absence of the honor guest, Sister Sally McElroy, associate grand matron of Georgia.

Sister Rose Mae Ashby graced the platform with her usual charm, and Brother William McLaran, grand patron, with great tact, was master of ceremonies. At roll call many past matrons and patrons were introduced and seated as honor guests. It was necessary at [illegible] time to mark the passing of our beloved sister, Ella Howard. We wish for our chapter a long life and a profitable one.

Couple Remarry For Silver Wedding.

In celebration of their silver wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Snell, of 1361 Everhart street, Capitol View, experienced the thrill of being "married" a second time Saturday evening when some 75 friends gathered at their home to offer congratulations.

"There's been no slipping of the first knot, as we have lived together continuously for 25 years, but we decided to experience the ceremony again to make it a double bowknot," Mr. Snell remarked, explaining that the "wedding" was staged to furnish entertainment for the guests.

The "ceremony" was performed Saturday by the Rev. W. L. Kutts, minister of Capitol View, and memories of the first wedding in Atlanta a quarter of a century ago were revived.

Mr. Snell is a painting and paperhanging contractor. Mrs. Snell was formerly Miss Sarah Anna Frizzle, of Tallapoosa, Ga. They have two children, Ross G. Snell and Inez Z. Snell.

Mrs. Meadows Honors Miss Julia Bagwell.

Mrs. Prentice Lionell Meadows entertained at a miscellaneous shower on Saturday for her sister, Miss Julia Bagwell, whose marriage to Marcus LeFayette Owen will be an interesting event of June.

A trousseau contest and other interesting features were enjoyed. The prizes awarded were bath salts and a pretty decorated powder puff.

Atlanta and Lowry Club Has Outing.

The Atlanta and Lowry club, composed of some 300 men and women employees of the Atlanta and Lowry National bank, enjoyed its first outing of the summer last Thursday, taking advantage of the holiday.

From early in the morning until late in the evening the club members indulged in outdoor sports at the Marietta Golf club, taken for the day by the Atlanta visitors. There was a tennis tournament, a dozen golf matches, swimming races and field sports.

Throughout the afternoon and evening dancing was enjoyed in the beautiful clubhouse of the Marietta club, which possesses the finest view of any club in Georgia, looking over a broad valley with Kennesaw mountain in the distance.

Officers of the big bank, including Robert F. Maddox, chairman of the board, and Thomas K. Glenn, president, were guests of the club.

Miss Gladys Lane Is Given Luncheon.

A beautiful affair of Friday was a luncheon given in honor of Miss Gladys Lane, a bride-elect of June, by Mrs. Evan Lee McNaughton at the home of her mother, Mrs. S. Clifton Orr, on Muscogee road. The hostess was assisted in entertaining by her sister, Mrs. Forrest M. Barfield, and her cousin, Miss Helen Hockenhull.

The house was made attractive with plants and garden flowers. In the dining room the table was covered with an imported cloth of Egyptian lace. A plateau of growing pink geraniums graced the center of the table. On each side, alternating were small baskets filled with the same flowers and silver candlesticks holding unshaded pink candles. All of these were tied with French blue tulle. The place cards were dainty hand-painted brides and the favors were soft white powder puffs mounted with miniature brides.

The guests included a group of the intimate friends and her mother, Mrs. Oscar Lane.

Lee St. P.-T. A. Gives Luncheon Honoring Faculty and Officers

One of the most delightful affairs of Friday in Parent-Teacher circles was the seated luncheon at which the executive board of the Lee Street P. T. A. entertained in honor of the faculty and officers of the association.

In the dining room at the beautifully-appointed tables covers were placed for 30 guests. The P.-T. A. colors, blue and gold, were used in every detail of the decorations, in place cards and favors.

In the center of the main table was placed the silver loving cup won at the recent state convention, filled with larkspur and yellow daisies.

Mrs. A. F. Black, the president, acted as hostess for the occasion. Receiving with Mrs. Black were Mrs A. P. Stewart, Mrs. Bratton Davies, Mrs. J. P. Hill, Mrs. L. F. Chapman and E. J. White, newly-elected president, who will take office in the fall. It was a regret that Miss Laura Wood, principal, was ill and unable to attend.

A feature of the entertainment was the presentation of lovely gifts to Mrs. L. E. DeLoach and her assistant, Mrs. Cartledge, to whom is largely due the success of the cafeteria during the current year.

Miss Barbara Johnson, fourth grade teacher and a bride-elect of the month, was presented with a set of silver salad forks by Mrs. F. A. Johnson on behalf of the teachers of the school.

Covers were placed for Mrs. F. A. Johnson, Miss Jessie Terry, Miss Barbara Johnson, Miss Inez Durham, Miss Emelize Wood, Miss Newelle Jackson, Miss Blanche Johnston, Miss Mabel Jones, Mrs. B. O. Branyon, Miss Willard Therrell, Mrs. E. A. Rhodes, Mrs. Roland Lyons, Miss Eddie Hardwick, Miss Neola McDavid, Miss Opal Shaw, Mrs. Paul Lumpkin, Miss Jim Solomon, Mrs. Geraldine McGuigan, Mrs. C. P. Connally, Mrs. Fred Thomas, Mrs. L. E. DeLoach, Mrs. W. M. Moncrief, Mrs. Cartledge, Mrs. J. P. Hill Mrs. L. F. Chapman, Mrs. A. P. Stewart, Mrs. A. F. Black, Mrs. E. J White and Mrs. Bratton Davies.

Miss Babb Honors Miss Trinx Jackson.

Miss Elsie Babb entertained Saturday at a farewell luncheon at her home in West End, complimenting Miss Trinx Jackson, who leaves Monday for New York. Many gifts were presented to the honor guest.

Woman's Club Tea Assembles Visitors.

The Atlanta Woman's club tea Friday afternoon was the scene of a large and notable gathering. Through the courtesy of Charles Howard Candler, president of Atlanta's light opera organization, Miss Mary Leila Patterson, of Griffin, Ga., one of the lovely stars who will be seen and heard in the coming comic opera performances to begin here June 21, gave a musical program of three songs, "Life and Death," "You, Dear and I," and "My Hero," from "The Chocolate Soldier." Miss Patterson's blonde beauty was accentuated by her costume of rose georgette worn with a picture hat of rose and silver. She was accompanied at the piano by Maurice Bernhart, of Memphis, Tenn.

From the head table, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president, greeted the members of the club and their guests. She was handsomely gowned in a spring ensemble of black, the underdress of which was studded in rhinestones. Mrs. Smith introduced the officers, cochairmen and distinguished guests. Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, past president of the club, made a short talk.

Mrs. Delos Hill, chairman of entertainments, who sponsored Miss Patterson and Mrs. Bernhardt, outlined the future programs of the regular Friday afternoon club teas. Mrs. Hill, who is well known in all musical circles, grand opera as well as light opera, has signally honored the Atlanta Woman's club by securing for its teas the best artists the city affords before making their debuts before the public at large.

Mrs. Price-Smith spoke of the club's success in keeping open house for its members and friends during the summer months, and particularly of the swimming pool, which is the scene of many informal parties.

Miss Nana Tucker, publicity chairman of the Atlanta Music club, commented on the interesting part the Atlanta Woman's club has played in the development of art and music in the city.

Mrs. John R. Hornady, former press charman, made a speech, in which she prophesied even greater achievements for the club during the coming year.

GOOD HEALTH NECESSARY

Many Busy Women Owe Their Health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fifty years ago there were few occupations for women. Some taught school, some did housework, some found work to do at home and a few took up nursing.

Today there are very few occupations not open to women. Today they work in great factories with hundreds of other women and girls. There are also women architects, lawyers, dentists, executives, and legislators. But all too often a woman wins her economic independence at the cost of her health.

Mrs. Elizabeth Chamberlain who works in the Unionall factory making overalls writes that she got "wonderful results" from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. Chamberlain lives at 500 Monmouth St., Trenton, N. J. She recommends the Vegetable Compound to her friends in the factory and will gladly answer any letters she gets from women asking about it.

A gift for the bride! This is an absorbing thought these days with many of us, as June is the month of weddings as well as anniversaries of past June weddings. The most worth-while gift for these, as for any gift occasion, is the gift that really contributes to the comfort and enjoyment of life—a gift for the home. Therefore, what could be more certain to give pleasure to those that are dear to you than a gift electrical—they are ideal gifts and are certain to be appreciated. Remember, too, that while a gift electrical is so suggestive of your thoughtfulness, it also gives many years of usefulness.

Make your selection of gifts from the salesroom of the Georgia Railway & Power Company on Marietta Street. Their collection of many ingenious electrical appliances are most appropriate gift pieces for your choosing and you are sure to find just the very things that any woman would be delighted to receive, for by their use there is a remarkable transformation in the convenience and efficiency of the household. You have a choice of a wide range of articles suitable for every need.

There are beautiful coffee sets, consisting of urn, tray, sugar and cream containers, either in nickel plate or copper; percolators, grills, toasters, waffle irons, vacuum cleaners, electric stoves, lovely lamps that are most artistic in their decorative beauty for the various tables about the home, and standing lamps to place beside the large inviting chair, also bridge lamps that are very charming.

Any home may be made more attractive and comfortable by the use of electrical accessories, and your gift will intensify its charm. What joy and pride will be taken in your selection for the new home. You can make arrangements with the Georgia Railway & Power Company to pay for your purchases along with your monthly electric service bills—such a convenience.

The Deauville sandal is the smartest thing shown in real sport shoes for beach and resort wear—it is made of plaited calf and is very cool and comfortable.

Another June—another annual June sale of luggage at M. Rich & Bros. Company! Hundreds of women await this event, to purchase their luggage for the summer season vacation to the mountains, seashore or travel abroad. Values at Rich's warrant it. For the next three days, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, of this week, the entire stock is offered you at reduced prices that are most attractive.

Now is the time to buy that much needed wardrobe or steamer trunk that you have been wanting for some time or a smart looking traveling bag, and perhaps you desire a case for your steamer rug if you are going abroad or an overnight bag for week-end trips in your motor car this summer. No matter what you desire in the way of luggage, Rich has a splendid assortment from which to supply your needs.

M. Rich & Bros. Company are the exclusive agents in Atlanta for Hartmann trunks—there are no better trunks manufactured, and all of us, I am sure, are familiar with Hartmann goods and quality, and can better appreciate what an advantage this sale of Rich's is offering to us.

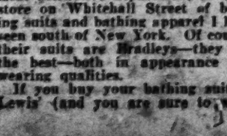

In this special sale are both wardrobe and steamer trunks of Hartmann, Oshkosh and Winship manufacture, hat boxes, overnight bags, Pullman cases, Gladstone cases and traveling bags in all sizes. They are truly exceptional values.

When you buy luggage you want the best—the name on the pieces you select mean something or nothing, depending upon the reputation, integrity and experience of the manufacturer. Luggage and leather goods that are in this splendid value-giving sale at Rich's are unsurpassed in essential features—they are scientifically made, assuring you of service and satisfaction.

The smart new millinery at M. Rich & Bros. Company reflects the season and adorns itself with flowers, sometimes conventionally appliqued in an all-over trim for the crown and often placed at the side or drooping from a large brim. Soft straws, silks, or a combination of the two are marked by a softness and subtlery of color that adds to their becomingness.

The large hat has again taken an important place in the mode of the day and they are very chic in black milan straw trimmed in either velvet or satin ribbon with ornaments of rhinestones. The sport hats at Rich's are awfully smart and are of the most popular shades in felt, straw, silk and satin. See them and buy those that will complete your costumes—creating a harmonious ensemble. There is a wonderful assortment to make your selections from.

Slip into a Bradley and out of doors
The distinction of this suit will be all yours,
There's none to compare where ere you may go,
So hurry and get one and be in the show!

The H. G. Lewis & Co. have the most attractive department in their store on Whitehall Street of bathing suits and bathing apparel I have seen south of New York. Of course, their suits are Bradleys—they are the best—both in appearance and wearing qualities.

If you buy your bathing suit at Lewis' (and you are sure to want one this summer), swimming lessons will be given you by an expert instructor at Spiller's Fountain of Youth on Ponce de Leon Avenue gratis, complimentary from the H. G. Lewis & Co.

Bradley bathing suits are striking—effective—and distinctive, and win popular acclaim wherever they are worn. Select yours—they set the style and are charming and winsome with their gay colorings and fetching designs.

With the advent of the summer season the sheer frocks step into first place! And never before have the versions of the mode been more diverse or beautifully portrayed than in the lovely Irene Castle frocks displayed at Frohsin's. They have a chic and unmistakable style distinction all their own and will delight the most fastidious, and no wardrobe will really be complete this season without one or more of them.

Smart women everywhere are choosing Irene Castle frocks—they are unusual in style individuality. Some of these stunning frocks are combined with taffeta—others have printed slips underneath—still others have pleated, shirred, girdled in gypsy style or topped with detachable capes—while one or two have the very new bloused back.

Frohsin's is a smart shop for smart women and it is the only shop in Atlanta featuring Irene Castle frocks. When you shop at Frohsin's you have the assurance of being correctly and attractively gowned for any occasion.

A large droopy hat, perhaps of chiffon or lace in some lovely pastel shade, has a single rose for decoration.

Some of the very newest designs in costume jewelry are fashioned from rondels and flat crystals.

The shawl, which can be worn with such careless grace, is exceedingly popular this summer and is shown in a myriad of charming styles.

Trinity Sunday

In the Episcopal churches on Sunday, May 30th, reverent recognition was paid to the Holy Trinity, the Three Persons in One God: Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

While finite mind cannot solve so great a mystery as "the hidden wisdom which God foreordained before the ages," to the eye of faith it is given to discern what a pure rationalism may never hope to see. "For the natural man," declares the Apostle Paul, "receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

It is only those, therefore, who see with the eye of faith and trust the guidance of the Holy Spirit, who behold the marvels of the creation story as revealed in the Scriptures.

"In the beginning God (the Father, Son and Holy Ghost) created the heaven and the earth." The same Tri-Une God later said: "Let us make man in our image, (a tri-une being) after our likeness and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air and over the cattle and over all the earth."

It is of man created in His own image, a tri-une being of body, soul and spirit, that God is speaking in His Holy Word, and yet, in his finite rationalism which is the result of his own choice, (free will) this man defiantly says, as many of them do, that he came by way of a lower order.

Having created him in His own likeness and having endowed him with the power to choose between good and evil, God gave to man the dominion over all other creatures and "over all the earth." But notwithstanding the wonderful conquests he has made in earth, sea and air he has not attained to the dominion of himself. To gain this dominion there is only one way open, the way which was described by Saint Paul when he said:

"I am crucified with Christ; yet not I but Christ liveth in me, and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me."

Friendship Church Is Host at Meeting Of Second District

Mrs. H. H. Cook.

Friendship Baptist church, which is located in Campbell county, six miles from Palmetto, was a well-organized, active W. M. S., which entertained the second district of the Woman's Missionary union of the Fairburn association on Sunday, May 30.

Mrs. H. H. Cook, of Friendship church, is the beloved superintendent of the Fairburn association. Mrs. Cook presided at the all-day rally and gave cordial welcome to delegates representing five churches of the district and visitors from various parts of the section. Mrs. Elder, of Fairburn, led the opening devotional. Dr. M. D. Collins, pastor of the church and S. S. field worker of the association, preached a strong missionary sermon at the 11 o'clock service to a well-filled house.

The ladies of Friendship served a bountiful luncheon after which the crowd reassembled at 2 o'clock for the "Quiet Hour," which was conducted by Mrs. J. W. Wills, of Atlanta, her subject being "Interecessory Laborers Together With Him."

Mrs. J. Clinton Reese, of Fairburn, mission study chairman of the association, made an inspirational talk on her phase of the work and also greatly added to the enjoyment of the program by two beautiful vocal solos.

Mr. Tatum, a prominent layman of the county, brought an earnest missionary message. Many friends will remember the day at Friendship as one of missionary uplift and a day of splendid fellowship with the hostess church.

On account of illness Mrs. Idus Robertson, of Manchester, the enthusiastic vice president of the division, was not present, and many expressions of regret and loving sympathy were sent Mrs. Robertson by a host of friends.

City Mission Board Selects New Quarters.

The Methodist Board of City Missions met Tuesday morning in the Wesley Memorial church. Mrs. A. E. Driggers, wife of the pastor of the Inman Park Presbyterian church led the devotional. Inman Park again headed the roll with 10 representatives.

The most interesting piece of business transacted was the adoption of the report of the committee appointed at last meeting to assist Deaconess Bessie Allen in finding the most suitable location for the new community social center. The committee recommended the district in the second ward near the Mary Brannen Methodist church at the corner of Whitehall street and Whitehall terrace. Miss Allen will live in this community this summer getting acquainted with the people and the needs of the community but the community house will not be open for real activity until the first of September. Mrs. C. A. Rauschenberg, Sr., Mrs. J. C. White, Mrs. Virlyn Moore and Mrs. Wallace Rogers were appointed a committee to secure a house suitable to the activities of a center of this nature.

Supt. H. O. Williams of the Goodwill industry was present and, in his monthly report, stated the plant has now about 3,000 contributors. Seventy-two days of opportunity labor has been given this month.

Sunday School Workers Training.

The first standard training school for Sunday school workers was held last week at St. Paul Methodist church, with a large attendance and an enthusiastic group of scholars. These ranged from 16 to 80 years of age, and 65 of these received certificates for work done in the school. The new Sunday school building lends itself admirably to this sort of work and presented the appearance of a bee hive during the five nights of the school.

An unusually strong faculty contributed to the success of this undertaking. Rev. Homer Thompson, conference secretary; Rev. J. C. Adams, rural secretary; Dr. T. N. Parker, dean of theology at Emory, and Dr. W. G. Henry, head of religious education in the same school, assisted in the work, while Mrs. H. H. Harris taught a large class in "Stories and Story-Telling."

Since the introduction of more modern methods, and the departmentalization of the entire school, the attendance has increased almost 50 per cent. Mr. W. M. Pharr is superintendent of the school, and is assisted by Dr. W. L. Bellenger and Mrs. W. C. McDonald.

Briefly Told

The women of the Missionary society of Patillo Memorial Methodist church recently gave a pageant, "Service" before their society. It was so well given and so effective that they were asked to repeat it in the church auditorium at the evening hour. Twelve members of the society took part.

Mrs. J. C. White, district secretary of the Woman's Missionary society for the Methodist churches of South Atlanta district was the second delegate elected to represent the district at the annual conference to be held in Atlanta in November. Mrs. W. C. McDonald is an alternate.

The Blakely Methodist women enjoyed a spend-the-day party recently at the home of Mrs. P. D. DuBose for the purpose of studying the mission book "New Days in Latin America." Thirty-five members were present.

There were 150 delegates at the district meeting of the Americus district of Methodist Missionary women which met at Ellaville last week. The 1927 metting was voted to Blakely. Mrs. Lucius Lamar is secretary.

Eight of the 12 district meetings for the North Georgia conference Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. church, south, are being held this month. The Augusta and the Gainesville districts met during the past week. Dalton district women will meet at Fairmont Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. The Marietta meeting will be in Smyrna Thursday and Friday. June 11 and 12 are the dates chosen for the Elberton district. The Griffin women will meet at Hampton June 15 and 16. The women of the Rome district will assemble at Cedartown June 17 and 18. The LeGrange meeting will be in Chipley June 29-30.

North Georgia is second in the list of conferences in the M. E. church, south, in the amount paid into the centenary fund up to date.

Mrs. Neal White, of Martha Brown Memorial Methodist church, has made a gift of her late husband's library to Young Harris college.

The young people of the missionary society of East End Methodist hold their meeting at 6 o'clock in the morning during the summer months. They meet at the church and hike to a chosen spot for breakfast, after which they have the missionary program. Mrs. L. L. Apperson is their leader. They have a membership of 25.

Mrs. J. C. White, secretary of the South Atlanta District Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. church, south, has received a gavel that has a history very interesting to Methodists particularly. It was sent by Miss Bertha Tucker as missionary and is made of the wood of a plum tree under which Bishop W. R. Lambuth stood when he organized the Siberian mission at Neaholsk, Russia. This was the last work Bishop Lambuth ever did for the church he loved so well as he died soon after this event while in Japan.

Miss Daisy Davies, field representative for the Bennett memorial in the M. E. church, south, was in Atlanta for a few hours last week. In the campaign to raise funds to complete this great administration building of the Scarritt College for Christian Workers in Nashville, Tenn., this splendid Atlanta woman has spoken 32 times in 14 days and continues very successful in securing funds.

Mrs. J. W. McEachern, Sr., and Mrs. M. E. Tilly spent a part of the past week in Warrenton attending the Augusta district meeting of Methodist women.

Bessie Tift college at Forsyth, Ga., is a source of pride to all Georgia Baptist. Their many friends were glad to see an attractive group of the graduating class pictured in the rotogravure section of the Atlanta Constitution Sunday, May 30.

The many friends of Dr. and Mrs. T. W. Ayers, who have spent 25 years as missionaries at Hwaughein, China, as representatives of the foreign mission board of the S. B. C. will be glad to know of their safe arrival June 1 in Atlanta. They are now with their daughter, Mrs. Lucy Ayers Pittman, 172 Myrtle Street, with whom they will make their future home.

Mrs. Ben S. Thompson, of Madison, Ga., vice president of the East Central division of the B. W. M. U., is resting well after an operation at the Georgia Baptist hospital. Her many friends wish for her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. F. W. Witholt, of Fort Valley, Ga., who has for some years been prominent in the Baptist W. M. U. work of Georgia and the south, was elected at the recent annual convention of the Service Star legion held at Elberton, as state president of the organization.

Mrs. W. Harvey Clarke, Baptist editor of the Federated Church Woman's page, has had as guests during the past week her eldest son from St. Petersburg, Fla., and her eldest daughter from North Carolina. Mrs. Clarke was to have been one of the speakers at the missionary rally at Friendship church May 30, and was unavoidably detained at home to the regret of all present.

Mrs. E. G. Walton, superintendent of the B. W. M. U. of Stone Mountain association and Mrs. James R. Rhodes, mission study chairman of Atlanta B. W. M. U., went to Tennille, Ga., last week and conducted a mission study class for the ladies of the First Baptist church. "Prayer Missions" was the textbook used.

Marshall Nelms Preaches Sermon In Mother's Church

Park Street Methodist church was the setting for a most unusual service last Sunday evening when Marshall Nelms, an old Atlanta boy, came back home to preach. His mother, Lily B. Nelms, was a faithful and untiring member of this church and one of the circles of the Missionary society bears her name to day in memory of her devotion to the work. This circle has enshrined within the hearts of its members that beautiful Christian life she lived and when she was called home, they promised to carry on in His name and held on in prayer until her son, Marshall, came out on the Lord's side and entered the ministry, being located now at Philomath, Ga., where he serves six rural churches of the Baptist faith. He was introduced by Mrs. D. M. Therrell, a devoted member of the Lily Nelms circle, and in a most eloquent sermon on prayer he paid his tribute to his mother's answered prayer concerning his own life. The church was filled with his friends who came to honor him and to wish him God speed in his mission of service and love.

Eighth District B. W. M. U. Meets.

When it became known that the eighth district of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Atlanta association was to hold its annual rally with the W. M. S. of the Kirkwood church, May 27, it was equally well known that a record rally attendance would be registered there. Baptist women of Kirkwood love their denominational work and it is always a pleasure to them to receive the workers with gracious hospitality. Mrs. G. S. Oakes, secretary of the district, arranged the fine program and presided at the meeting. Mrs. W. O. Mitchell, who for 23 years has served as president of the Kirkwood society, gave heartiest greetings, to which Mrs. A. P. Griffin, of Decatur, appropriately responded. Opening devotional was led by Mrs. J. P. Wall, of the East Side Tabernacle. Mrs. Oakes gave expression of appreciation of the Federated Church page in The Sunday Constitution by calling on Mrs. J. W. Wills and Mrs. Harvey Clarke to offer some suggestions by which the page may be of greater service to all church women.

Mrs. J. L. Jackson and Miss Thelma Thompson, who had just returned from the Houston convention, gave interesting "high lights" concerning the leaders and speakers who figured prominently at the recent annual meeting.

The Kate Pendleton Dawson Good Will Center was represented by Miss Ruby Hill and Mrs. M. Dawson and the Andrew and Frances Stewart by Mrs. J. R. Dickey. Mrs. J. W. Awtry reported as treasurer for both good will center funds.

Other speakers, all of whom are chairmen of important departments of work, were Mesdames C. M. Terry, J. H. Zachry, James D. Rhodes, L. D. Watson, James Kempton and Miss McMichael, a recent graduate of the Baptist W. M. U. Training school, Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. Fred Boring and Miss Lula Foster lent their voices in delightful songs of praise.

The midday luncheon served in the spacious dining hall of the handsome new Kirkwood church has never been surpassed in the history of the Atlanta Baptist association.

Last Call for Ridgecrest Camp.

"Third time's the best," say all the Georgia girls who are planing to attend the third Y. W. C. A. camp at the Baptist assembly grounds at Ridgecrest, N. C. The dates this year are June 1st to 25; only seven days to make plans if you wish to be there.

The Georgia delegation is enthusiastic and so many are going this year there will be a special car for the group. Miss Julia Allen, state Young People's leader, has planned for a special car to leave the Terminal station in Atlanta, Monday, June 14 at 7:40 o'clock. The girl from all over the state will meet at the station at 7 o'clock and journey together. The train arrives at Asheville, N. C., at 11 o'clock Tuesday, June 15, and, after lunch and a drive around Asheville, the party will go on the afternoon local to Ridgecrest, only 17 miles away.

It will be too late for you to send for regular enrollment blank. If you wish to go or you know of a girl who has decided at the last minute to join the group, send $2.50 enrollment fee to Miss Juliette Mather, 1111 Age-Herald Bldg., Birmingham, Ala.

Those who wish reservation in the special Georgia car will send their names at once to Miss Julia Allen, 320 Palmer building, Birmingham, Ala.

Work of Women Given High Praise.

At the recent district meeting of Methodist ministers and laymen held in the College Park Methodist church, woman's work in the church had a prominent place in the conference.

The committee on missions, in their report, called especial attention to the efficiency of the organization of the missionary societies and the wonderful results obtained by them. The report on lay activities which was read by W. J. Hollingsworth, held the woman's missionary society up as an example of efficiency and recommended that one of the three lay leaders of the district be a woman in order that the plan of work they follow might be worked into the laymen's activities in the church. Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of Emory University, who is lay leader for the North Georgia conference approved the suggested plan and stated "When the men of the conference are organized and as active as the women of the missionary society, the conference will move forward 100 per cent." In speaking of Wesley Memorial hospital, Dr. Cox also paid a beautiful tribute to the women of the auxiliary to the hospital and what their efforts have meant to the work here.

Four Atlantans Help Direct Affairs of Scarritt College

The Scarritt College for Christian Workers, Nashville, Tenn., which is the training center for the M. E. church, south, has been the property of the women of the church from its beginning. They established it, have supported and controlled it during these years.

At the recent session of the general conference of the church which was held in Memphis, Tenn., the women did a noble thing and presented the college to the entire church to be used, in future, by men and women students preparing for Christian service.

With the presentation, the general conference automatically was given power to elect the trustees and 35 were elected. Of these 35, three are Atlanta women. Mrs. Luke G. Johnson, who has been a member of the board for about 15 years and is the secretary, was elected for a term of four years. Miss Daisy Davies was elected for three years. Besides being a trustee Miss Davies is field representative for the Bennett memorial which is being erected on the college campus this year. Mrs. J. N. McEachern, Sr., was elected for 2 years. Mr. and Mrs. McEachern have endowed the chair of sociology in Scarritt and it is known as the "Florine McEachern Chair of Sociology" in memory of a little daughter who died many years ago.

Bishop W. B. Beauchamp is president of the board and since he has been appointed to preside over the two Georgia conferences will be an Atlanta resident also. This is an unusual percentage and Atlanta Methodists are indeed proud that they can claim four of those chosen to direct the affairs of so splendid an institution as the Scarritt College for Christian Workers.

MRS. WALLACE ROGERS.

Sixth Grades at Calhoun Hold Exercises.

The graduating exercises of the sixth grades of Calhoun school took place Thursday morning and the following took part in the program: Martha Gurley, Ina Weatherly, Mary Elizabeth Meadows, Lewis Phillips, Lee Coleman, Raymond Hightower.

Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson, first vice president of the board of education, presented the certificates of graduation.

Miss Mary Postell, assistant superintendent of schools, made an address to the pupils. Her subject was "Happiness." Miss Lillie Wurm, principal of the school, awarded the scholorships for general excellence to Raymond Hightower and Lee Coleman. The prize for excellence in history was won by Lee Coleman. The pupils reflected great credit upon their teachers, Misses Bella and Ruth Cockrell, Mrs. Nelson, Miss Postel and Miss Wurm were presented with lovely flowers as a token of esteem. The graduating class was entertained at an afternoon party at the school by the Parent-Teacher association.

One of the outstanding events of the closing of the school year at Calhoun was the dedication and naming of the Lillie Wurm library. The officers, chairmen and a few friends gathered in the library where Mrs. Julian Harris, president of the Parent-Teacher association, presented a bronze tablet to Miss Lillie Wurm, the beloved principal. The tablet was unveiled by little Miss Harriet Harris and Miss Elizabeth Turner, of the high 6-2.

Miss Wurm responded, thanking the association for their thoughtfulness in so honoring her. The library was furnished by the alumni of Calhoun school, of which many are now Atlanta's outstanding citizens.

Worthy Matrons' Club Meets.

The Worthy Matrons club of 1926, O. E. S., met at the home of Mrs. Mary Gifford, corner Los Angeles avenue and Mayflower place, Wednesday at 3 o'clock, the president, Mrs. Annabelle Cape, presiding. The worthy grand matron, Mrs. Julia J. Turner, told of the plans for grand chapter O. E. S. to be held in Macon June 14, 15, and 16. After regular business a social hour was enjoyed. Those present were: Mrs. Julia J. Turner, Mrs. Mary Sisson, Mrs. Willie May Cook, Mrs. Annabelle Cape, Mrs. Nora Lanford, Mrs. Nellye Ellis, Mrs. I. F. Bowden, Miss Alma Owens, Mrs. Geraldine Ray, Mrs. Mary Gifford, Mrs. Mamie Schelpert and Mrs. Llouella L. Simpson.

The hostess for the next meeting on July 7 will be Mrs. A. W. Ray, Bolton, Ga. Take Marietta, Ga., car and get off Log Cabin stop.

Women Voters To Open Citizenship School.

The citizenship school sponsored by the Atlanta League of Women Voters will be held June 9 at 591 Piedmont avenue, corner of Third street, one block from Ponce de Leon avenue. Opening at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning luncheon will be served by the Henard Mayonnaise company between sessions. Mrs. Hamilton Douglass, who is in charge of the school, will give the opening talk, followed by a parliamentary drill. After luncheon there will be a discussion of the local, state and national leagues and chairmen of the various committees will tell what has been accomplished in the particular line of work and discuss plans for the future. The committees represented will be: Legislation, child welfare, women in industry, international cooperation to prevent war, efficiency in government, education, organization, finance, social hygiene, and the legal status of women.

Miss Helen Douglass, prominent young Atlanta attorney, will outline the national program for 1926-27 as adopted at the national convention in April. She will also talk on the legal status of women, specifying the Georgia laws which discriminate for and against women.

League members will attend school free while non-members will pay the small sum of 25 cents. Luncheon, however, will be 50 cents to all. Mrs. Ben. Simcox, chairman of reservations, announces that all plates must be reserved through headquarters, Walnut 8264, and that due to the large demand, reservations will not be accepted after Monday, June 7.

The executive state board meeting of the Georgia league will be held in headquarters, 356-7 Candler annex, at 10:30 o'clock, Monday June 7.

Camp Site Given Atlanta League.

H. E. Hawkins of Jasper, Pickens county, Georgia, because of his deep admiration for the league and the work being accomplished by the members, offered a five-acre tract of land to be used for whatever purpose the Atlanta league desires. Monday, May 31, league members motored up to inspect the land and report the result to the June board meeting. The party was composed of Mrs. J. P. Billups, first vice president; Mrs. Benjamin M. Smith, fourth vice president; Dr. Guy L. Sink, Mrs. Guy L. Sink, executive secretary, and Mrs. V. T. Hager, of the finance committee. Upon the committee's recommendation, the gift was accepted by the board, and a letter of deep appreciation was sent to the donor.

Daughters of King Hold Semi-Annual Diocesan Assembly

The Daughters of the King held their semi-annual diocesan assembly, Friday, May 28, in All Saints church.

At 10 o'clock they made their corporate commission, with the Rev. W. W. Memminger celebrant. Following this was a "Quiet Hour" of meditation and prayer conducted by the Rev. L. W. Blackwelder, Church of the Incarnation.

A business session, presided over by Mrs. Frank Woodruff, diocesan president, took place in the chapel when reports of the various chapters and special committees were made.

The training of young women for Christian service was the dominant note of the convention, although the many-sidedness of work done with that quiet, unobtrusive zeal which characterizes the efforts of Daughters of the King, was brought out through reports of a manifold service.

Mr. Arthur H. Thomas, who had been adopted two years ago by Daughters of the King of Atlanta diocese in recognition of his fine work and influence among men confined in the federal penitentiary where he teaches a large Bible class each Sunday and sometimes serves as chaplain, was called upon to speak. Before addressing himself to his subject, Mr. Thomas expressed a deep appreciation of the gold cross which had been presented to him on the preceding Sunday by Mrs. H. J. Mikell, in behalf of the Daughters of the King, at their Whitsuntire service.

Mr. Thomas then related many instances where men in the federal prison had made readjustment of their lives to the Christian ideal since he began his ministry among them; and he also told how one of the men, to whom the Daughters of the King had given a Bible correspondence course in "Evangelism" from the Moody Bible institute, Chicago, had worthily prepared himself to become an evangelist which he would do on expiration of his prison sentence in the near future.

Before adjournment was taken, an invitation to hold the fall assembly of the Daughters of the King in St. Luke's church was given by Miss Mattie Williams and unanimously accepted.

Waycross District Methodists Meet.

The women of the Methodist Missionary societies of the Waycross district in the south Georgia conference met in annual session as the guests of the Homerville society with 13 auxiliaries represented in the delegation.

Mrs. D. M. Clark was appointed leader of the Jesup group. Mrs. T. L. Dean was appointed to take charge of the Brunswick group. Brunswick will be hostess to the annual conference in 1927.

A feature of the program was the address on law enforcement by Judge Harry Reed, of Waycross, after which the body unanimously adopted resolutions protesting any change in the prohibition laws.

Reports given by the delegates were better than at any previous time, showing an increase in all activities. Thirty Gibson members have been added during the year and a new society has been organized at Ambrose.

The next meeting will be in Jesup in May, 1927.

Parliamentary Law School June 9.

Federated Church Women and all members of Woman's Missionary societies are cordially invited to attend a school on parliamentary law, which will be held on Tuesday, June 9, at 591 Piedmont avenue, under the auspices of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, Mrs. Hamilton Douglas conducting. The school will open at 10:30 a. m. and will continue through the afternoon, lunch being served as company. Admission to school, except to league members, will be 25 cents. Luncheon to all for 50 cents per plate.

Peachtree Woman's Club Plans Bridge-Luncheon.

The final meeting of the season of the North Peachtree Road Woman's club was held Tuesday, with the new officers presiding. Plans were discussed for the activities of the year which will not begin until September, however. The club members plan to meet each month for sewing for the Needle Guild, the first meeting to be held at the home of the president, Mrs. T. C. Perkins. Final arrangements were made for the bridge luncheon to be held Wednesday, June 16, at 1 o'clock, in the Masonic temple, at Buckhead, to be given for the benefit of the library maintained by the club, the entire proceeds being used to purchase new books, which are so greatly needed on account of the extended patronage of this library. This luncheon will be furnished by the Henard Mayonnaise company with Mrs. Underwood and Mrs. Jordan, of this company, as hostesses.

Wesley Class Has Business Meeting.

Masston Wesley Sunday school class' business meeting was held at the home of Mrs. D. R. Bryan, on Oak street, Thursday at 3 o'clock. Mrs. T. L. Smith, president, presided over the meeting.

Plans were made for the summer months. A social hour was enjoyed. The hostess was assisted by Miss Cora Kay Hutchins and Mrs. H. L. Truitt. Those present were Mrs. T. L. Smith, Mrs. L. R. Winslett, Mrs. G. C. Delay, Mrs. H. L. Truitt, Mrs. E. L. McCrory, Mrs. A. J. Bellah, Mrs. H. H. Thompson, Mrs. J. A. O'Neal, Mrs. A. J. Holcombe, Miss Jacqueline Marie Holcombe, Mrs. E. L. Hutchins, Miss Cora Kay Hutchins and Mrs. D. R. Bryan.

Executive Board of B. W. M. U. Has Interesting Meeting

In the absence of Mrs. J. W. Neel, state president, who is in attendance upon the commencement exercises of Bessie Tift college, Tuesday's meeting of the executive board of Baptist Woman's Missionary Union was presided over by Mrs. George Westmoreland, vice president emerita.

Prior to the business session a most impressive devotional was conducted by Mrs. S. L. Taylor, based upon enlistment and stressing the "bigness of little things."

Dr. J. H. Lowe, missionary on furlough from China, in a most feeling talk deplored the recent reduction of $160,000 in foreign mission appropriation, recommended by the foreign board and adopted at the Houston convention. Dr. Lowe stated that the apportionment for foreign missions had already been cut to the quick and that this last drastic reduction means the closing of yet other schools and hospitals and yet further retrenchment in various other phases of foreign work.

Announcement was made of the appointment of Mrs. Paul White and Mrs. R. K. Redwine as field representatives of the Southern Union. Mrs. Redwine's first work in her new official capacity will be in connection with the general Y. W. C. A., conference to be held at Blue Ridge, North Carolina, June 4-11. Mrs. White will represent the union at an early date in missionary institutes in Maryland and Virginia.

A series of six conferences for the junior organizations of the northwestern division is being planned for the month of June by Mrs. J. T. Roberts, young people's counsellor. Miss Julia Allen, state young people's leader, and Mrs. G. S. Borders, vice president, will be with Mrs. Roberts in these meetings. Other young people's counsels will be held in various divisions of the state throughout the summer.

Miss Louise Evans, of Milledgeville, was elected counsellor for the east-central division to succeed Mrs. Frank Dennis, whose resignation was received and regretfully accepted at a pervious meeting.

Because of her enlarged duties as field representative, Mrs. R. K. Redwine resigned as counsellor for the north-central division. For a number of years Mrs. Redwine has been officially connected with the junior work of Georgia, first as state young people's leader, and later as divisional counsellor. Her splendid ability and successful experience has at all times been a most valuable asset in this department of the union's work. As yet Mrs. Redwine's successor has not been elected.

Most delightful plans were outlined by Miss Allen for a real "girly-girly" house party at Bessie Tift college, June 29-July 9, inclusive. Any girl within the state, thirteen years old or older, who loves wholesome fun and "the acquirement of new friends, and wants to know more of God's plan for saving the whole wide world," is cordially invited to attend this unique house party. Mrs. Neel, Mrs. McMahon and Miss Allen of the state union, and Miss Emma Leachman of the home board and Miss Mattie Vie Summer, foreign missionary, will be present and lend inspiration and interest to the occasion. The cost to the individual will be slight—$10 for 10 days, room and board, one dollar enrollment fee, and railroad fare, will total the necessary expenditure. This beautiful project for a worth-while summer vacation is being sponsored by the Young Woman's Auxiliaries and Girls' Auxiliaries of the entire state.

Mrs. Westmoreland gave a most interesting report of the pre-convention meeting of the board of trustees of the B. W. M. U. Training school, located at Louisville. Courses in stenography and business methods will be added features for the next scholastic year. According to decision of the board, physical examination for admission of future applicants will be made more exacting than in the past. A number of training-school graduates are at present available for places as pastor's assistants or other positions connected with local or state religious work. These graduates may be reached through union headquarters in the Palmer Building, Atlanta.

The watchword adopted by the union, in session at Houston, for the next conventional year is "Seek ye first the kingdom of God."—Matt. 6:33. "Jesus Shall Reign" is the chosen song.

The goal set for the foreign mission love-offering is $300,000 while the hoped-for amount as a thank-offering for home missions is not less than $100,000. The annual season of prayer for foreign missions will be observed during the week of November 29-December 3, instead of in January as has been the unions' custom for many years. No change has been made in the time for observance of prayers weeks for state and home missions.

"A Great Medicine"

"SEVERAL of my friends are now using Cardui just because of my recommendation, and because they saw with their own eyes what a great difference it made in my state of health," says Mrs. L. A. Stewart, 405 N. Ohio Ave., Etowah, Tenn. "I shall continue to tell my friends about it, for I think it is a great medicine.

"Two years ago I was in a very serious condition. I was in bed twelve weeks. Cardui got me on the road to recovery and I took it for several months until my strength completely returned. It built me up in a wonderful way.

"I had fallen off until I was just a shadow of myself, but after I had taken Cardui for a few weeks my appetite became so good that I could eat anything, and I gained in weight rapidly. Everyone remarked how well I was looking. Now occasionally I take a few doses of Cardui at certain times and I find it a great help."

Thousands of other women have recommended Cardui to their friends, knowing its merit from their own experience.

Cardui is a mild, harmless, purely vegetable, medicinal tonic.

Sold by druggists everywhere.

Vidalia Woman's Club Report Shows Interesting Phases

The Vidalia Woman's club was organized and federated in 1921 and has 47 members. Dues are $2.50 per annum, payable on September 1st. All local and federation dues have been paid for the current year. Meetings, business and program, are held twice each month at the scout house. Average attendance is 70 per cent. We are exceedingly proud of this, for it reflects the interest of the members.

The year book committee made a splendid year book, outlining the work so that each department would have to present one program, a wonderful help in informing the club of all details of federated club work and making the various committees study departments more thoroughly. The folowing programs featuring special days and weeks have been given: Public welfare, Armistice day, Thanksgiving day, Arbor day, Better Films, Georgia day, Drama week, Library week, Education week, Garden week, special art program with a well known portrait painter to lecture and three beautiful musical programs featuring American composers. In May 1925 we cooperated in the better homes program. The woman's club opened one new home for demonstration and gave an attractive program. Vidalia won special mention for the work done along this line. This year we are also cooperating with the various organizations. We held an expert pastry demonstration, had a beter home program and furnished music for the opening public program.

The work of the club for this year has been carried on almost entirely through the standing committees. Each to finance its undertakings and present a program covering the various phases of its work.

The community service committee gave a beautiful reception for the faculty of the Vidalia public schools. Special invitations were sent to all organizations and the general public invited through the newspaper.

Children In School.

Three children of a deserving family were put in school and books and clothing furnished through the year. The children have made a splendid record. Six dollars were given to another family where sickness of the entire family caused need of aid. This committee also carried magazines to the Vidalia hospital for enjoyment of convalescent patients and furnished clothing amounting to $8 to an other than baby in this institution. At Christmas $30 worth of linen, hose and handkerchiefs were given to the Bethany Home for Aged Women and 12 attractive holly-wrapped, individual packages of candy, nuts and raisins were sent to the inmates of the state sanitarium. This committee's crowning achievement was a beautiful booth at the county fair in Lyons, Ga. It won a $25 prize as a community booth and individual prizes to Vidalia, most of which was handled by this committee, and totaled $80. In appreciation of the splendid exhibit $10 was given to the domestic science department of the school. The total receipts of this committe from rummage sales, benefit party, candy and peanut sales amounted to $90.

The house committee has added to the equipment of the scout house one two-burner oil stove, five dozen dinner plates, five dozen cups and saucers, one kitchen table. We already owned chairs and a piano, the use of which is freely given to the scouts and other organizations.

Tallulah Committee.

The Tallulah Falls school committee held two rummage sales making $15 for Tallulah maintenance fund. A beautiful reading of "Sun Up" during drama week was turned into a silver tea and netted $8.50 more for the coffers of "Our Light in the Mountains." In May of last year a silver tea was given and sent as a birthday offering. The rural education chairman served for several months on the county board of education and made a detailed survey of the rural schools in Toombs county. We find that there are six consolidated schools, but general equipment very poor. The cart made is being studied and a definite campaign planned towards improvement in this line.

A number of schools were visited and six talks made on various phases of education. Education week was generally observed throughout the county through the efforts of this committee and five prizes for school ship and attendance given. A medal has been offered for general excellence in the Vidalia High school. The city board of health was offered any needed assistance and cooperation from the public welfare committee and the sale of health seals was the best ever held in the city. Through this committee a shower $180 of linen, was given to the Vidalia hospital. A thanksgiving shower valued at $80 was sent to the Bethany Home for Aged Women, in Vidalia, and magazines and books given the hospital and convict camps.

The city beautiful committee had plumbing put in the scout house grounds, also built a gravel walk and planted shrubs and flowers there amounting to $11. They prepared the ground for planting trees on Arbor day and had the mayor issue a proclamation for the observance of "clean-up week." They have taken the lead in this work for the past five years. Petunia plants were furnished for the window boxes at the school and 25 dogwood and holly trees brought from the woods and distributed for planting.

The press committee has a perfect record. Every meeting has been written up in local papers and a number of reports sent to The Constitution, official club page. A scrap book has been kept, including pictures of officers and chairmen and clippings from papers about the work of the club. This committee has also rendered valuable assistance in giving the necessary publicity to all entertainments sponsored by the organization.

Fine Arts Committee.

The fine arts committee, under the expert leadership of its chairman, Mrs. W. C. Somers, has a record to be proud of. The Scotch Highlander's band, one of the best musical opportunities ever offered Vidalia, was put on under the auspices of this committee and netted a nice sum. The Kiwanis club, the Legion, P.-T. A. and the Woman's club put on the best lyceum course in the history of Vidalia. Three numbers of highest character were given. This committee with one from the P.-T. A. conducted all ticket sales and stage arrangements.

Music has been furnished for every meeting and three complete programs given. Out on music from Indian lore, one on American women composers and another on negro composers. Beautiful chorus work and community singing has been a feature of the work of this committee. Song books were furnished every member. A program and seven Victor records were given the school for musical appreciation work. A musical library has been started. All music already owned by the club was arranged and $17.19 used this year and three reference books added.

The are program featuring the lecture by Robert Mackenzie Long, pupil of the famous Hungarian artist, Lazlo, was under the direction of this committee. Observance of national music week, May 2-8 included the following: Special music in the churches; musical program for Kiwanis club; public musicals; programs for Bethany home; articles in local paper regarding the value of music.

The Red Cross roll call was handled by the committee on cooperation with ex-service men and the poppy sale put on by them netted $26 for Lenwood hospital in Augusta. "Sun Up," as filmed by the Metro-Goldwin, has been booked for May 11th by the better films committee. Their chairman, Mrs. Hal Macon, is the wife of the theater manager and has worked untiringly in the cause of better films. Special pictures for children have been selected and one matinee of each week is given over to a free picture, and this is largely attended.

Our president, Mrs. O. D. Warthen, was the only president of a club in the district who attended the club institute in Athens last year. She spent a week there and returned armored for a full year's work. The Vidalia Woman's club was one of the four represented at the state convention in Augusta. The club has held special parliamentary drills and made changes in the by-laws, to expedite the handling of all business matters. She offered, as a stimulus and inspiration, a beautiful silver loving cup to the committee doing the most and best work during the year. It will be presented at the annual business meeting in May.

But what we are most anxious to tell about is better than any of these things we have told you. For the past years we have been holding our meetings in the scout house, where we have done a great deal of work and been very happy, but our attendance is larger, we are older, so this year has brought the urge to build a house of our very own. The legal requirements to own property have been met and we are duly chartered and incorporated. Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Jones have very generously given us a lot and plans have been completed for the erection of a lovely club house. The club has on hand the lot, valued at $300; and a cash deposit of $600 and at an early date the contract will be let for the building of this structure which will cost around $2,000. The club, as a whole and through its various committees, has handled during the year, $1,350.14.

Mrs. T. B. YEOMANS, Recording Secretary.

Mrs. Lester Heads Griffin Woman's Club for 1926

Mrs. Marvin Lester was elected president of the Griffin Woman's club at the final meeting for this summer at which a "better homes" program was featured, May 27, at the home of Mrs. Newton J. Baxter. The other officers elected were Mrs. W. H. Beck, first vice president; Mrs. B. C. Murray, second vice president; Mrs. P. Y. Luther, treasurer; Mrs. Newton J. Baxter, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George Niles, recording secretary, and Miss Emily Boyd, press correspondent for the sixth district.

A better homes program featured the meeting and a paper on "better homes" was read by Mrs. Baxter and "A Tribute to the Home," delivered by the Rev. George E. Zachary, rector of St. George Episcopal church. Mrs. J. P. Mason gave a solo number, Miss Aline Cumming played a piano selection and little Miss Margaret Mitchell gave a reading, all appropriate to the subject of better homes.

The Teamon Woman's club convened Monday with Mrs. T. H. Wells at her home at Teamon, the meeting being featured by the election of officers for the new year. Mrs. Charles Smoak was elected president. The other officers included Mrs. C. C. Williams, vice president; Mrs. W. P. Barfield, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. A. C. Brooks, librarian.

Through the untiring efforts of the following retiring officers, Mrs. W. A. Brooks, president; Mrs. Charles Smoak, vice president, and Miss Sally Hutson, secretary and treasurer, the two years of life of the club have seen a remarkable development and the club has become a great part of the life of the community. The club voted to send three girls to Camp Wilkins in Athens for a course this summer. The girls chosen were Misses Jane Wells, Nora Brooks and Rosalind Williams. Mrs. Franklin Sibley, Spalding county demonstration agent, gave a helpful demonstration.

Covington Woman's Club Holds Monthly Meeting.

The Covington Woman's club met in regular session at the library June 1 with Vice President Mrs. C. A. Sockwell, presiding in the absence of Mrs. S. L. Waites, president. Minutes of the last meting were read and adopted.

Satisfactory reports were made by the various officers and committee, Mrs. H. B. McDonald, treasurer, reported a splendid balance on hand. Miss Sallie Mae Sockwell, auditor, reported the club books in excellent condition and turned same over to the new officers. Mrs. O. W. Porter, chairman of civic committee, being absent, Mrs. J. E. Philips reported a donation of $2 for this committee.

Mrs. W. C. Clark and Mrs. E. E. Callaway brought up the subject of having a booth at the Newton county fair this fall and after a general discussion pro and con, it was moved and carried that the club be represented. The club will also sponsor a play of some kind during the month of July.

The program committee presented the following interesting numbers: Mrs. James Carter Anderson accompanied by Miss Fletcher Lou Lunsford at the piano, gave two beautiful violin selections and Mrs. C. A. Sockwell gave two excellent readings (a) "A House," by Dr. Frank Crane. (b) "Lilacs." At the conclusion of the program a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served by the following entertainment committee: Mrs. E. S. Stevens, chairman; Mrs. C. A. Sockwell, Mrs. Luke Robinson, Mrs. W. S. Cook, Mrs. Reuben Hull and Mrs. J. L. Skinner.

Mrs. Baxter Reads Splendid Paper On Better Homes

Mrs. Newton J. Baxter, chairman of better homes for the Griffin Woman's club, read the following interesting paper at the final meeting for the summer, her subject being "Better Homes."

The home is the family institutionalized, established with the various appliances necessary and in defined connections with similar establishments in the community, and represents an integration of many factors. It is the final objective of human activity, the starting point and the end. The home is not for a man an insignificant and transitory place of abode, like a tent or suburban bungalow; it is man in his operative, organized relations with the world and in his profoundest attitudes.

The American home is the source of our present progress and prosperity. When the home loses its influence the nation is doomed. When we fail to glorify the home we take the dowaward path. The home should be given its due reverence. Within its sacred precincts we find the foundation of everything that leads to worth while achievements. It satisfies the deep-seated yearning that comes to every human soul. It brings peace, content and happiness. God help those who have denied the exalted privilege of home making. They are to be pitied, and often are the victims of misjudged enthusiasts who have failed to grasp the fundamental principles of the great truths of life.

Glorify Home.

To glorify the home we must first give due reverence to our bodies. The material side of the home is its four walls and its contents, which should be wisely chosen and well protected. The various mental and spiritual phases of "better homes" are the appreciation of literature, art and music. Character building and religious training. Here are helps for "better homes" makers to solve the daily problems which confront us: That our time may not be wasted, but intelligently planned that a portion may be left for the "soul" of the home.

That there may be less nervous tension and more calm energy. Our money may not be squandered through ignorance, but well spent through wise planning. The children may have religious, moral and aesthetic culture to fit them to build better lives and better homes.

Four of the fundamental failures in our American homes today are: The lack of proper business basis for the home; the lack of sense of proportion within the home, and the lack of courtesy and fun in the home.

One of the greatest defects in the American home today is the lack of attractiveness. The home must be a place of greater charm if it is to hold its own against all the rival allurements that present themselves to the various members of the family circle. Beauty and comfort are just as important as efficiency in any movement toward better homes in America. Each one of us wants a home that we can return to with eagerness and leave with regret. A concentration of beauty in a little space.

What is the matter with our homes today? Is it a tendency toward selfishness, a looseness of relationship, a relaxation of former firm family ties that make possible an appalling lack of understanding? A weakness in foundation which makes homes untrustworthy bulwarks against the world. Better homes should offer a strong hold against all evil for those who live in them.

American Homes.

The American homes are for Americans, the greatest homes in the world. The whole hope of the future is enclosed within their walls; the whole legacy of the past trusts its security to them.

Here is a little poem that has been handed to the women of "better homes":

Stay, stay at home, my heart, and rest;
Home keeping hearts are happiest.
For those that wander they know not where
Are full of trouble and full of care.
To stay at home is best.

We are given four essentials in establishing ideal homes: To own the home you live in; to live in a home planned to meet the needs of your family; to artistically and conveniently relate itself to its environments and fit the limitations of the family income. To live in a home furnished with objects that suit the house in size, color and style, that are harmonious in relation with each other, and that satisfy the sense of beauty. To organize in the house so that the family may have bodily comforts, personal freedom, joy in each other and their friends.

There is a beautiful phrase in the original Hebrew of Isaiah which translated means "Speak ye home to the heart of Jerusalem." The heart is our home. Though we dwell in homes of brick and mortar, yet the home of our real selves is found in our hearts, there lies the charm, the beauty, the power that enfolds our lives in the atmosphere of light, peace and love.

We must make our homes attractive inside and out with good books and play; everything in the family life, which will influence the children to spend their evenings at home. With the establishment of better homes comes the opportunity for mother and father to train and develop the boys and girls for a better future life and future home. Marble floors and gilded walls can never make a home. But it takes friendship, companionship, love and sacrifice.

How To Build.

To me very beautiful are the following lines: "How to Build a House," by Frank Crane. The walls of the home are not built of wood, brick or stone, but of truth and loyalty. Unpleasant sounds in the friction of life. The clash of personalities soth to deadened by Persian rugs, or polished floors, but by conciliation, concession and self-control. The curtains that screen the household goods from the eyes of the vulgar and curious are not woven of lace, but of discretion. The food of the home is not the meat or bread, but the kindliness and unselfishness, for these keep joy alive. The real drink is not wine or water, but love itself, which is the only known thing that is at once a food and a stimulant. The bed is not to be made of down and white linen, but of a conscience void of offense toward God and toward man. The lighting is not by gas or the sun by day or your electric bulbs by night, but by loyal affection, shining always in dear eyes, bearing always in true hearts. Your home is not a place where you lay off your clothes, but your cares. The house is not a structure where bodies meet, but a hearthstone upon which flames one single, separate flame of soul, which the more perfectly they unite, the more clearly they shine, and the brighter they rise toward heaven.

Your home is your fortress in a warring world where a woman's hand buckles on your armor at morning and soothes your fatigue and wounds at night. The maker of a human house is God Himself, the same Who made the stars and built the world.

Mrs. Neal Heads Millen Woman's Club.

Mrs. Ben A. Neal was elected president of the Millen Woman's club at the meeting held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. C. B. Landrum with Mesdames Landrum, Dean C. Brinson, R. W. Mathews and R. L. Lewis, Sr., as joint hostesses.

The following officers have been elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Ben A. Neal; vice president, Mrs. Ernest Daniels; recording secretary, Mrs. J. H. Simpson; treasurer, Mrs. Ed. Fletcher; parliamentarian, Mrs. Cleveland Thompson, corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. K. Cameron; press reporter, Mrs. John F. Bates.

Mrs. Dean C. Brinson sang "To A Wild Rose." "The City Beautiful," as protrayed in the paper of Mrs. J. S. Sims. The concluding chapter of the serial story as written by Mrs. Ernest E. Brannen brought to a close one of the most interesting stories ever written and preparations are being made to publish it in book form this fall. Those writing previous chapters were: Mesdames A. S. Boyer, B. C. Brannen, Ira O. Parker, Cleveland Thompson, and John F. Bates.

"The Third Ingredient" by Mrs. Ernest Daniel "History of Millen" by Mrs. Ira O. Parker proved one of the outstanding papers of the year as the history of the city of Millen was traced from its beginning until the present time.

Seekers Class Plans Silver Tea.

Tuesday evening, June 8, beginning at 8 o'clock the Seekers class of the Capitol View Presbyterian church will sponsor a silver tea at the home of Miss Emmile Ficken, 1474 De Soto avenue, S. W. Proceeds will be used for church purposes. The public is invited.

Twelfth District President Sends Constructive Message

Mrs. J. Cleveland Meadows, of Vidalia, newly-elected president of the twelfth district, whose interesting and constructive message to the clubwomen appears on today's club page.

Club women of the Twelfth district: It is with a deep feeling of gratitude for the high honor you bestowed upon me in electing me as your president. I deem it a pleasure and a privilege to be able to serve the splendid women of our Twelfth district. Having served as a club president continuously for three years, I know that club work is most worthwhile.

If we stand together hand in hand, spirit in touch with spirit, we can lift our district toward its own ideals and toward the visions and dreams of our honored and beloved retired president, Mrs. C. H. Kittrell.

Each individual club plays its own part in the development of the district, and may each club president and district chairman feel it a privilege and service to humanity to discharge her duties and responsibilities to the fullest of her ability.

Let us club women put our district on a good business foundation. Let us meet our obligations, pay off our old debts and be prompt with our new ones.

May we in the beginning of a new club year take stock—see wherein we can make improvements, let our past achievements be our inspiration for greater future ones. May our administration be an exponent of the same gentle patience, wisdom and faithfulness as has been the past one. Let us as club women of the federation be "without bias, without partisanship, without self-seeking—an invulnerable, an invincible unit for public service and for personal service, and for personal inspiration."

I earnestly bespeak your cooperation in lifting the Twelfth district intellectually, morally and spiritually.

Yours in service for the district,
FLORENCE WILKES MEADOWS.
(Mrs. J. Cleveland Meadows).

Harlem Woman's Club Features Many Interesting Activities

The June meeting of the Harlem Woman's club, of Harlem, took place on the afternoon of Wednesday, June 2, at the home of Miss Belle Zachry. In accordance with the motion made by Mrs. J. G. Wright at the previous meeting, that there be one meeting monthly during the summer, this will be the only meeting in June.

Mrs. Clary reported on the sale of dressed dolls at the May festival, the gross receipts being given to Mrs. R. R. Hatcher, treasurer, authorizing Mrs. Hatcher to pay the small sums due on plates used at the Memorial day picnic supper, and the outlay on materials used.

Mrs. Eadson's Library Plan.

Mrs. Arthur Eadson put before the meeting her plan for organizing a circulating library. Harlem needs such an organization, as the school library is not at all times accessible. Mrs. Eadson offered as suggestions that an annual membership fee be charged, also a nominal fee upon exchange of books. Miss Ruth Brown moved that the president appoint a committee to act with Mrs. Eadson as chairman to draw up a formal report on this matter. Mrs. R. R. Hatcher seconded the motion. The vote was by roll call, and was carried unanimously. Mrs. Clary appointed as Mrs. Eadson's committee, Miss Brown, Mrs. Elwood Phillips and Mrs. H. S. Paschal.

Miss Pauline Haslett, county home demonstration agent, addressed the meeting on the subject of Camp Wilkins. It seems that Georgia has the honor of having the only camp in the United States, possibly in the world, established for the boys and girls of the farms and rural districts. In the last two years the scope of the camp has been increased to include the women of the farms and rural districts, so that every June they may have a week at the camp for recreation and instrutcion. Several scholarships have been offered for this year, and Miss Haslett has begun her campaigning already for 1927. Her hope is that the women's organizations of the county will band together to give one scholarship next year. Mrs. Clark asked for an informal discussion and expression of opinion as to this plan, which discussion terminated in a motion by Miss Belle Zachry that the club give $2 toward this scholarship, the motion was seconded by Mrs. Wright, and was carried unanimously.

Mrs. Hatcher called the attention of the women to the ugly condition of the streets in the business section on Sunday mornings, and asked if there was anything the club could do to remedy the matter. Mrs. Fox spoke of what had been formerly done, pointing out the way the postoffice premises are kept clean. Mrs. Clary suggested appealing to the merchants personally. Mrs. Wilson suggested that the town council be asked to request each merchant to pick up paper and similar refuse and place in the garbage cans conveniently located downtown. It was shown that there is already upon the town books an ordinance requiring that this be done, and Mrs. Clary appointed Mrs. Fox as a committee of one to see the council and ask that this ordinance be enforced through J. W. Lazenby, who is the councilman in charge of the street cleaning department.

Mrs. Clary invited the visitors present to enroll themselves as members of the club, and also gave to those members who have not already paid their dues an opportunity to do so. The meeting was then turned over to the program committee, Mrs. H. M. Dunaway, chairman.

Mrs. Dunaway's Program.

Mrs. Dunaway prepared an excellent program on citizenship, choosing as the motto or slogan for the day: "Every Club a Training Camp in Citizenship," and opened with the singing in concert of "America." Miss Mary Holliman read an article on citizenship training. Mrs. H. S. Paschal gave an excellent outline of the constitution of the United States. Mrs. Dunaway read a list of splendid suggestions to clubs. Miss Brown followed with a talk on clubwomen in politics, bringing out the salient points as to what politics means in the home life of women, and the great responsibility of women in politics.

Mrs. Davison brought to the attention of the members the editorial written at the request of the club by Mr. Williams in the Columbia News May 27. Mrs. Davison also gave a very brief outline of a recent editorial on suffrage slackers, appearing in The Atlanta Constitution May 30, expressing her hope that it might be reproduced in the Columbia News.

Miss Brown asked if there was a legislative committee in the club, and at the request of the president outlined the work of such a committee. Mrs. Clary immediately appointed Mrs. J. G. Wright, chairman; Mrs. B. B. Walton and Miss Ruth Brown on the committee.

Miss Zachry, assisted by Mrs. Brandon served delightful refreshments. The July meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. George P. King, on Wednesday, July 7.

Mrs. Settle Heads Jackson Woman's Club.

Jackson Woman's club elected officers to serve for the ensuing year, and Mrs. J. B. Settle who served as president during the first five years of the club's existence has again been made head of the organization. She succeeds Mrs. O. A. Pound who served for a term of two years. Mrs. Settle is well known as a civic leader and has manifested much interest in the Jackson club and the Butts county federation. The full list of officers include:

Mrs. J. B. Settle, president; Miss Pauline Mallet, vice president; Mrs. R. N. Etheridge, recording secretary; Mrs. J. C. Moore, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. B. Thompson, treasurer, and Mrs. J. M. Leach, general committee chairman.

The woman's club of Jackson was organized in 1919 and was an outgrowth of the old civic league. It is affiliated with the state and national federation, and has been active in community enterprises.

J. L. Mayson Class Visits Hospital.

The visit of the James L. Mayson class of the Grace Methodist church to the boys of the Base Hospital number 48 on Peachtree road, was featured with a varied program. Miss Ethel Quillian's group was the official host of the evening and their program opened with selections from "The World's Famous Troubadour Quartette," the personnel including Homer J. Faulkner, K. B. Edwards, Walter C. Herbert and Edward H. Anchors. Little Miss Frances Jackson, Master Bruce Longino and Master Gene Quillian rendered instrumental numbers. A one act black-face skit entitled, "The Better Half's Worst Half" was impersonated by Mrs. Ruth Q. Abernathy and Gregory Stebbins, J. M. Lee and O. D. Gorman, Jr., gave a one-act play, "Levi Goes a-Hunting."

Assisting Miss Quillian in entertaining were Mrs. F. B. Quillian, Mrs. Gertrude Hall, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Mayson, Miss Lula M. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Perry and Mrs. D. M. Robinson.

Mrs. Gholston Reads Eighth District History at Elberton

Mrs. J. W. Gholston, who was second vice president of the eighth district before her recent election to the presidential office, read the following history of the district to the convention assembled in Elberton:

Madame President, Officers and Members of the Eighth District and Visitors:

Than the Eighth district, there is none greater along all lines, in all Georgia. In the early history of our state, we find her producing a large per centage of the statesmen and intelectual men of that time.

Where can be found superiors to Toombs, Cobb, Lumpkin and on to that illustrious son, of Georgia, that eloquent orator and forceful writer, that lover of peace, "Henry W. Grady." They come from the eighth.

And only because the women of that early date were not given prominence nor voice in public affairs, nor their virtues extolled, is why we have not an equally illustrious group of that time. However, their greatness often shows through their husbands and sons.

In the years of the life of the Georgia federation, from 1896-1926, a span of 30 years, there are women who have been a credit, not only to our eighth district but to the state at large.

History of District.

The history of the Eighth district is a worthy tribute to these noble women, who have so abundantly given time and strength and love and, sometimes, life itself, in the service of others. Their lofty ideals and splendid achievements shall ever shine as beacon lights for generations to come. There is one whose name is enduringly interwoven in the history of the Eighth district, yes, even in the history of the Georgia federation.

It is, indeed, a privilege, on such an occasion to acknowledge, with loving and grateful hearts the service and influence of this illustrious woman. She has left to us a legacy more precious than fine gold. With sincerest reverence we render homage to the beloved memory of Mrs. Eugene Heard.

At the organization of the state federation, in 1896, we find her among the pioneer clubwomen, as recording secretary, and also chairman of constitution and by-laws, for which she received compliments and congratulations on all sides.

But her most notable gift to clubwork was the traveling library which was given for transportation by the Seaboard railway. The untold good and joy of this beneficent service, to the towns and villages along the way, is like a hidden stream, "secretly making the ground green."

This splendid work is still carried on by her daughter, Mrs. J. Y. Swift, from the old home, "Rose Hill." Coming from our district was Miss Rosa Woodberry, living in Athens at the time of the state organization and who served as corresponding secretary. To those of you who know and love her and have followed her career, there can be no more worthy example of unselfish loyalty and faithfulness. A professional woman and yet with a record of 30 years of club service. She is today parliamentarian of the state federation. Is it any wonder that the eighth is proud to claim "Miss Rosa."

Presidents of Federation.

The distinction of having furnished to the Georgia federation three presidents, belongs to us.

Mrs. M. A. Lipscomb, of Athens; Mrs. H. C. White, of Athens; Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, of Madison.

Mrs. Lipscomb's administration was an era of educational advancement for Georgia, both in educational centers and rural communities. The inspiration of the founding of the State Normal school, in Athens, was due, largely to her efforts. But her outstanding gift was the founding and presentation of the Georgia federation, of the Tallulah Falls school, our "Light in the Mountains." This sacred trust, which has developed into a power has become the "Heart of the Federation" and is especially cherished and dear to the Eighth district.

Mrs. H. C. White died in office but gave bountifully of herself, no doubt life itself, in the cause. Through her influence club extension in Georgia was greatly advanced and in her honor the endowment fund for the state federation carries her name on a fitting memorial.

Mrs. Pitzpatrick, the surviving past president from this district, is still and active worker. Under her administration the advancement in legislation was noteworthy, although she believed clubs should be impartial on the suffrage question at that time. She was the originator of a club gavel which was donated by Dr. H. C. White, of Athens, for a membership drive.

At present she is director for life and chairman of Ella F. White Endowment Fund, and a more active worker in all Georgia clubdom cannot be found.

Another apostle of educational advancement and a credit to the eighth, was Miss Celeste Parish, whose heart and hand were ever ready to help Georgia's sons and daughters, many of whom attribute their success in life to her early training. Truly her life was one of service for others. These are only some of the pioneer clubwomen of the eighth district. There were many others, whose unselfish purposes and splendid deeds will ever be an incentive for the organized womanhood of Georgia in serving their fair state.

The wide range of activities undertaken in our district prevents monotony. With such varied and lofty aims as improving rural school conditions, dealing with all forms of public welfare, making of "better homes" and a better citizenship, and fostering a desire for the finer things of life—these, keep one ever alert and interested.

To Serve and Endure.

Our district has been built upon the rock of "to serve and to endure" and the pillars of this wonderful structure are the district presidents who have served so faithfully since 1912, as follows: Mrs. W. C. Shepherd, of Madison; Mrs. S. B. Yow, of Lavonia; Mrs. Gerald Green, of Athens; Mrs. Lena F. Lewis, of Monroe; Mrs. Walter L. Hodges, of Hartwell.

For two years, successful club institutes have been held at University Summer school. These have proven of great help to our women in preparing themselves to better carry on club work.

The first year the eighth won the attendance cup. The next year the cup for best collection of year books and programs, also the forestry cup, which has been won the second time, and at the recent state convention, the junior clubs' cup.

To the members of this organization, those who have worked in the ranks so untiringly and unselfishly, giving support to the accomplishment of every worthy cause, words of praise are not enough, but may you have that reward which comes from service, that "peace which passeth understanding."

Under the guidance of our gifted leader, progress has been by leaps and bounds. Her dreams for this district have been likened unto that of Joseph's, of Biblical days, when the 11 sheaves of grain bowed down to a central sheaf. The 11 sheaves are the other 11 districts of the Georgia federation, the central sheaf the eighth district. Will you not catch that vision and help to make it come true?

In closing, these humble lines to her are penned:

The cords that bind our hearts together,
Are threads of purest gold, fine spun,
And may they last through fair and stormy weather
Untarnished, and by time, undone.

For day by day, your guiding hand
Has held the shuttle, we the golden strand,
And words of love and hope and strength
Have passed from you, along its length.

So now, to you, belov'd one,
All need of justly praise and emulation,
And may the joyous heritage, "well done"
Be yours, of this district federation.

Burke County Federation Holds Tri-Yearly Meeting

Mrs. Alex S. Boyer, chairman of publicity for the First District General Federation Women's Clubs, sends the following interesting account of the tri-yearly meeting of the Burke county federation, which was entertained by the Midville Woman's club at its attractive clubhouse in Midville on Wednesday, May 26, with Mrs. Dade Durden, of Waynesboro, the presiding officer.

The clubs of Vidette, Girard, Waynesboro and Midville form this unit. Each reported most enthusiastically the work accomplished since the February meeting. The community house, owned by the Midville club, the extensive planting of trees, grass and shrubbery by the Waynesboro club, also the services of a tree surgeon for park work were most notable.

Burke county is most fortunate in having a community house. Miss Hodgson, a Red Cross nurse, recommended by the committee putting over the Shepherd-Towner bill, is filling this position. She addressed the convention along the line of schools cooperating with all organizations to make her work a success.

Mrs. Brinson's Speech.

Mrs. F. A. Brinson, president of the first district, introduced by Mrs. Durden, made an inspiring talk and so delighted were the clubwomen that Miss Willie Wimberly, of Waynesboro, moved that this address be published in the club page.

Mrs. Brinson said: "I have already learned even in my brief experience as district president that 'if to do were as easy as to know what were good to be done then poor men's cottages would be princes' palaces.' Too, 'it is easier to teach 20 what were good to be done than to be one of the 20 to follow mine own instruction.' However, I am delighted to be present at this meeting of the Burke County federation to learn more of the county organization, for Mrs. Sherman in one of her addresses on her visit to the south said the county federation was the goal towards which we should strive. I am with you today, too, to learn of the purposes, ideals and methods of our club, and that I may gain some of that inspiration that must ever be the impelling motive that carries a woman busy as busy can be into the service of the federated clubs.

"I have been impressed, as I am sure every one has been who has felt the weight of responsibility, with the absolute necessity of real cooperation in the big tasks that confront the women of this age. Cooperation is an expression which has been worn bare—one which by constant use his lost much of its force. But on this principle alone can we hope to accomplish much for our local club, our county federation, or our state. There is always so much that must be sacrificed for the common good. There are always so many questions that demand of us that we look honestly at both sides, and then, having seen our neighbor's viewpoint, try to get our common ground and invite cooperation.

'All are needed by each one
Nothing is good or fair alone.'

"But another thing that seems equally important—the one thing that combines real pleasure with our tasks—is enthusiasm. These two, cooperation and enthusiasm, will give to any club power to do constructive work that will count for the upbuilding of those things for which the federated clubs have pledged their support."

After having spoken on some of the elements that make for success in club work, Mrs. Brinson spoke on some of the phases of club work, citizenship, community service and legislation, which in turn were emphasized. Lastly, she urged the clubs to stress a study of the fine arts and to include music and selections from literature on their programs. She said: "But the activities of our clubs should not be altogether taken up with these social and civic problems. We have a department of fine arts. A proper development of this department will provide programs of pleasure and culture—programs that will stimulate the intellectual and spiritual life of club members. It occurs to me that some part of each meeting given over to the purely cultural is infinitely worthwhile. Literature, art and music furnish real enjoyment and give members a chance to grow in this all-important realm.

"At this, the last meeting of the Burke County federation for this year, I hope we are planning for even greater achievement next year. In the spirit of the declared policy for next year, this federation, each club in it can find a field in which it can labor for worthy ideals. There is nothing that does not challenge the best in woman; there is a ringing call for service that will safeguard our homes and enable our citizenship. Too, the arts and graces of life may be attained by the cultivation of the aesthetic by means of art, music and literature."

Home Economics.

The home economics department reported the assembling of a cook book; and, a scholarship, costing $25, to a Burke county girl, to camp Wilkins at Athens for the summer course in home economics.

Millen and Swainsboro, neighboring towns, but not in the county, had invited representatives by the hostess club.

The luncheon hour was made most delightful by a well-planned program of music, Mrs. Franklin and Mrs. Murphy, both possessing beautiful, well-trained voices, sang. Miss Roundtree played throughout the hour. Mrs. Winburn gave a reading of one of Edgar A. Guest's choicest bits of poetry.

After luncheon a brief session of business was resumed. Resolutions of thanks to the Midville club were presented, and election of officers was made. Mrs. E. R. Barnes, of Midville, was installed as president for the ensuing year. The next meeting is to be in Girard in October.

Ninth District Program Gives Many Interesting Features

The ninth district of the Georgia federation will hold its convention June 10 and 11, in the Baptist church at Martin, Ga., with Mrs. Hubert Yow, the president, in the chair.

Registration Chairman.

Mrs. Pope Yow is chairman of registration and the session opens Thursday afternoon with Mrs. J. L. Mc-Elroy, of Norcross, first vice president, presiding. Mrs. Herman De La Perriere, of Hoschton, will conduct the presidents' conference and supper will be served at Toccon Falls after a motor drive.

Evening Session: Mrs. P. D. Landrum, president of the Martin Woman's club, presiding; music, Martin Music club; invocation, Rev. A. W. Bussey; pageant of welcome; response, Mrs. G. A. Johns; presentation of district officers, Mrs. Landrum; district president's address, Mrs. Hubert Yow; address, "The American Home," Judge G. A. Johns; vocal solo, Julian Field; address, "The Relation of the American Home to the School Child," Miss Katherine Dozier; benediction, Rev. A. W. Bussey.

Friday Morning, June 11.

Meeting of the executive board; business session, Mrs. Hubert Yow, president of the ninth district, presiding; club litany; responsive reading, Mrs. Yow and the convention; assembly singing, "America the Beautiful," led by Mrs. J. L. Exum, Lawrenceville; minutes of the previous meetings, Miss Claire Anderson, secretary; report of credentials committee, Mrs. Pope Yow, chairman; presentation of program, Mrs. George K. Bagwell, second vice president. Reports of officers: First vice president, Mrs. J. E. McElroy; second vice president, Mrs. George K. Bagwell; secretary, Miss Claire Anderson; treasurer, Mrs. D. M. Snelson; music, vocal duet, Mrs. Hubert Yow and Mrs. P. D. Landrum. Reports of departments: American citizenship, Mrs. A. L. De La Perriere, presiding; applied education, Mrs. G. A. Johns, presiding; fine arts, Mrs. Morris Bryan, presiding; address, 11 o'clock, "The Library of the American Home," Miss Beverly Wheatcroft, secretary state library commission; piano solo, Mrs. Fred Terrell; 11:30 o'clock, "Home and the Federation," Mrs. A. Fifth District Meeting

BY MRS. LELLA A. DILLARD

The third quartely meeting of the fifth district W. C. T. U. was held at College Park in the Methodist church June 1, Mrs. O. L. Taylor, district president, presiding.

This was a notable occasion, the program being one of thrilling interest from beginning at 10:30 a. m. until the close at 4:30 p. m. As are all meetings of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the program was begun with a devotional service, led by the pastor of the church, Rev. Henderson.

Mrs. Proctor, of College Park W. C. T. U., welcomed the delegates, of which there were 105 at the beginning, the number of delegates and visitors increasing to 200 as the day advanced. The cordial greetings were responded to by Mrs. Lella A. Dillard, of Emory university.

Features of the morning session were the addresses of Mrs. J. E. Andrews, Mrs. Florence E. Atkins and Superintendent Willis A. Sutton, of Atlanta public schools.

Mrs. Andrews recounted some of her recent experiences in the "clean-up" campaign of Atlanta, and asked the support and cooperation of all present, stating that 80 per cent of the women who had been standing with her were members of the W. C. T. U. A rising vote of appreciation was given Mrs. Andrews, and unanimous pledge of cooperation; also an earnest prayer that Mrs. Andrews might be led by divine inspiration as she stood in the forefront of the holy war against sin and vice.

Superintendent Sutton's address was enthusiastically received, his topic being, "What Are the Causes of Law Violation by Young People?" Those who had heard Mr. Sutton often asserted that this address was the finest and most timely he had ever made.

The slogan of the day was "Carry On." Mrs. Florence Atkins, of Milledgeville, state field secretary of Georgia W. C. T. U., and one of the lecturers of national W. C. T. U., sounded the keynote of the gathering by her discussion of "Why the W. C. T. U. Must Carry On."

At 1 o'clock a delicious seated luncheon spread on three beautifully decorated tables was served by the hostess union, and was a veritable season of good fellowship.

The whole afternoon program was a combination of demonstration and pageant "Carry On," Mrs. Taylor leading. Since the last district meeting, March 9, the "hearings" in the senate in Washington have been held; the W. C. T. U. of the whole nation has been in a membership campaign, and much activity has been shown in Atlanta in the work. So, the response of each local W. C. T. U. was eagerly awaited as the secretary called the roll.

Before the calling of the roll of the local organizations in the district, Mrs. Marvin Williams, acting state president, was aksed the question, "How have you been 'Carrying On?'" She stated that never before were there so many things to demand the constant, active energies of the white ribboner. Some of her time had been spent in collecting evidence as to the benefits of prohibition and sent on to Washington to the president of national W. C. T. U., Mrs. Ella A. Boole, to be included in her statement before the senate committee. Mrs. Williams had also been helping to get into working harness the new local unions organized in the district.

The district president stated that she had been "Carrying On" by helping in organizing, preparing the way for speakers, and gave a comparison of the growth since March. At the last district meeting there were nine local organizations in the district; now there are 17. In March there were four local unions in Atlanta; now there are ten.

As the roll of the unions was called, each local president came forward, picked up the pennant bearing the name of her union, and stated the number of new members added since March, every woman who had gained new members coming forward and standing near her. The grand total gain was 460 new members. Then followed the march of the presidents with their membership captains.

The local unions in line were, College Park, East Point, Decatur, Douglasville, Red Oak. The Atlanta unions were, Druid Hills, McLendon, Piedmont and Patterson of the old unions; the new ones being Capitol View, Peachtree Road, Kirkwood, Florence Atkins (East Eend), Grant Park, Emory University, Bolton and Conyers have also been organized since March 9 and their banners were added in the march.

There were 22 women wearing the pennants of the 22 departments operated by Georgia W. C. T. U. As each department was called, the local unions operating it raised their pennants. The departments were: Americanization, anti-narcotics, child welfare, Christian citizenship, fairs and exhibits, flower mission, legislation, health, women in industry, medical temperance, medal contest, motion pictures, peace and arbitration, scientific temperance instruction, Sunday school work among negroes, temperance and missions, social morality, prison reform, Sabbath observance, and soldiers and sailors.

Mrs. W. H. Preston, state superintendent of flower mission, gave a beautiful demonstration of the work carried on by this department since the last meeting; and also gave each local union an assignment of some institution to visit with flowers June 9, Flower Mission day.

Mrs. Marvin Williams made a most helpful talk on city government, using a fine chart for illustration and advised each woman to find out how the affairs of her town were conducted and stand for civic righteousness by actually knowing conditions and channels of law enforcement.

As a demonstration of how the children were "carrying on," two medal winners in recent temperance oratorical contests gave their medal winning selections.

College Park Loyal Temperance Legion (juvenile department of W. C. T. U.) participated in the program, giving their rally cry.

TWO BIRTHDAYS.

June 9 is Flower Missoin day of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in the whole world. It celebrates the birthday of Jeanie Casseday, the cripple invalid of Louisville, Ky., who systematized this work of sending flowers to the sick and shutins, accompanied by a Scripture text card tied with a white ribbon. It is also the birthday of our Mrs. W. H. Preston, state superintendent of the department in Georgia, who has rendered constant and beautiful service for many years and under whose direction the department has grown to be the most popular department of Georgia W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Preston is, however, one to whom ten talents have been given. Recently, in addition to her work as press correspodent of the W. C. T. U. columns in the Atlanta Journal, she organized Grant Park W. C. T. U. with 76 members. All dues paid members.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Preston directed the delightful pageant given at St. John's Methodist church, "The Marriage of Miss Eighteenth Amendment to Mr. Patriotic Citizen."

Gainesville and Americus Especially Active.

Gainesville, under the leadership of Mrs. W. P. King, has been especially active in work among the school children. Through cooperation with the P.-T. A., total abstinence has been stressed and many have signed the pledge.

Americus, Mrs. Niel Ray, president, has taken on new life and effective methods of reaching the [illegible] of that community have been adopted.

Georgia Party Organizing for Los Angeles

Georgia white-ribboners who expect to attend the national convention at Los Angeles, September 26-October 2, should register their names at headquarters in order that the state officers may have definite information about the size of the delegation. Any Georgia women who contemplate a trip to the far west at the stated time, leaving Georgia September 19, will be welcome to join the Georgia delegation of the W. C. T. U. Send in your names and addresses to state headquarters Georgia W. C. T. U., Macon National Bank building, Macon, Ga.

The "White Ribbon Special" train which leaves Chicago September 20, will carry delegates to the convention city where they will make their headquarters at New Rosslyn hotel. Official board and executive meetings will be held at New Rosslyn hotel, also the opening banquet on Saturday night, September 25, when city and state officials and leaders of other organizations will officially welcomely convention delegates. Regular convention sessions will be held in the First M. E. church, Fifth and Hope streets.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, state president, is being heartily welcomed back to Georgia after a two months' speaking tour of Alabama, Kentucky, Maryland and New Jersey. The first Georgia town to receive a visit from this distinguished Georgian since her return is Culverton, where she was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Lee Hale, for several days the past week. Following her visit to Culverton, Mrs. Armor spoke at the district meeting of the Augusta Woman's Missionary society of the North Georgia conference, reaching her home in Macon Friday, June 5.

Dr. Burghard Ill.

Dr. August Burghard, husband of Georgia's publicity director, is critically ill at his home in Macon. Dr. and Mrs. Burghard have many friends all over Georgia who will anxiously await news from his bedside. Dr. Burghard, who has been invalid for several years was, prior to his illness, one of the prominent dentists of the state and has always been a great inspiration for W. C. T. U. work to Mrs. Burghard during the years in which she has been connected with the state organization. White ribbon comrades will pray for his speedy recovery.

Flower Mission To the Front.

This being June, the department of Flower Mission is being stressed and many beautiful meetings have been held. One of the most unique as well as beautiful programs was the one held by Druid Hills union, of Atlanta, Mrs. N. C. McPherson, president. A little human flower, Miss Mary Pauline Grant, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Grant, was dedicated to the cause of prohibition, purity and peace in the beautiful white ribbon ceremony of the organization, conducted by Mrs. Lella A. Dillard. Miss Modena McPherson clinched the welcome by a story of "The New Recruit."

Mrs. Douglas Swaggerty was heard in several vocal numbers.

The beautiful story of the founding of the Flower Mission department was told by Mrs. Noel and plans were made to visit the federal prison Wednesday, June 9, and distribute bouquets of real flowers to every inmate, each bouquet bearing a Scripture text with a white ribbon. The program was in charge of Mrs. C. H. McFee.

Mother of Many.

Piedmont W. C. T. U. which meets at Wesley Memorial church, Atlanta, has the distinction of mothering more new unions than any other organization in the state. She claims as her lovely daughters Druid Hills, Tenth Ward, Peachtree Road and the new organization at Emory university. Leaders in every one of these local unions are women who were identified with Piedmont and have been transferred to carry on the work in their several localities. In spite of the loss in membership this entailed, Piedmont today shows a gain of 14 members over the entire enrollment for last year.

The regular meeting was held Friday morning, June 4, and was featured by two vocal solos by Mrs. Lessie McMichael and addresses by Mrs. Florence Atkins, of Milledgeville, and Miss Thelma Thompson, of Decatur. Other guests included Mrs. O. L. Taylor, district president, and Mrs. N. C. McPherson.

Atlanta Unions Interested in Cleanup.

The Atlanta unions have been cooperating actively with the civic council of women in agitating for a civic clean-up White ribbon bows were much in evidence at the meeting of the police committee of city council June 2, when a committee of women from all the wards visited the committee and made strong pleas for cooperation between the police board and Chief Beavers. Welcoming Atlanta's strong-souled, unpurchasable chief back to his rightful place at the head of the enforcement agencies of the city, speakers expressed the hope that no member of the committee would put a straw in his way in his efforts to discharge his full duty.

ALARMING!

Again the death and serious injury toll of traffic accidents mounts to alarming proportions, and again the chief of police issues orders to "tighten up on traffic law enforcement."

It is a proceeding as old and as stereotyped as a politician's appeal to "the great common people."

Like the time-worn story about locking the stable door after the nag had been stolen, it is always a case of "renewed war on traffic violators," after traffic violators have snuffed human souls into eternity, and maimed and mangled others for life.

Every now and then council takes a spurt and passes some new traffic ordinance. Like a new broom it sweeps clean for a time without any apparent change for better or worse, and then it practically passes into the discard so far as enforcement is concerned.

A new downtown parking ordinance has recently been put into effect with all the glare and color of red and white signs, and all that sort of thing. Some of the merchants kick, others do not, and the grim reaper that dashes through the streets in wildness, desperation and, too often, in inebriacy, goes tragically on, menacing the other thousands of law abiding, cautious drivers, and leaving a ribbon of blood in the wake.

The readers of newspapers are left with the single consolation that the chief of police has announced another order about "rigid enforcement."

There are traffic laws a-plenty, and too many. There are parking laws that ten per cent of the citizens of Atlanta never heard of, and that a great majority of the city patrolmen pay no attention to. The fact is, the traffic laws that exist are so many, and so confusing and contradictory that some of them do more harm than good. The result is there is a loose and wholly unsatisfactory enforcement, and human blood almost daily pays the penalty.

The idea of letting things rock along in a hum-drum routine until some man or woman is killed and then break out with a "rigid enforcement" campaign that carries a hundred or two people to the police station daily for a few days because a tail-light happened to be out, and a parking limit exceeded for five minutes, etc., is not only ridiculous, but serves to cloak the real violators who go to cover under such a farce proceeding.

Every day should be a rigid enforcement day, and especially against the violators of the major laws that are supposed to protect life and limb, and make the streets safe.

The signal lights are flagrantly disregarded by thousands every day. Any one who will take the time to investigate will find this is true.

The speed limits, in and out of the specified zones, are flagrantly violated every day.

The traffic boulevard signals are flagrantly violated every day.

And if Chief Beavers will stand upon any corner in the downtown congested centers one full hour at any time of the day he will see both pedestrians and automobilists menaced by reckless drivers who defy every law and every common-sense rule of caution.

Since the Traffic Bureau fell before the wiles of petty politics some months ago the situation has been gradually going from bad to worse. All of the excuses and explanations about "the same thing in another way" do not change the fact that traffic is not under as efficient control today as it was then. The aroused public will of Atlanta ought to demand the restoration of a special traffic department of police, under its own directing head, and with which all law enforcement members shall cooperate, the same to be under the super-control of the chief of police. All cities with real traffic problems have such bureaus, and it is unthinkable that Atlanta is so steeped in political jealousies and intrigues that it must be denied here.

With such a bureau there should also result a codification of the traffic laws, and a complete revision toward simplicity.

Something must be done, and that something is not sporadic, hectic "crusades" that usually swing the pendulum to the other extreme when over, and provide "cover" for the real offenders when on.

NOT "INTERFERENCE."

Some of the Washington political commentators see in the president's Ericsson statue dedicatory address a direct interference in the approaching Wisconsin senatorial contest in the interest of Senator Lenroot, who is being opposed by the La Follette machine.

This is far-fetched, wholly unwarranted, and in the interest—unwittingly no doubt—of the La Follette cause.

It is quite obvious that the president had in mind only the citing of the success in our public life of today of some outstanding Swede who typifies the true American spirit of the Norse, and very naturally, and probably without political significance, he referred to the senior senator from Wisconsin.

The northwest is full of men and women of the Norse blood and characteristics who represent the highest ideals of our democratic government. Among them certainly no one stands out more prominently than Senator Lenroot, who is not only a safe and sound representative, but a citizen of the highest ideals of manhood. It was entirely fitting that President Coolidge should have referred to him, under the circumstances, as he did. It is unfair to attempt to make political capital out of it, and especially in connection with the president's refusal to interfere in the interest of Senator McKinley, another administration member, in the recent Illinois primary.

If a statue of a great Welchman was being unveiled in America under similar circumstances one's thoughts would naturally turn to a member of the cabinet, Secretary Davis, who is a native of Wales, and not so many years ago was a penniless immigrant boy trying to find an honest job in the new land of liberty and opportunity. Surely no ulterior political motive could be assigned to any one who should refer to Secretary of Labor Davis as a shining example of a Welchman assimilating American ideals and becoming an outstanding figure in America's public life.

We are too prone to misinterpret purposes and seize at wrong conclusions. It is quite probable, and with good reason, that President Coolidge would welcome the uprooting of the radical regime in Wisconsin that has made La Folletteism a political menace to the nation's best interest, but if we do not mistake the man, he is frank enough to shape his own course in the premises along direct and not indirect lines.

A DESERVED TRIBUTE.

At a notable banquet tendered by the citizens of Knoxville to Colonel David C. Chapman, of that city, a loving cup was presented to the honor guest as a testimonial of appreciation for his untiring efforts toward the establishment of the Great Smoky Mountain National Park in the mountains of east Tennessee and western North Carolina.

The undertaking was attended by many difficulties, some of which seemed unsurmountable. The national park commission had decided upon the Smoky mountain territory as one of two available sites in the southern Appalachian, but had made it clear that the government could not spend a dollar toward acquiring the lands but would develop and equip the same after the titles had been passed. Many other standard requirements governing the creation of national parks had to be met. The campaign was begun by the citizens of east Tennessee and western North Carolina. Colonel Chapman was made chairman, and gave largely and unselfishly of his time and resources toward the furtherance of a contribution to the outdoor recreational life of America that will be outstanding for all time in the history of the south. The success of the plan meant the raising of large revenues, and a campaign of sympathetic education on a larger scale than ever attempted before in the southern states. He found hearty encouragement, and with undaunted courage and unfailing faith, kept the movement going without a lagging moment until the victory was won. All that remains to be done is detail and routine.

We heartily concur in the many high estimates of Colonel Chapman's labors paid by government officials, the governor of his state, his colleagues and by the citizens generally. Every word spoken was well deserved.

Smoky Mountain National park will be in the heart of the southeast and in overnight contact with almost half the people of America. It will be at the very door of Atlanta, and its asset value to this great section of America is inestimable.

We particularly feel a pardonable pride in the success of this splendid enterprise, so ably directed by Colonel Chapman, for we have earnestly supported the movement since 1922 when The Constitution led the first expedition of national park officials into the south.

We rejoice in the magnificent work of Colonel Chapman and his associates, and at the spirit of cooperation that the entire nation has shown in this great movement to give to the south at least one of the national parks that have heretofore, as if by common consent, been allocated entirely to the west.

FRANKING ABUSES.

According to Washington dispatches the charge is made that former Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, who is campaigning for the seat now held by Cummins, has violated the congressional franking privilege. His friends are asking for an investigation.

We hold no brief for the Iowa radical, and it is entirely possible that he violated the franking law. If he did not he is an exception, certainly as to its abuse.

If a thorough investigation should be impartially made the scandal that would follow would very probably involve half of the members of congress of both houses. Members not only publish in the Congressional Record, by courtesy, speeches they never make and that are intended for the consumption of constituents only, and copies of these Records franked to every voter of state and district, but they have the further privilege of changing the speeches that they do make to suit political conditions after a reaction has followed the first press reports. The latter system is pernicious, frequently reflects upon the integrity of conscientious correspondents, and is a violation of manly decencies.

But the real evil of the franking privilege as permitted by almost common consent is that complained of in the Brookhart charge—the use of the frank to conduct private political campaigns. A member of congress not only has the privilege of publishing his own address in the Record, changed between the hour of delivery and that of publication, but of publishing the same in pamphlet form and then mailing the same under postal franks to the tens of thousands of voters in his district or state. He has the further privilege of obtaining unanimous consent for the publication of anything of a political nature bearing upon his record, or that may be construed as of political helpfulness to him, and again the franking courtesy. One may actually buy and pay for advertising space in a newspaper in which to exploit his own "record," and then have the same copied in the Congressional Record, and credited to the paper in which inserted, and distributed free.

These are not merely abuses that may be indulged in, but they are abuses that are practiced continuously during campaign years by a large number of the members. The system is wrong—and there is no explanation that can properly defend it.

If the mails going through the Washington postoffice were not congested with franked political propaganda the postoffice department would be saved several hundred thousand dollars a year in the expense of handling and in transportation. If the abuses of the franking privilege were stopped the postage rates could be reduced all along the line, and the department each year would declare a profit instead of a deficit. It is a serious, indefensible situation, and the taxpayers of the country pay a heavy toll to keep it going.

If an investigation of the Brookhart charge could be enlarged to cover the entire franking scandal, and if it could be fairly and fully made—which is not possible under the circumstances—the American public would be aroused with indignation.

A DANGEROUS ORDER.

The opinion expressed by former Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, in attacking the recent executive order of the president empowering local officers to become agents of the government in prohibition enforcemen., or in any other arbitrary function, is undoubtedly shared by a great majority of the people. It establishes a dangerous, paternalistic precedent, and begins something that may be more difficult to stop.

The fundamental of democracy is local self-government, which in turn means state sovereignty as differentiated from federal control over the matters that are peculiarly of state concern.

The political troubles of Europe, and many of the wars, have been precipitated by their blending of federal with local government, and the final mastery of the federal arm over the necessarily weaker local arm. The order is thoroughly out of harmony, not only with the spirit of our institutions, but with the letter of our constitutional government. It is also out of harmony with President Coolidge's oft-expressed views as to the menace of centralized government.

If the virtue of states' rights is cited in order to explain an opposition to federal aid projects, into the real merits of which that issue cannot enter, then it is inexplicable that the very antithesis shall be employed in order to experiment in an accomplishment that the government frankly admits is near to the impossible.

It would be difficult to find an issue that will split the people of their nation into irreconcilable domestic factions like that of pernicious federal interference in the matters that are purely local, or in the conscription of local or state authority in pulling the government's own chestnuts out of the fire.

Every law-abiding citizen wants to see the prohibition laws enforced whether he or she may subscribe to their wisdom or not. But to tear down the bedrock of our government in the attempt, and then make no progress in the ends sought, is a most dangerous proceeding.

In the pre-Volstead bone-dry states like Georgia—and there are many of them—the state and federal liquor laws coordinate, and all officers of the law, federal and state, are not only sworn to enforce the laws, but are specifically charged with that obligation. And yet, according to the published statistics, these states are no dryer today than the states that were wet at the time the Volstead law became effective. Therefore it is not probable that the cause of prohibition will in the slightest degree be helped by this executive order, but the cause of state sovereignty will be materially injured.

The Dyer anti-lynch bill that some of the politicians of the country have tried to fasten upon the south—and are trying yet as for that matter—is one of the most vicious pieces of attempted legislation ever introduced in congress, and yet not a southern member of congress who have and still oppose it, would condone lynching under any circumstances, or would not support any legislation that might be required to stop the practice except that of turning our state court system to federal control.

The cause of prohibition, and the cause of temperance, will very probably suffer even further from the president's order, and the ideals that have made ours the model government of the world, will undoubtedly suffer to no small degree.

DO IT NOW.

The call for the remainder of the funds necessary for the entertainment of the American disabled veterans, soon to convene in Atlanta, is too appealing to admit of any indifference on the part of our citizens. We know that all our people are keenly appreciative of their duty in this matter. There is no disposition not to raise the required amount. Atlanta's big heart never fails. The situation has simply not gripped the people yet. That is all. It is the time to think about it now. About $20,000 is needed—that is a small matter. Let the contributions go in at once. We haven't forgotten the boys, and we will give them the greatest reception they ever had.

AN ALFALFA ZONE.

No section of the country is better adapted to the growing of alfalfa hay than north Georgia, and no state in the Union has a larger area that is peculiarly suited to its profitable production. Dr. Soule, president of the State College of Agriculture, has been trying to pound this fact into the heads of the people of some fifty red-hill counties for years, and has made some progress, but nothing like as much as should have been made when it is realized that Georgia alfalfa will produce from four to five cuttings a year, net an average of more than $100 an acre a year, holds a commanding place in the hay markets—and that Georgia is buying yearly outside of the state, around 1,600,000 tons of hay to meet her own consumption demands.

In today's Constitution is a detailed interview with H. M. Cottrell, agriculturist for the Georgia Bankers' association, bearing out the position taken by the president of the state college, and citing many concrete examples of the highly profitable results obtained by Georgia farmers. At present there are fully 5,000,000 acres of soil in the state peculiarly adapted to alfalfa. The character of this soil is such as to obtain as good or better results than in other sections of the country. The red-clay hills can be more profitably employed in the production of alfalfa than in any other staple farm commodity. The market is as steady and as well standardized as that for cotton. Then why should not the farmers of north Georgia take the advice of experts, and enjoy the benefits of soil and climatic conditions that are so admirably adapted to profitable production of merchantable hay?

The state college is conducting a campaign now to have at least 1,000,000 Georgia acres in alfalfa at the earliest possible moment. It should succeed.

THE JOYOUS BROTHER

(WHEN HE SWINGS THE GIRLS AROUND)

BY FRANK L. STANTON

I.

They may turn me out o' meetin',
But for Paradise I'm bound:
It's the halleluia feelin'
When I swing the girls around!
When the music's on the go
And I swing 'em high an' low,
It's all o' halleluia
That this brother's apt to know!

II.

I almost think already
I'm in the Promised Land
An' bein' serenaded
By a halleluia band;
When cheeks whose red and white
Make heavens of delight,
'Tain't then on Jordan's stormy banks
This brother takes his stand!

III.

I'm not too old to answer
To the music's thrillin' call;
I'm with 'em at "Swing Corners!"—
If there's room enough for all.
I'll swing 'em high an' low,
Like I done long, long ago,—
May be all o' halleluia
This feller's apt to know.

"Sober or Free"

BY M. ASHBY JONES

One of our metropolitan dailies, whose fanaticism in opposition to prohibition might certainly match the most extreme bigot who makes prohibition unpopular, quoted with approval the other day the words of a British statesman, "I would rather have England free than sober." The phrase is catchy, but like most of these artificial alternatives, does not bear inspection. If one is not sober will we allow him to be free?

The truth is that either in England or in any other civilized nation, no matter what other legislation they may have on the question of drink, they will not allow one who is not sober to go free. It is reconized everywhere that an intoxicated man is undependable, irresponsible, and probably dangerous. So one might picture for oneself the British statesman's free but intoxicated England. What sober man would dare live there for 24 hours?

The Indictment.

Of course, this catchy phrase becomes absurb the moment you attempt to translate it into reality. However, in doing this we expose the real issue. Freedom can only be granted to self-controlled, self-governed, responsible people. The real indictment against fermented drink as a beverage is that it renders so many people hurtful and dangerous to society. It makes them temporarily, and often permanently, incapable of meeting the primary obligations of citizens, and often leads them to interfere with the good citizenship of others. Society has always recognized this truth and treated intoxicated people as temporarily insane. For this reason they have taken away the freedom of the intoxicated man for the safety of society.

Of course, the reply of those who oppose a sweeping prohibitory law, is that the freedom of men who drink without intoxication should not be interfered with because of those who drink to excess. Why not deal specifically with this class without interfering with the rights of others?" A calm and coldly scientific survey of the history of intoxicating liquors upon the civilization of both the British Empire and the United States (leaving out for the time being other nations), has revealed the truth, that its unrestricted use has been a terrible hurt to the health and happiness, and the efficiency and character, of these peoples. So widespread had the excessive use of liquor become that the method of merely arresting the flagrant cases of disorderly drunks had proven to be an utter failure. The drink habit was undermining the efficiency of the producer, blighting the happiness of untold numbers of homes, wasting the potential wealth, corrupting the political life, and hurting the characters of men and women.

It is impossible to manufacture liquor simply to meet the demand of the moderate drinker. Now, it seems to me that the moderate drinker must prove that liquor has some positive value for those who would drink it in moderation, to offset and neutralize the terrible damage which it does to society. He cannot do this, is there any justice in his plea for the right to drink at the expense of the welfare of the entire nation?

Purpose of Prohibition.

I do not maintain, for a moment, that the Eighteenth amendment, with its accompanying Volstead legislation, is the best way to deal with this situation. As I have always in fairness recognized, this is a debatable question. But I do maintain that the protest against prohibition, on the ground of its robbing men of their personal freedom, is unwarranted, and even absurb, in the light of all of the great body of our restrictive legislation. Whether wise or unwise, our prohibition amendment and legislation is for the purpose of protecting society from a well recognized menace to its welfare. It is not primarily an effort to dictate to men what they shall drink, but an effort to protect society from those who would drink to its damage.

It would seem needless to have to point out that all of our traffic laws, or zoning statutes, or pure-food laws, and all of the countless regulations restricting and conditioning contracts of every kind, interfered with the personal liberties of man. The underlying principle of all such legislation is, that while it limits and restricts the freedom of action in particular, it thus secures a larger freedom and safety in general. One of the popular phrases which is beginning to be overworked is, "You can't make men good by legislation." That is perfectly true, but you can often help to make your streets and your homes and your life generally, safe by legislation. Most of our penal laws, such as those against stealing, forgery, murder, etc., are not expected to make criminals good citizens, but they are for the purpose of protecting good men from bad men. If we shall only view prohibition from this standpoint—that of protection—we can at least bring the question to a clearer and saner debate. At least we can hope to be done with such foolish phrases as, "Better a free nation than a sober nation." Let us rather strive for the higher ideal of a free nation which is determined to be sober.

BIBLE VS. EVOLUTION

Side Lights on the Tennessee Case

BY SAM W. SMALL

The Scopes case has been elaborately argued and submitted to the supreme court of Tennessee. The judges will consider it during the summer and in the fall decide it either on a legal technicality or upon a supreme issue of state rights and democratic government. If anyone has the casual notion that the common run of the people are not concerned with the question of their right to control the instruction of their children in the schools they have ordained and support with their common funds, he should go among the people and listen to them.

I am speaking to large crowds of them every night on this assault by the neo-scientists upon the integrity of the Bible and get their acute reaction to the charge that it is only a book of ancient fables and errors. If I am any judge of what is under their hair and in their hearts they are soon going to bring on a nation-wide battle to banish from every public educational plant every teaching and teacher of such so-called science and actual atheism.

All the talk of Darrow and his ilk about "freedom of science" and "liberty of teaching" is supreme nonsense. No such legal principles exist in this country of popular government, unless the people of some home-rule unit set them up for themselves, but for none others. Every sensible mind must repudiate the claim that a hired teacher may enforce upon the minds of ignorant children his noxious, agnostic, or anarchistic notions as the truth they must believe. Even religious liberty is not permitted to violate the moral sanctities of society. The supreme court of the United States said (1890): "It is assumed by counsel of petitioner, that because no word of worship can be established or religious tenets enforced in this country, therefore any form of worship may be followed and any tenets, however destructive of society, may be held and advocated, if asserted to be part of the religious doctrines of those advocating and practising them. But nothing is further from the truth."

Darrow and colleagues argued that to prohibit the teaching of a scientific theory of creation that contradicts the Genesis account is to prefer and legalize a sectarian interpretation of the Bible and is, therefore, unconstitutional. Darrow knows that is not true, but he has the Mencken idea that the supreme court of Tennessee does not know that it is not so. Darrow knows that the courts have almost uniformly held that, "The fact that statutes are colored and molded by the Christian religion does not render their prohibition violative of religious freedom, if primarily they are civic regulations with a view to promote the moral and physical welfare of the community."

As for the rights of parents, it has been upheld that they have an unalienable right to direct the instruction of their children, within the limits of the laws enacted under police power to secure the health, morals, education, safety and general welfare of the state. Hence, it has been decided that "a parent's religious liberty is not unwarrantably limited by a statute which requires him to provide medical aid for his children, though his religious belief forbids his doing so."

And as for the "liberty of teaching" and the like, the United States supreme court, in the case of Dent v. West Virginia, decided that "in the interest of the health of the community the state may regulate the practice of medicine and the training of practitioners." So, if a state may constitutionally do that as to doctors, why not as to teachers in the common schools?

One thing is certain and that is that the publishers of school textbooks will not be able to saturate the public school systems of America with these evolution theories without first fighting and winning one of the greatest moral battles ever staged in a democratic republic.

Sullivan Discusses Effect on Coolidge Of Brookhart-Cummins Primary Result

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, June 5.—(Special correspondence.)—On Monday the republicans, of Iowa, will nominate a candidate for United States senator to fill the seat now held by the veteran, Albert B. Cummins.

To the public outside of Iowa, to other sections of the country, this ordinarily would seem merely one local state election, merely the choosing of one candidate for senator out of the sixty-six candidates to be nominated this summer by the two parties for the thirty-three senatorial vacancies that will be filled at the general election in November. Ordinarily the public outside of Iowa would pay little attention to it. Possibly people in general may be taking less interest than is imagined by those of us who, as principals or observers, are within the world in which politics is a main concern. This Iowa primary, except to a limited degree that will be explained in a moment, does not involve any great principle or nationwide issue. It does not affect or throw any light upon the subject of prohibition, as did the senatorial primary in Pennsylvania last month, for all three of the principal contenders in Iowa on Monday are dry. The senator, Cummins, whose fate is to be determined is an important figure in the senate, but not to the country at large. This Iowa primary falls short of the nation-wide importance that will attach to the selection of a senator in Massachusetts, where the re-election or the defeat of Senator Butler will be interpreted because of Senator Butler's close personal and geographical association with President Coolidge as a barometric reading, so to speak, of President Coolidge's standing in his own state and in the nation at the middle of the term to which he was elected. How President Coolidge stands in the nation just now is the beginning phase of the question whether the country would be willing to renominate and re-elect him to another term.

This brings us to precisely the reason why this Iowa primary is the subject of the closest attention from the politicians of the country and from such portions of the public as takes more than a passing interest in politics. It is because there will be read into the results in Iowa on Monday a meaning having to do with that prestige of President Coolidge that the Iowa primary will be watched. To some extent this interpretation is justified; and whether justified or not, this meaning will be read into it. On Tuesday morning there will be much writing and reading and talking about whether, as politicians put it, "Coolidge is slipping." In one outcome of the Iowa primary there will be many headlines in Tuesday morning papers in which the words "Coolidge Indorsed" will appear, and many others in which the words "Administration Rebuked" will appear.

To understand such bearing as the primary may be justly said to have on President Coolidge's political fortunes it will be clearest to begin with that one of the Iowa candidates who is seeking to oust the other.

Smith Wildman Brookhart is a farmer and lawyer in the little town of Washington, Iowa. Some years ago he made himself a spokesman of the farm sentiment of his state, and also the organized labor sentiment. For that he would have been called radical, and, in fact, some of his ideas are—let us call them radical, although eccentric, or aberrant, or unusual, or irregular, would be a more accurate term. Brookhart is not really radical, either in intellect or temperament or personality. The puns that have been made upon his middle name have really little basis in fact. Brookhart is more placid in temperament, more monotonous in expression—one might almost say more dull, less inclined to bubble and sparkle, than any one of many perfectly regular, orthodox, conservative senators in both parties. Brookhart is much less explosive in temperament, less adventurous in thought, less impatient, less dashing in debate than, for example, Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, or Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, or Senator George Moses, of New Hampshire, or Senator Bruce, of Maryland. Brookhart is really a most placid man. If he had been born into different circumstances and if his surroundings had been different he would be seen as indigenously of a type far different from the picture the public has of him.

Any artist, any portrait painter with a wide knowledge of the world, trying to classify Brookhart where by nature he belongs, would picture him as an English squire, conservative, tory, managing his estates well, living faithfully up to the requirements of the fox-hunting season, making a fad of rifle marksmanship and delivering lectures to his tenants on cooperative marketing.

What causes Brookhart to be seen by the public as what he seems to be is partly his circumstances—he was born in a log cabin, and with the pride that throws light on his psychology and on the reasons for his political position, he recites the fact of that humble beginning in the condensed biography he wrote for the official Congressional Record.

Is it sound, incidentally, for us to continue to accept birth in a log cabin, as it long has been accepted in America and as it long has been our practice to make political use of it, as a sign that a man classifies himself with the plain people? And as a symbol, a promise, that the candidate thus singled out at birth for a political career will always stand by the plain people? The log cabin vote, as such, is not really very numerous, and so far as the beneficiaries of this scene for coming into the world mean it to convey to us the idea that they, having been born poor, will stand by the rest of us who are poor—so far as that goes—a man born in a log cabin may not have been born poor at all. If the log cabin was located, as many were, on 160 acres of Iowa or other Western land, the family most certainly was better off, in that time and place, than many a man who today has a yearly income of several thousand dollars. Many a person born in a city house, if it were a rented one, is much lower in the scale of wealth than many another born in a log cabin. In short, a good deal that is entertaining might be written about the fact, curious in American politics, that the only kind of dwelling politicians ever mention as a birthplace is a log cabin. Some city humorist will come to congress some day and will laugh this old American political device into the discard by recording in his official biography that he was born in a house 200 feet square and 100 feet high—though he will add that his family only occupied one apartment, and rented that.

When Brookhart began to speak up for the farmer, the regular republican organization leaders in Iowa, instead of admitting what was honest and justified in his emotion, merely took an attitude of "down with him."

Brookhart got to the top through the resignation of Senator William S. Kenyon. Kenyon was a liberal, a progressive, a reformer, anything within that category you choose to call him. As such, Kenyon was the correct representative of more than a majority of the voters of Iowa. They elected Kenyon to the senate with a support so large that nobody could question it. Kenyon in the senate reflected this Iowa sentiment. Kenyon's existence in the senate, and the support he always had from Iowa, was proof that the sentiment existed and was entitled to representation on the floor of the senate. But when Kenyon resigned, the regular republican leaders of Iowa conspired to send a different type of man, call it a standpatter, in his place. They undertook to prevent the kind of sentiment in Iowa that Kenyon had reflected from having any representative at all.

It was then that Brookhart made his campaign. Brookhart intellectually is decidedly not the peer of Kenyon, but otherwise he was Kenyon's logical successor. To try to send a different type of man was to try to defeat, to frustrate, to forbid a spokesman, to the majority sentiment of Iowa. In spite of all the efforts of the regular Iowa republican politicians to keep Bookhart down, he rose and came to the senate in a mood to be very insurgent—and very insurgent he was. When the brief, unexpired term of Kenyon, for which Brookhart was first elected, expired, again the regular republican politicians of Iowa tried to keep him at home. It was amid the rancors of that campaign that Brookhart, although running on the regular republican ticket, came out for La Follette and gave out utterances about Coolidge and Coolidge's administration, which utterances have an essential place in his present fight.

As a result of the refusal of many regular republicans in Iowa to support Brookhart, as a result of their refraining from voting or else voting for Brookhart's democratic opponent, the election was very close as between Brookhart and the democrat, Steck. The election was contested. In the fighting out of that contest in the senate some of the leading regular politicians of Iowa once more went so far in their detestation of Brookhart as to do everything they could to get the senate to seat the democrat, Steck, in his stead. This flagrant party irregularity of some of those republican Iowa politicians, who on all other occasions insist that party regularity is a sacrosanct test—this attitude, this preference to seat a democrat instead of whatever kind of republican Brookhart may be described as being—this seemed to justify what Brookhart himself has been doing: and it has strengthened his present campaign.

One of those who worked with the senate to unseat Brookhart was an Iowa republican, who is now a fairly high official in President Coolidge's administration. This fact gave to Brookhart's friends a certain amount of opportunity to dramatize his fight as a justified fight against Coolidge; to claim that Brookhart is being made a martyr by many of the regular republican leaders, including, as they claim, President Coolidge and his friends. Brookhart's friends gathered additional fuel for this argument from the fact that in the actual voting in the senate the two senators from Coolidge's home state, Massachusetts, Senator Butler and Senator Gillett, both voted against Brookhart, although many other regular republican senators, including the official republican senate leader, Curtis, and such regulars as Pepper and Reed, of Pennsylvania, felt that the evidence justified them in voting to let Brookhart retain his seat.

It is for these reasons that Brookhart's campaign to come back to the senate on Monday is being pictured as to some extent a test of whether the Iowa republicans are for Coolidge or for Brookhart. The test, indeed, will be interpreted as applying not only to Iowa, but to many other western states.

It is all rather rough on Senator Cummins. If Brookhart had been allowed to keep his senate seat, Cummins, in all likelihood, would have been perfectly safe. Lacking Brookhart to run against him, there was no one else likely to make a successful campaign against Cummins. Cummins as a senate veteran, as a man who has been senator or governor of Iowa for half his mature lifetime, would have had a strong sentimental hold on the state.

If Cummins is defeated on Monday and Brookhart elected it will mean several things, and the things it will mean will be pieced out by the things it will be interpreted as meaning. The latter, as things go in politics, will be as potent in coming political developments as the first. It will mean, or be interpreted as meaning, that Iowa wants the Haugen bill for farm relief, which the bill's critics call radical; that if the corn belt is not given the Haugen bill then it will insist on tariff revision downward; that there is a definite cleavage between west and east in the republican party; that the conservative policies about railroads identified with Senator Cummins are disapproved, and that the very different railroad policies of Brookhart are indorsed; that encouragement will be given to the corn belt nucleus which is at work organizing to—as they express it—"force Coolidge back of the Alleghenies;" that the same group will be encouraged in their intimations that they are going to put forward some one like ex-Governor Lowden, of Illinois, or Vice President Dawes for the next republican presidential nomination: that Iowa has a "grouch" against the east and against the republican high command identified with the east and is going to send Brookhart back to Washington to show the east what Iowa thinks of them.

A Brookhart victory may not mean all these things actually; but they will be read into it.

Dr. Brooks Reviews 'Abraham Baldwin'

BOOK OF HENRY C. WHITE, Ph. D., S. C. D., D. C. L., LL. D.

BY DR R. C. BROOKS.

In the preface to this Life of Abraham Baldwin the author indicates his intention later to write a history of the University of Georgia, and presents the study of Baldwin's career as a preliminary to the larger work in mind. The nexus between the two studies is, of course, the fact that Baldwin was the leading spirit in founding the university.

Dr. White was confronted in his task with a problem of no mean proportions, for it is a serious, indeed a wellnigh hopeless undertaking to write the life of a man who left no written record of his activities—nothing in the shape of letters, diaries or memoranda. Furthermore, since he was never married, no admiring descendants remain to perpetuate his name and fame. Baldwin had no military career and acquired little reputation as a congressional debater. His career lacked the colorful, the dramatic aspects which enable the historian to draw an arresting portrait of his subject. A man of sterling qualities of character, an educated gentleman, a sound and conservative statesman, Baldwin unquestionably was. These qualities are such as are valued by thoughtful men and the memory of their possessor ought by all means to be perpetuated; at the same time the path of the historian who would chronicle such a life is a hard one to travel. Though Dr. White has applied a trained and experienced mind to a diligent search of all the contemporary records and has made liberal use of the work of other historians, he was not able to unearth more than enough data to present a somewhat meagre body of facts about Baldwin. These facts are, however, sufficient to fix him securely as one of the leading statesmen of his period in the minds of those who can appreciate real worth.

Baldwin's Early Life.

Baldwin was a New Englander, the third child of Michael and Lucy Baldwin, and was born at New Guilford, Conn., on November 2, 1754. His father, though following what would now be regarded as the humble calling of a village blacksmith, was a man of parts. Abraham's ancestors and his brothers and sisters belonged distinctly to the intellectual element of Connecticut. Abraham and three of his brothers, or half brothers, were graduates of Yale, and his sisters married men of distinction. Abraham entered Yale in 1768 at fourteen years of age and was graduated in 1772 with the Bachelor of Arts deree. He remained in the college three additional years preparing for the Calvinist ministry and was licensed to preach in 1775. After receiving his license, he was made a tutor at Yale, but in 1779 resigned to become a chaplain in the revolutionary forces. His duties in the army were light and he took advantage of the oportunity to study law. On the close of the war he was admitted to the bar at Fairfield. Meanwhile, in 1781, he had been elected professor of divinity at Yale, but did not accept the call. Yale was in a state of decline and service there did not seem attractive.

His Removal to Georgia

Such was in brief the history of Abraham Baldwin to the time, when, in his thirty-first year, he migrated to Georgia. Why he made this move is not definitely known, but all the circumstances justify the belief that his purpose in coming was to engage in educational work. The then governor of Georgia was Lyman Hall, himself a native of Connecticut and a graduate of Yale. He is known to have been in correspondence with Dr. Stiles, president of Yale, and with others (possibly Baldwin) about educational affairs. Reaching Georgia some time in 1783, Baldwin appears to have settled for a short while at Augusta, not at Savannah, as is generally thought. In October, 1784, he was granted two hundred acres in Wilkes county and in the following year qualified as a member of the Georgia house of assembly as a representative from Wilkes.

Baldwin's Long Political Career.

Though Baldwin probably came to Georgia on the invitation of Governor Hall with the idea of connecting himself with a college, and though as early as February, 1784, when he had barely set foot in the state of his adoption, he was named as a trustee of lands set apart as an endowment for a college, it soon became apparent that the time was not ripe for so serious a step as the actual inauguration of a higher institution of learning. Baldwin's character, ability and attainments were such that once in the legislature, he became at once a leader, and embarked on the political career which engrossed the remainder of his life. He was admitted to the bar in Georgia, but seems not to have practiced extensively. He gave his time freely to the service of the state and the nation, though, strangely enough, rarely by popular election. Baldwin saw the great need of constructive statesmanship, if the state was to be led out of the chaotic conditions left by the Revolution—a struggle which had been in Georgia practically a civil war, so evenly was sentiment divided between Royalists and Patriots. In national affairs our central government was distinctly embryonic in form; the states were drifting apart under the ineffective articles of confederation. A high degree of ability and political forethought were necessary in national councils, if our young nations was to hold together and be given a stable government. Baldwin played a highly honorable part in this work.

In the Georgia Legislature.

As a member of the legislature in 1785 he was one of a body of about 40 actually in attendance who reconstructed the state; he served on a committee to prepare amendments to the constitution; the changes suggested were embodied in the new constitution of 1789; he was influential as a member of a committee set up for the purpose of settling the boundary dispute with South Carolina; he took great interest in seeing that justice was done the Indians in treaties held with them; he was almost invariably on a committee to which were referred communications from the continental congress and did what he could to uphold the hands of the weak federal government by having Georgia comply with requests for grants of authority and requisitions; he was chairman of a committee which reported an act to cede to the United States all western lands claimed by Georgia, though the stipulations made by the state were such as to lead congress to reject the cession at that time, 1788; he assisted in the organization and in securing land amendments for such academies as those in Chatham and Richmond counties; he drafted the charter for the University of Georgia, about which more anon.

In the Constitutional Convention.

When the call was issued for appointing members to the celebrated Philadelphia convention (the one which drafted our present national constiuttion), the Georgia assembly in 1787 named Baldwin as one of the delegates. Such influence as Georgia wielded in this convention was due largely to Baldwin, and Dr. White believes, with reason, that his services were of very much greater value than has usually been recognized. One of the most important problems in creating the new government was the composition of the congress. If representation in the lower house had been based solely on population, Georgia would have suffered grievously, being the least populous of the states. Baldwin, in his first speech, favored a house based on population and property. The most important property in Georgia was slaves. The southern delegates generally desired to count slaves in estimating the representation, a proposal bitterly fought by the "free' states. A compromise advocated by Baldwin was finally adopted, according to which, in fixing the number of representatives in the lower house, three-fifths of the slaves were counted. Another matter of crucial importance was the treatment to be accorded slavery and the slave trade. Georgia and the Carolinas desired to interference and the slave trade. Georgia and the Carolinas desired no interference with either. The other states were willing to abolish the slave trade entirely. At heart Baldwin believed that slavery would ultimately be destroyed, but he opposed any interference by national action and he advocated that the slave trade be kept open for 20 years. His second speech was made on that subject. As is well known the action taken by the convention conformed to that view. Baldwin suggested the form of a provision which was ultimately adopted giving congress power to "dispose of and make rules and regulations respecting the territory and other property belonging to the United States," a clause about which much history was later enacted.

A serious controversy arose in the convention between the small and the large states. Georgia, by reason of her vast territorial extent, was regarded as potentially one of the large states, though her population was at the time insignificant. A tentative agreement had been reached to base the representation in the lower house on population. But how should the upper house be constituted? The small states desired equality of representation, the large ones desired representation based on population. On July 2, 1787, came a vote on this subject. Eleven states were represented. The roll call was according to the age of the states, Georgia being last. Five large states voted for proportional representation and five small states voted for equality. Baldwin believed the contention of the large states was the correct one, but in order to save the convention from possible disruption, he split the vote of Georgia by voting in favor of the view of the small states. The other Georgia delegate, William Houston, voted on the other side. Later, of course, equality in representation for the second house was adopted.

As a Member of Congress.

The constitution prepared by the Philadelphia convention was in due course adopted and in January, 1789, the legislature of Georgia elected our first senators and appointed a date in November for the first election of members of congress. Abraham Baldwin was one of the three elected by popular vote; he was re-elected in 1791 and for each of the three succeeding congresses until 1799. In the latter year the legislature named him United States senator; he was re-elected in 1805 and died in 1807. He thus represented Georgia for eighteen consecutive years, including the three years in the continental congress (while still a member of the Georgia legislature he had been appointed in 1785 as a delegate to the continental congress and held his seat during the session of the constitutional convention at Philadelphia and until the old congress was superseded by the new).

During all these years Baldwin, though in no sense a spectacular member, exerted a quiet and important influence. He was a member of the house ways and means committee; he presided several times as chairman of the committee of the whole; and was twice elected president pro tem of the senate. Though an advocate of a strong central government, Baldwin was a strict constructionist and desired to keep the national powers within the bounds set by the constitution. When the country split into the two great parties of federalists and republicans, led by Hamilton and Jefferson, respectively, Baldwin threw in his lot with the Republicans, being actuated in large measure by the peculiar trend of events in Georgia, in which state many conflicts arose with the central government. He was a close friend and great admirer of Madison, the leader of the house in Baldwin's first term. On Madison's retirement Baldwin became one of his successors in the leadership of the republican party. He opposed Hamilton's financial policies, was a strong advocate of economy, opposed the alien and sedition acts, and favored the Louisiana purchase.

The Founding of the University of Georgia.

Space is lacking for a full treatment of Baldwin's long career in congress. We must hasten on to an account of his services in connection with the establishment of the University.

Dr. White makes the interesting observation that at the time the University of Georgia was chartered there was in the United States only one institution strictly entitled to call itself a "college" or which was in any large measure of a secular character. This institution was William and Mary college in Virginia. Harvard, Yale and Princeton were in reality sectarian, theological seminaries. The temper of New England was strongly Puritan. The crown refused to confirm charters granted to colleges of New England or elsewhere because the chief incentive in their founding was to perpetuate hostility towards the established church. In Virginia, however, the dominant element was Church of England in religion. For this reason no objection had been raised to the creation of William and Many in 1692. Liberal from the first, this small college played a profoundly important role in the development of Virginia, among her alumni being such men as the Randolphs, Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall and James Monroe.

The initiative in the establishment of the University of Georgia was taken by Lyman Hall, the governor. At his instance the legislature, in 1784, set apart 40,000 acres of land as an endowment for a college. Abraham Baldwin and other distinguished Georgians were appointed in the act as trustees. In the following year, on January 27, an act granting the charter to the university was passed. It has always been believed that Baldwin was the author and draftsman of this act, though Dr. White was unable definitely to establish this fact. Baldwin was a member of the legislature which passed the act; he had come to Georgia to engage in some form of educational activity and tradition has always associated his name with the charter.

This charter is a remarkable document. It sets up in reality an educational system for the state, uniform and complete, and all under the secular control of the state, and to be supported by it. The board of trustees at least nominally, has control over all state-supported higher educational institutions in Georgia.

The Meager Beginning.

For a number of reasons it was impracticable for the state to proceed immediately with the building of the college. The people were too deeply engrossed in bringing about some sort of order and establishing the economic foundations of prosperity to feel any great concern about higher education; there were few, if any, schools in the state fitted to prepare youths for the college; and, too, Baldwin, the man principally interested in the scheme, was drafted into the national councils, and was for that reason unable for years to give attention to his pet project.

The new century, therefore, had dawned before active steps were taken in the matter. In November, 1800, while he was a member of the United States senate, Abraham Baldwin, the only one of the original members of the board of trustees who still held office, had a meeting of the board called at Louisville, the capital. He represented to the board that the time had come for putting the charter into effect and proposed a plan of study based on the current requirements at Yale. He suggested that his friend, Josiah Meigs, then teaching at Yale, be made the first professor, it being understood that if Meigs proved satisfactory he would be made president in place of Baldwin, who had occupied the nominal post since 1785. Baldwin's suggestions met with the approval of the board and a short time thereafter a site was chosen for the institution in north Georgia on the edge of Cherokee land, more than one hundred miles from any considerable town or preparatory school. The salubrity of the section and the physical beauty of the spot seem to have dictated the choice of the trustees. The site was donated by John Milledge. Professor, later president, Meigs, arrived at the site (the embryonic village had been named Athens) in 1801, and began to erect the college in the backwoods. We cannot improve on Dr. White's account of the beginning and early years of the institution.

". . . There were, perhaps, not more than three or four residences of white men in the vicinity. With such labor as could be secured (chiefly slaves) and partly with his own hands, timber was felled and a log cabin erected and the college opened. Within a few months, receiving some small financial aid from generous friends of the college, bricks were baked from an excellent quality of clay in the neighborhood, lime was brought by Indians from the Cherokee country (there was no limestone near Athens) through the good offices of his brother (Col. Return Jonathan Meigs) who was U. S. Commissioner to the Indians at Hiawassee, Tennessee; nails and tools transported from Augusta, and a substantial brick building was erected, an exact replica of the familiar dormitories at Yale. This builling (restored) still stands (1926) as "Old College" upon the original site in the center of the modern university's campus. Somewhere and somehow he recruited a body of students for the college to the number of 30 and somewhat later of 41, who, with the assistance of a tutor or two (somewhere and somehow secured) were duly instructed 'according to the New England mode of college education,' and on May 31, 1804, there was graduated—actually graduated—a class of ten, at a 'commencement,' observing all the formalities of similar functions at Yale, with processions, declamatiogs, orations (Latin, Greek and English), disputations (forsenic and other) and the dignified conferring of degrees, in the presence of an awed assemblage of the 'back-woods' men and Indians of the vicinage. It is true the exercises were conducted under a 'bush arbor' (which was duplicated for the centennial commencement in 1904) but they were none the less impressive on that account. 'Thus,' wrote Charles Meigs (Josiah's son), who was a student in the college at the time, 'the high-sounding songs of Homer; the sweet notes of Virgil, the stirring narratives of Xenophon and Caesar, the denunciations, the suasions, and the arguments of Tully, heard no more in the land of the philosopher, were familiar sounds on the air of Athens, close by the frontiers of the savage Creek and the gallant Cherokee.'

"And Meigs himself wrote:

"'We have lately got an excellent bell which is heard four or five miles around, and the quadrupeds, and the bipeds too, few of whom ever heard a bell before, prick up their ears in amazement at the prodigy.'

Romance! In all the history of educational endeavor, surely, there is no more [illegible] romantic episode than this of the founding of Frankling college."

Baldwin Dies in 1807.

Abraham Baldwin, the Father of the University, did not live to see this auspicious beginning come to a sudden halt within a very few years. He died in Washington in 1807 while serving his second term as United States senator. President Meigs, who was an ardent, tactless and irrepressible republican, ran afoul of his trustees, who were federalists, and was deposed from office in 1810. But the subsequent history of the university does not here concern us.

Dr. White has done a valuable service in rescuing from oblivion the life and career of Baldwin. As the author points out, Baldwin has never been appraised at his real worth, and it is regrettable to record that the university has never done him adequate honor. We may expect that this book will be the occasion of calling the attention of the state to its dereliction.

"Abraham Baldwin" is written with the clarity of style and felicity of expression so characteristic of all that Dr. White does in a literary way. Though modestly disclaiming technical historical training, he has done the job in a workmanlike manner. If the author is like most authors, he is probably so tired of the task as never to feel an inclination to look between the covers of his book again. We trust this will prove the case and that he may be spared witnessing the atrocities which the printer has committed in the matter of typographical errors, punctuation, and misspelling. Some errors of this character invariably occur in first editions. The number is entirely too large in this case.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY WM. BRADY, M. D.

THE TEETH OF THE NEXT GENERATION.

One of the most popular theories proposed to explain the decay of the teeth is briefly that particles of fermentable food material (particularly carbohydrate food, that is, starches or sugars) lodge upon the surfaces of the teeth, especially in the spaces between the teeth and in the gum margins, and there undergo fermentation, through the action of bacteria, and one product of fermentation of starch or sugar is lactic acid. This lactic acid attacks the enamel, dissolves some of it away, and so a cavity starts. On this theory rests the general practice of brushing the teeth regularly for the purpose of preserving them. The theory may be correct, though it isn't plausible and has not been scientifically proved or corroborated by human research or animal experimentation. If it is correct, the present general preaching or teaching of dental hygiene is sound and ought to conserve the teeth.

But irrespective of the question of the soundness of the routine or habitual use of the toothbrush and various dentifrices for cleaning the teeth, the authorities in dental hygiene and human nutrition seem to agree nowadays that there is something more important than the mere cleansing of the teeth essential for their conservation. In a moment I'll try to indicate precisely what it is that the authorities deem so important.

The Role of the Brush.

I said the theory of acid fermentation in the mouth is not plausible. It may seem plausible to the casual lay reader; I mean it isn't plausible to the mind of one with a fair knowledge of human physiology. It is abhorrent to imagine that a normal or natural process can produce or even predispose to disease. Acid fermentation is a normal, natural process in the mouth when the normal or natural food includes carbohydrate material. Acid fermentation occurs in the mouth of the animal—although no tendency toward decay of the teeth can be shown to occur in the animal as a consequence.

But there are some better arguments in support of the regular application of the toothbrush. One of them is that by its use masses of disease germs are removed from the teeth before they can effect lodgment there and eventually set up disease. Of course this is a theoretical argument, scarcely capable of scientific demonstration one way or the other. Still, it seems reasonable. Another argument is that the application of the toothbrush does good by massaging and stimulating the gums and improving the circulation in the gums and hence the nutrition of the teeth. This argument is the most plausible of all. Yet any such function of the toothbrush is at best only a poor substitute for the gum massage and stimulation which the mastication of natural, coarse, rough foods gives. I may be quite wrong about this, but I believe that eating a raw apple, including the skin (the apple should be well washed first or eating some raw potato, carrot, cucumber, celery, or other raw vegetable or fruit every day, accomplishes more than the application of the toothbrush does.

Dentists often admit that, were it possible or feasible for us to return to the diet of uncivilized mankind we might preserve our teeth without the use of the toothbrush, but they declare that such a change in our dietary habit is out of the question. It may be out of the question for conventional folk who imagine that all food must undergo some mysterious "improvement" in a factory before it becomes really fit to eat. It is not at all out of the question for any one who has more faith and confidence in nature. There is no reason why anybody should not have some raw vegetable to chew every day, whatever his normal taste or craving may suggest. Of course I am speaking of well folk, not of invalids.

Hitch the Horse Before the Cart.

About the time when the toothbrush began to become popular, not to say vulgar, the dentists, doctors and everybody thought that the teeth grew to fit the face. We know now that the face grows to fit the teeth. I put this crudely in order to emphasize the revolution, or perhaps it is only evolution, of the scientific view of the conservation of the teeth. The deduction would have you draw from this is simply that you must use your teeth to save your face, not merely clean them. It is the unused tooth, after all, that decays. It decays no matter how clean you manage to keep it with a toothbrush. Several million people have proved to the entire satisfaction of the dental profession that a clean tooth is only too likely to decay. Mr. Gilchrist, the semi-domesticated tiger, and Tony, the wire haired question mark, both have cleaner teeth, I'll wager, and as sound, too, as any reader of this who brushes his teeth, and both subsist upon a largely artificial diet, which includes considerable candy, ice cream and other deadly sweets. However, they both get certain things which many people with well-brushed teeth fail to get, and that's the reason. They get vitamine, which seems to be essential for the development of sound teeth in animals and man, and vitamins apparently have some influence over the utilization of calcium in the body.

Calcium, Vitamins and Work.

Every expectant mother should consume daily not less than a pint of pure fresh raw milk (not pasteurized) for herself and another pint for the li'l stranger. This will provide ample calcium (lime) for the building of good teeth, mother's and child's, and if the milk is raw and from cows on pasturage, it will provide in addition the vitamins which are indispensable for the utilization of calcium in the body.

Every child up to the age of sixteen years should consume daily not less than a pint of pure fresh raw milk.

Everybody who is not an invalid or under a physician's care should make it a rule to eat a reasonable amount of raw vegetable every day.

In place of the customary sweets, in which nearly everybody indulges excessively nowadays, some fresh raw fruit, whatever may be in season or obtainable, should be a part of everybody's ration every day.

If pure raw milk is not available, then the ordinary pasteurized milk should be used, and for the purpose of making good the vitamin deficiency of pasteurized milk each child and each expectant mother, should take a small amount of plain cod liver oil every day, from ten drops up to one or two teaspoonfuls daily.

For the exercise of the teeth in mastication and the massage or stimulation of the gums, as well as the valuable vitamins and roughage, the green leafy relishes or salad vegetables should be utilized in the daily menu: Lettuce, spinach, raw cabbage, beet greens, kale, celery, green onions and their tops, radishes, cooked dandelion greens (or raw ones if they are grown where no dogs run at large), parsley, cress, asparagus—throw me a forkful or two of these and you may keep your old toothbrushes.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

That Long, Low, Muckrakish Style.

Some time ago I asked you for elementary sex instruction. This you sent me, and I am very, very grateful. But now I want to know more, as my knowledge of sex is almost entirely limited to the facts you sent me. Can you—will you recommend some book or books that deal with this subject in a not too technical style? (K. V.)

I intended to ask whether you have read Judge Lindsey's "Revolt of Youth" and whether you indorse his ideas?

Answer.—I am unable to recommend such a book or books for you, because I have not yet found one which seems suitable. Pamphlets and books dealing with the question in elementary style are available enough, but beyond that there is nothing I can recommend. No, I have only scanned Judge Lindsey's book, and from the little dips I took in it I concluded the style was too long, low and muckrakish. It might fit in all right with a "daring" novel by Gertrude Atherton, for "frankness," or with Conan Doyle's recent yarn, "The Land of Mist," for aimlessness.

Snooze After Dinner.

Is it healthful to lie down for a while after eating? (B. N.)

Answer.—In some conditions it may be better not to cultivate such a habit. But as a rule it is natural and healthful to lie down and nap or sleep after a hearty meal.

Calf Liver and Cowcumbers.

What food values have calves liver, radishes, cucumbers? (C. M. D.)

Answer.—Liver, about 575 calories to the pound. Radishes, about 135 calories to the pound. Cucumbers, about 75 calories to the pound. All contain vitamins, liver perhaps the most, if the animals are fed green fodder.

Fallen Stomach.

May I ask whether or not fallen walls of the stomach can ever be corrected without an operation, and is operation the only way of correcting same? I am now wearing a special corset which I should love to discard (Mrs. L. W.)

Answer.—If you mean sagging downward (ptosis), I should not have an operation if I were you. Only a frenzied surgeon would operate for such a condition. The preferable course would be a regimen of postural rest cure with a fattening diet, and later a graduated exercise regimen—of course, all under medical care.

Glimpses of Hollywood

BY ROSALIND SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Calif., May 29.—(Special Correspondence.)—It may have been Mildred Gloria Lloyd's birthday party, but Harold Lloyd was by long odds the one who was having the most fun.

Friday was the baby's second birthday and fifty children were her guests including some of the children of famous picture folk.

The Lloyd back yard on Irving avenue in Wilshire was the scene of festivities with a long table with white benches set on the lawn where the birthday goodies were spread. Sweet peas, pansies, roses, forgetmenots, and baby's breath decorated the table and each little guest had a gold filigree basket filled with sweetheart roses and forgetmenots.

A large rag doll with long flaxen pigtails presided over the table. Promptly at four dishes of hot mush and milk were served, followed by ice cream and cake; the final arrival of the refreshments being a great relief to little Mary Hay Barthelmess, who had seated herself at the table promptly on her arrival at 3 p.m., and had been anxiously inquiring for food for a good hour.

Large sun parasols shaded the table with ducks and chickens painted on them and the nearby sand pile and slide were well patronized by the guests. Mary's little lamb, done in iron, which was standing on the lawn, was quite an attraction as well as the big toadstool seat nearby.

Mildred Gloria herself was having a rapturous time pushing about a little wooden rabbit cart. On her shoulder she wore a tiny corsage bouquet—her first one—of sweetheart roses and fern, the gift of Sally Ann Carewe, aged several months who came in the arms of her mother, Mary Akin Carewe.

A little lawn and dotted Swiss dress with peach edged underslip and peach ribbon band tied in her hair completed the hostess' costume. Harold Lloyd, her famous father, kept going from one child to another, talking and playing with them and having the time of his life. He took one of the large canvas sun parasols, inverted it and seating Mildred Gloria in it gave her a lovely merry-go-round as he spun it on the lawn. Several times during the festivities little Gloria disappeared only to be found busily unwrapping the gifts that were heaped on the table in the hall.

Gaylord Harold Lloyd, nephew of Harold Lloyd, was also a guest at the party, appearing in a striking blue sailor suit with a swagger tie and white sox. Leatrice Joy II, looking the image of her famous father, Jack Gilbert, wore a pretty lingerie dress with a blue slip and industriously threw sand in the sandpile.

Loris Niblo, daughter of Fred Niblo and Enid Bennett, was on hand, as was Marguerite Roach, heir to the comedy man, Zazu Ann Pitts Gallery, Ruth Nagel, daughter of Conrad, Buster Keaton, Jr., Bobby Keaton, and Jim Kirkwood—son of Lila Lee and Bill Kirkwood—debonair in a cretonne jockey suit.

Little Thomasina Mix and Bill Hart Jr. were unable to attend, although invited, due to severe colds.

Mrs. Tom Mix came to see the fun wearing a white kasha coat with tuxedo collar of silver fox and large white felt hat. Constance Talmadge came over from the studio in her makeup over which she wore a French blue coat trimmed with frogs of cherry-colored material with large cherry-colored buttons. A small blue felt hat matched the coat. She wore no stockings.

Mildred Davis' Lloyd wore a blue chiffon crepe dress with a perky scarf tied in a bow under her chin and held in place by a tiny diamond elephant.

The opening of DeMille's new picture, "The Volga Boatman," was held on Tuesday at the Carthay Circle theatre which opened its door for the first time on the occasion. Lovely white Spanish towers of the new theatre and elaborate decorations within looked down on a distinguished company who ran the gauntlet of the spotlights and the crowd as they entered the theatre. Lew Cody was master of ceremonies and his wittiness evoked much mirth. After introducing Victor Varconi, one of the principals of the picture who is comparatively new to American audiences, Cody said after the applause for Varconi died down, "more opposition."

Mrs. Vareoni, known as Aramyozi Nusi on the Hungarian light opera stage, was present in a silver cloth wrap and white chiffon dress. She was accompanied by Vilma Banky, her countrywoman, lovely in white and a brocaded coat. Johann Kuruc, Hungarian composer and pianist, also was one of the party.

A bachelor's party composed of Ronald Colman, Dick Barthelmess and several others came touts san femmes.

Julia Faye, of the cast of "The Volga Boatman," was introduced from the stage wearing an orange taffeta period gown and a white ermine stole edged with red fox. Elinor Fair and Bill Boyd, principals who eloped and were married following the making of the picture, also were introduced, Elinor in white with a long full ermine wrap. DeMille himself was present and admitted he had enjoyed his picture himself. Lenore Coffee, author of the story, received her applause in a Nile green taffeta period frock with a tulle scarf and a hand bonquet.

In the audience were Lloyd Hughes and his wife, Gloria Hope, in a blue kasha suit with chinchilla collar, with Eugene Brewster and Corliss Palmer, Corliss in white kasha and wearing a large white felt picture hat. Margaret Livingston created a sensation when she entered in a vivid American Beauty costume accompanied by Mack Sennett.

Vera Lewis at home on Thursday afternoon made a very interesting hostess as she showed her collection of dresden china of which she and Colleen Moore are ardent rival collectors.

Every time one or the other gets a new piece a luncheon party is promptly arranged to show the other the piece and more than likely a bot argument will ensue over the relative value of the pieces. Vera admits that half [illegible] collecting is beating some

Agriculture Holds First Place in South Over Manufacturing

Editor Constitution: Much has been said of late about manufacturing taking first place over agriculture in the south. The total value of manufactured products produced in Georgia is compared with the value of farm crops produced and that comparison used as a basis for the claim that "the greatest factor in southern progress and prosperity is our manufactures."

It is not logical to compare the total value of manufactured products with the value of farm crops. Sixty-four per cent of the value of manufactured products in Georgia is represented by the cost of the raw materials the value of which existed before it was touched by a manufacturer. In the case of the textile industries, which make up a very large part of Georgia's manufacturing, the raw material is mostly cotton produced by the farmer. The farmer's crops, on the other hand is nearly all new wealth since he uses no raw material except fertilizer. The cost of fertilizer would be more than offset by the value of live stock products which were not included in your figures giving the value of farm crops.

If, as you say, the total value of manufactured products in Georgia per year is $604,449,555, then the value added by manufacturing operations, or in other worlds, new wealth created by manufacturing establishments, would be only $220,624,087 compared with over $540,000,000 in new wealth produced by the farmers of the state.

These figures do not bear out your statement that the greater factor in southern progress and prosperity is our manufactures." It may be true as bank clearings and other indices of prosperity indicate, that Atlanta is more prosperous today than it was a few years ago when farmers could make money, but I doubt if it is true of other sections of Georgia. I think that most business men will agree with me that prosperity in Georgia as a whole depends on the prosperity of the farmer. However important manufacturing has become, it has not yet reached the point where it brings in as much wealth as should be brought in by the farmers. It is true that manufacturing is on the up grade and farming is on the down grade, and that eventually industry will pass agriculture in wealth-producing power unless something is done to better the condition of the farmer.

Agriculture is undoubtedly on the "tail end" at present. The average Georgia farmer's income according to the most recent figures I have available is $319 per year. The average factory worker's income is $819 per year. The farmer's income constitutes the earnings of both the farmer and his family, whereas in the factory worker's family there are often several persons employed, each of whom receives on the average $819 per year.

The farmer, of course, likes to hear others tell him that his "interests are great and must be conserved and promoted in every possible way," and that "our farmers constitute our first-line of subsistence and must be protected and prospered in every possible way." He has been hearing such statements for such a long time that he is getting to the point where he would like some favorable action instead of so many words.

Recently a bill was voted on in congress which was designed to place the farmer on an equal footing with industry. If only 23 congressmen who voted against the bill had voted for it the measure would have passed. Eight of Georgia's congressmen voted with industry and against the farmer on the bill, and one did not vote. Only three congressmen from the preeminently agricultural state of Georgia were willing to cast their votes to help put the farmer on an equality with the industrial worker.

History is full of instances where the agricultural classes have become little better than serfs. In every case it has resulted disastrously for the country. The condition of many Georgia farmers today is deplorable. Our political and industrial leaders who emphasize industry and commerce and ignore the needs of the farmer are not working for the best interests of even the industrial classes to say nothing of the state as a whole. I do not believe that a permanent industrial prosperity can be built on a foundation of agricultural poverty. The sooner our leaders recognize that fact and give practical aid to the farmers cause the better it will be for all interests of our state and of our country.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

New York, June 5.—It is hard to lay down a rule as to who is and who is not a typical New Yorker. You might say that a gent who can keep his cigar going for eight stations on the subway is one of the initiated in New York life, but then anybody might perform the trick. You might also say a New Yorker is a chap who doesn't gaze up at the Woolworth building, or any of the other towering monsters. But this holds good also of the average stranger.

• • • •

Incidentally I might say that the vaunted New York sky-line does not cause strangers to go into any ecstasies as a rule. They are not surprised. They know before coming here that we have these tall buildings. There is no element of mystery in them, nothing really astonishing. It's simply a pile of steel and bricks, generally put up without regard for beauty or aesthetic effect. They are colossal, true, but that's the end.

• • • •

Then take our avenues. Fifth avenue for instance. They are unbroken stretches that weary the eye. Nothing to break them up. The traffic towers, really tasteful pieces of bronze, are the first break in this monotony of vista. Paris was once that way. Long avenues in a stretch.

• • • •

The French, however, began to beautify their capital long ago. They set the great Hausmann to work. He planned a new city and actually brought it about.

• • • •

In the laying out of his boulevards he put a circle, a square, a monument here and there to break the monotony of the vista. Here he put the Arc of Triumph, there a fountain or again a circular park with a fine statue in the center.

• • • •

Columbus circle, New York, at the entrance to Central park, with its majestic arches and the immense column supporting the statue of the discoverer of America, would have pleased Hausmann, the great city planner.

• • • •

Another beauty spot is Washington square with the arch looking toward Greenwich Village. But turn around and look the other way and the sight is disconcerting.

• • • •

Everybody seems to have a right to build as he pleases. There is no fixed sky-line, nor does there seem any rule governing the style of buildings on America's greatest thoroughfare.

• • • •

I am told that there is an awakening in building circles to the need of a city board of architects and city planners to work together towards producing harmoniously beautiful effects.

• • • •

Such a feeling is but one of the signs of stability in prosperity. As wealth piles up, there comes a longing for beauty and decoration. Who knows but Fifth avenue will some day eclipse the Champs Elysees or the Nevski Prospekt in Leningrad for decorous and harmonious appearance.

Assistant Solicitor Binns On 'Suspended Sentences'

Editor Constitution: In a recent issue of The Constitution there appeared an editorial under the headline "The Big Rat Hole." In this editorial you rather severely criticized the judges of our criminal courts for imposing suspended sentences in criminal cases.

Referring to the judges you state that "they practically fix a license fee for repeaters who can prey so profitably upon the public as to be able to pay on demand when accidentally recaptured and freshly assessed."

Having no personal interest other than an earnest desire to assist in enforcing the law and making our city and county a better place in which to live, I am writing to call your attention to some facts connected with the use of suspended sentences as imposed by our judges presiding in the criminal courts concerning which you may not be at present informed.

Speaking from personal knowledge of what is being done in the criminal court of Atlanta, I call your attention to the method which is being used by Judge Jesse M. Wood with reference to cases involving the violations of the state prohibition law. When cases are made for a violation of this law and the evidence tends to indicate that the accused has been involved in the sale of whisky, Judge Wood has made it a practice in most instances to assess a fine and to impose a sentence on the public works of our county, this sentence to be suspended upon the payment of the fine assessed, but with the distinct understanding that in the event the accused is subsequently brought before the court again charged with a similar offense, and the evidence was sufficient to lead the court to believe that the accused had been connected either with the possession or sale of whisky, an order would be entered revoking the order suspending the sentence imposed in the first case, thus requiring the accused to be sent immediately to the public works to serve the original sentence. Judge Wood has invariably followed this practice since going on the bench last fall, succeeding the late Judge A. E. Calhoun. In many instances where the evidence indicated that the accused had been engaged in selling whisky, a straight sentence has been imposed.

As a result of this practice there are at present a number of offenders now serving sentences on the public works of this county who were notorious for their former activities in connection with the bootlegging business. It is also a matter of common knowledge among attorneys practicing in the criminal courts, and offenders of the kind referred to above, that this form of sentence is most dreaded, because of the fact that they do not have to be convicted of the second offense before an order revoking the suspension of the sentence in the first offense is entered upon the court records.

You will thus see that there is no provision for "repeaters to be able to pay on demand when accidentally recaptured."

I trust that you will receive this letter in the spirit in which it is being written, for I am sure you want to be as fully informed as possible on this important question.

The most attentive nurse in the movies nowadays is George Siegmann, who portrays a Holland innkeeper in Cosmopolitan's "Red Mill" and has to keep one of those long Dutch pipes alight. "Every time you wink it goes out," said George between puffs. "There are a dozen tricks of carrying it to keep the spark of flame alight. It's like nurring an orchid in a hot oven. Dammit, there it's out again."

French Model Is Central Figure of Metropolitan Film

Victor Herbert's Operetta, "Mlle. Modiste," Stars Corinne Griffith.

About a score of years ago Victor Herbert, a budding composer of music, and Henry Blossom, a playwright, combined their talents and wrote the book and lyrics for a lively operetta called "Mlle. Modiste."

Now Corinne Griffith is Mlle. Modiste and her version of the famous operetta, which will be seen on the screen all this week at the Metropolitan theater, will give delight to millions all over the world.

Thanks to the artistry of L. M. Asher, general manager of Corinne Griffith Productions, "Mlle. Modiste" has been given a bright, sparkling and entertaining picturization. Miss Griffith, ever beautiful, is said to give the most interesting performance of her career.

"Mlle. Modiste" relates the story of Fifi, a French modiste salesgirl and model, whose personal charm brought men to her feet and caused women to purchase anything she advocated regardless of cost. Among the visitors to Mme. Claire's, where Fifi holds forth, are Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Bent, of St. Louis. Mrs. Bent came to "see" Paris while her husband came to "do business" and "enjoy it." When Mrs. Bent succumbs to Fifi's sales talk and sends for her husband to pay the bill, Bent is confident that such a salesgirl would be an invaluable asset to his business and he buys the establishment and puts Fifi in charge of it with well-earned success.

Meanwhile Fifi meets Etienne du Beauvrey, French army officer, and a romance develops. However, Etienne visits a fashion revue Fifi and Bent put on for the benefit of the out-of-town buyers and when Fifi brings the show to a close by auctioning off the various garments of her wardrobe from behind a screen, he misjudges her activity, insults her and leaves. Later Etienne and the Marquise de la Mar, a former fiancee, go to Deauville intent on being married. Bent and Fifi having startled Paris with the charm and elegant wardrobe of a mysterious "Mlle. Modiste" go to Deauville.

Etienne seeing Bent with Fifi becomes enraged at his attention and challenges him to a duel. Fifi seeing the seriousness of the situation tells Etienne that she has married Bent. Feeling chagrined, Etienne goes to Bent to apologize and a surprising climax.

Norman Kerry is seen opposite Miss Griffith and Willard Louis, robust comedian, has been cast as Hiram Bent.

Enrico Leide in his overture, "Herbertiana," has selected "Kiss Me Again" from "Mlle. Modiste," playing it first as Victor Herbert wrote it, then as Paul Whiteman, as an Oriental, and finally as Sousa would have written it. The stage presentation is a novelty piano quartet, Adolph Verdi, Eri Foretich, Laurence Powell Everhart and Horace Rundell playing Habanera from "Carmen," March Militaire and "In the Middle of the Night," one of Irving Berlin's songs. The musical score is entirely based on the operetta, "Mlle. Modiste." The theme is "Kiss Me Again," taken from the same composition.

Left to right, top scene from "Mlle. Modiste," at the Metropolitan, showing Corinne Griffith. Next scene from "Other Women's Husbands," at the Howard theater. Next, Norman Kerry, in "The Barrier," at Loew's Grand. Right, top, scene with Thomas Meighan, at the Rialto, in "The New Klondike." Lower left, scene from "The Iron Horse," at the Alamo No. 2. Next, Richard Dix in "Let's Get Married," at the Cameo. Then Fay Lanphier, star of "The American Venus," at the Palace. Lower right, scene from "The Masked Bride," at the West End theater Monday and Tuesday.

For the first time in her life' Anna Q. Nilsson looked down on her friends yesterday.

That was when she took her first ride in an aeroplane.

This was part of her action in "Midnight Lovers," now being made for First National under John Francis Dillon's direction.

The history is Carey Wilson's adaptation of J. E. Harold Terry's play, "Collusion."

Florida Land And Baseball Feature Rialto Photoplay

Tom Meighan is the star at the Rialto theater this week in a story of the Florida boom called and very aptly, "The New Klondyke." Supplementing Tom in the feature picture is the Christie comedy, "Shore Shy," then there are the usual short films including Pathe News. Whitney Hubner has charge of the musical score.

Tom Meighan has a made-to-order role in "The New Klondyke." He is Tom Kelly, star baseball player. Tom is leaving his home town in New Jersey and is going by steamer to Fairhaven, Fla., where he is to meet the team. The chap beside him is Bing Allen. Bing can "hit like Babe Ruth, but is otherwise practically unconscious."

On the boat Tom has an amusing meeting with Evelyn Dale, (Lila Lee) and a warm friendship ensues. Bing falls for Evelyn's maid. Evelyn is on her way to Fairhaven to visit her grandmother and dispose of some property. Accompanying her is Morgan West, a lawyer and real estate operator. West is a bit annoyed at Tom's friendship with Evelyn. Arriving at Miami, they go their separate ways.

Meanwhile, Dave Cooley, manager of the team, who fears he will lose his job because of Tom's superior knowledge of baseball, recommends to Colonel Dwyer, the club owner, that Tom be released. Dwyer won't hear of it—but Cooley sends a telegram telling Tom he is fired. Tom, having left his home before the wire's arrival, knows nothing about it; and so, on his arrival, he is more than surprised at being ordered off the field.

But on meeting Evelyn, Tom takes courage. Leaving nearly all his money for Bing at the hotel, he leaves. He aimlessly gets in a bus which takes him to a real estate development. There, on being recognized, he is presented with some property for the privilege of using his name in the advertising. Tom sells his lot and buys another. Soon he has made a lot of money, and returns to Fairhaven in a limousine. The players are envious and Evelyn is happy. On returning to the ball field, he is again ordered off, but Tom flashes a deed which shows him to be the rightful owner.

Cooley and West have been planning to start a development of their own centered around the ball field. To their chagrin, they have to purchase the property from Tom at a big increase in price. Seeing his success, the other players ask him to let them in on his deals. Tom agrees and goes to Miami to enter real estate on a big scale.

The two conspirators set a trap for Tom into which he steps. Being told there is a plot on foot to cheat Evelyn's grandmother out of a lot of money, he offers to buy her property at an advanced price. Needless to say, the woman is a sham. But Tom finds himself the owner of a lot of worthless swamp land.

His fortune and the trust of the players are wrecked. His faith in Evelyn, whom he believes guilty, is blasted.

Dwyer learns of his manager's treachery and Tom is given the job. Evelyn explains that she knew nothing of the fraud. And—everyone is made nappy as the final subtitle flashes "finish."

SUMMER DELIGHTS AT LAKEWOOD PARK

Outdoor recreation at Lakewood amusement park drew increasing numbers of people from Atlanta and vicinity last week as the weather began turning warmer and increasing the demand for the refreshing coolness of the riding devices, all contrived as real warm weather delights.

The airplane swing, first on the midway, whirls its passengers high in the air for a breezy ride at 40 miles an hour above the tops of all the other shows and buildings in the park.

The Old Mill stream, with a steady rush of fresh water impelled by the huge mill wheel, floats its passengers through the coolest of tunnels, through pitch darkness and past brightly-lighted miniature scenic beauties.

The Greyhound, which attains a mile-a-minute speed in many places, is refreshing and cooling as well as surcharged with thrills and excitement. The Ferris wheel, carrying its passengers to lofty heights above the fair grounds, gets all the breeze that is stirring and creates a wind of its own in its breath-taking downward plunge. The new Caterpillar has its own cooling system, shooting heavy gusts of wind into the tunnel at intervals as it spins around and up and down. The carousel, Cuckoo Inn, zigzag and the boats on the broad, cool lake are all delightful summer diversions.

Monte Blue Plays Converted Husband Role in Howard Film

"Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife" says the ninth commandment. In the production of "Other Women's Husbands," featuring Marie Prevost, Monte Blue, Phyllis Haver and Huntly Gordon, the theme deals not only with the smashing to smithereens of this commandment by the debonair Huntly, but with the grinding to fine powder of its reverse, "thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's husband," by Phyllis Haver.

With Marie Prevost as the coveted wife, and Monte Blue as the coveted husband, Erle Kenton, director, has a very interesting rectangle of rather heroic proportions on his hands. Being an expert since his Sennett days on all types of geometric figures and their treatment, Mr. Kenton is said to have made a most effective answer to the question, "what should be the fate of the man who not only covets his neighbor's and friend's wife, but attempts by process of law to relieve him of her? Also of his feminine accomplice who not only covet's her neighbor's husband but uses all her guile and personable feminine charms to lead him astray?"

"Other Women's Husbands" will be the feature screen attraction at the greater Howard theater all this week. It is based on the story by E. T. Lowe, Jr., who in collaboration with Jack Wagner, adapted it to the screen.

Among those who appear with Fay Lanphier (Miss America) in John Murray Anderson's "Venus in Greenwich Village," this week's stage revue, is Glenn Ellyn, who is seen in two specialty numbers of distinction. Miss Ellyn first appears as an interpreter of Benda Masks, wearing two of those facial coverings which are strikingly contrasting. Later in the revue she does a mirror dance in the character of "The Mirror of Venus," in which she displays her talent in balance and back-bending. Miss Ellyn came to the Anderson revue from Chicago, where she danced at the "400 Club" and appeared for some time in the Balaban & Katz theaters. She is also well-known to audiences of the Orpheum circuit throughout the west and south.

The overture for the week by the Howard Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Joseph Littau, will be "Piano Concerto in D Minor," by Rubinstein. Melvin P. Ogden will feature "Reaching for the Moon," at the mighty Wurlitzer.

Other features on the program will include an International news reel and comedy.

Forsyth Musical Comedy Opens With 'No Other Girl'

Don Lanning, Comedian, Is Featured Star in Company of Forty artists.

The opening performance Monday night of "No Other Girl," the big musical comedy hit selected as the initial offering of Don Lanning and his musical comedy company at the Forsyth will revive memories of former famous stock openings here and will pave the way for a season of entertainment such as has been rarely given to Atlanta theatergoers, it is predicted by the management of the Forsyth.

"No Other Girl" is a sparkling musical offering that has been one of the season's biggest attractions. Its production by the new company will allow its tunefulness and comedy full sway and will also give the many specialty stars with the organization a splendid opportunity, for the original has been altered somewhat for this purpose.

The company arrived in Atlanta Friday after a successful four-day try-out in Miami, where critics praised the show as excellent and the company as one of the best ever seen there. This tryout enabled the directors to put the final touches on the production for the opening here without the usual preliminary local rehearsals. The company is headed by Don Lanning, with James E. Eviston, noted producer, in charge. A long list of splendid attractions are in store for the coming weeks, Mr. Eviston announced.

"No Other Girl" is light and merry and offers a great opportunity to Mr. Lanning in the part of Annuias Jones, whose grandiloquent development dreams disturb the Quaker community which is the setting.

The brilliant cast of "No Other Girl," which will also be the cast of succeeding plays, includes Sena Thomas, a prima donna who has taken Miami by storm, it is reported; Ruth Tester, attractive and talented ingenue; Edna Jacques, Milton Reick, juvenile; Fred Brigman, Frank Blyler, Al Lorraine, Jack Bruns and Pat Monte. Besides these there are several specialty artists, such as Bob Williams, late of the "Sally" company, Emily Ross and Effie Burley, a trio of dancers. The Lyric Harmony Four, a quartet that comes direct from one of the most successful Broadway shows of the past season, will be another fine addition to the list.

The chorus is hailed as the most beautiful ever brought south in musical comedy stock and its members are all entertainers who have won applause at cabarets and supper clubs. It numbers twelve.

Walter G. Van Brunt, the stage director, deserves more than passing comment. He is a recognized artist of the first rank and has recently been with the "Student Prince," as director, where his work did much to make that beautiful production a great hit. He has had years of experience in staging musical comedies and the inclusion of his name in the technical staff is considered to be a guarantee of productions this summer far above the average in freshness and beauty. Joseph Rhea is the technical director and was formerly with Otis Skinner, while the artist is Thomas Findlay who comes to Atlanta from Hollywood. John S. Crowley will be musical director.

"No Other Girl" is in five scenes and is wholesome fun throughout. One Miami reviewer who saw the same play on its tryout in Miami last week said:

"When Don Lanning opened with his new company yesterday in the musical comedy 'No Other Girl' he proved to a packed house that he had selected a good road show with a leading role that puts him at his best. . . . Miss Sena Thomas, prima donna, who plays opposite Lanning, as well as the quartet and some specialty acts would appeal to the most critical audience."

"No Other Girl," while one of the best obtainable is by no means outstanding in the list of forthcoming attractions, according to Marty Semon, manager of the Forsyth. During succeeding weeks others as great or greater will be offered Atlanta audiences and the line-up alone would create much interest apart from the quality of the company.

Performances will be given at 7:30 and 9 o'clock each night with matinees at 3 o'clock on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Popular prices prevail, the top being 75 cents at night and ranging down to 35 and 50 cents for matinees. Despite the phenomenal demand for seats some few good season reservations remain and may be obtained at the box office.

'EBONY FOLLIES,' 81 FROLIC ATTRACTION

Manager Tom Bailey, of the 81 theater, realizing that in order to draw a good audience to his midnight frolics in the summer that he must provide a company that is unexcelled in negro musical comedy circles. He has suited the action to the word in providing S. H. Dudley's "Ebony Follies" for the midnight frolic next Friday.

The "Ebony Follies" company has an all-star cast of 40 persons, numbering among them some stars who are internationally famous in addition to a score who boast lesser laurels. Manager Bailey has been extremely fortunate in securing the "Ebony Follies" company and it was due almost entirely to the fact that the summer months are dull months in the theatrical circles that he was able to interrupt their long-time run in New York.

A feature of the Dudley that is almost sure to prove a hit with the Atlanta audience is the large and extraordinarily talented chorus. In every city in which they have appeared they have been pronounced as exceptionally good and some critics have ventured to say that they are without equal in negro theatrical companies.

Manager Bailey feels sure after spending several thousand dollars recently on improving and remodeling his efficient cooling system, that this fenture is sure to prove very popular with his midnight frolic patrons. Tickets are on sale at the theater and at Chess' place at Five Points at the usual moderate prices.

The Tudor.

In keeping with its policy of presenting action pictures, the Tudor announces for this week two productions which are full of pep and punch, the first of the two being "The Midnight Flyer," which will be shown Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"The Midnight Flyer" is the story of the laying of tracks and the building of a railroad through an extremely hostile country, the natives hating the march of progress for what it will mean to their lawless lives, and of the heroes of the rail who fought and won, their victory proven with the running of the first train.

And in this story of railroad life is laid the romance of a boy and girl who grew up with the trains, and of the madman who sought revenge by turning loose a speeding engine.

Up until the last big moment of the picture the intensity of its action serves to keep the viewers holding tight to their seats.

The last three days of the week bring to the Tudor another western star, a favorite of patrons of outdoor pictures, Bob Custer, daredevil rider, in "The Valley of Bravery," a drama of the west, and of the men who fight for right and men who fight for wrong. Numerous thrills are presented in order in "The Valley of Bravery." It has been heard said of this picture that there is no letup of action from the first title to the appearance of "finis" on the screen.

Bob Custer is easily remembered from numbers of speed action and western pictures in the last few months, none of which failed to please in the highest degree.

AMERICA'S BEAUTY, FAY LANPHIER, IS HOWARD STAGE STAR

At the Greater Howard theater, starting tomorrow, Publix theaters will present the newest John Murray Anderson revue, "Venus in Greenwich Village," a beauty show de luxe, in which Fay Lanphier is the featured player. Miss Lanphier is known as "Miss America" by virtue of her having been proclaimed the most beautiful girl in the United States by a jury of 12 prominent artists and beauty experts at the last national beauty pageant at Atlantic City.

Her right to this honor and its accompanying title has not been questioned by any person who has seen her in her triumphant tour with this John Murray production. Nor does her beauty stand out merely by comparison, for Mr. Anderson in this revue has surrounded Miss Lanphier with a dozen or more young women of such pulchritude that each one of them might easily be considered a candidate for first honors in any beauty contest, no matter how great its scope in numbers. Several of these girls have appeared in recent editions of Mr. Anderson's own "Greenwich Village Follies," and anyone who has seen the Follies knows full well the beauty standard which this annual production preserves.

Those who witness this performance will be impressed also with the gorgeous costumes designed by Hermann Rosse, who has drawn upon the art of the old masters—Titian, Velasquez, Gainsborough, Romney, Leonardo de Vinci and others—for his models in the scene immediately following the opening of the revue. Later the same girls are seen in the Jewels of Venus, presenting strikingly different conceptions in the matter of costuming. In the final scene Miss Lanphier appears to excellent advantage in a waltz with Ward Fox, one of the best known social society dancers on the stage. Incidental music is contributed by Rubey Cowan and Milton Ager.

Personal Appearance Of Louise Glaum on Loew's Vaudeville

Louise Glaum, most famous of all screen "vamps," wil come to Atlanta in person this week as the headline attraction on the vaudeville bill at Loew's Grand theater. Miss Glaum will appear in a strong and gripping play, "The Sins of Julia Boyd," written specially for her by Paul Gerard Smith.

Although Miss Glaum's name is familiar in every hamlet in America because of her wonderful work during her career as a screen favorite, she does not depend on her fame alone to win favor. She appears in a play which gives her many opportunities of showing the rare personal talent she has as an actress. Miss Glaum is one screen star who also has made good on the dramatic speaking stage, having filled admirably many famous stage roles.

In Miss Glaum's company are several able players, among them being Andrew Leigh and George W. Park. The play is one which has stirred thousands on her present tour and has won the highest approval from dramatic critics in other cities.

The new vaudeville bill at Loew's is strong in other acts in addition to the headline attraction. Frank and Teddy Sabini, in a new version of their famous comedy riot, "I Quit," will appear on the new bill. The work of these artists is well nown in Atlanta.

Another strong act on the new bill is the revue of Joe Carson and Kitty Kane, a scenic novelty entitled "Melody and Rhythm."

Two comedians who always bring a laugh producing act are Ross and Edwards "the two bull-garians," who will present their newest comedy vehicle. They will feature some clever comedy song numbers. The opening number on the new bill will be the Dallas Trio in a comedy acrobatic turn.

With such a strong vaudeville bill and with such a notable picture production as "The Barrier," Rex Beach's famous story with an all-star cast, the program at Loew's Grand for next week should prove to be one of unusual enjoyment.

Footnotes ON THE Footlights

BY ELMO HAMBY

Mons. Horatio Algier, Jr., dime novelist of fame and fortune, might well have found inspiration for one of his products at the Howard theater here in Atlanta. "From Office Boy to Manager" might well be the name of the story in which Gus Grist, assistant manager of the Howard, would be starred.

In the May issue of "Closeups," the organ of the Publix Theaters corporation, the said A. S. Grist, picture and all, occupies the biographical column of that worthy journal. Having Atlanta as his birthplace, Gus became associated with the Southern Enterprises, Inc., in October, 1920. In addition to working in the office during the day he became the night doorman at the Howard. Next, he became floor manager of that theater and was then transferred to Asheville, where he was publicity director and then manager of the Strand theater. He then assumed the managerial duties of the Rivolix and Egyptian theaters in Greenville, S. C. He was then promoted to publicity director of the Howard theater.

I intend some day before this typewriter falls to pieces to step into the manager's office of the Rivoli theater in New York and give Gus the "I-told-you-so," adding, of course, the inevitable, "By the way, Gus, how about a couple of passes for next week?"

The principals having arrived last week, the stage is all set for the first curtain at the Forsyth theater tomorrow night, at which time a musical comedy headed by the talented Don Lanning will disport for the benefit of the audience.

Whatever may be the faults of the younger generation, the appreciation of good music is all too obviously not one of their virtues. It is futile for anyone who enjoys the overtures and the special musical numbers at the various motion picture houses to attend a matinee; the matinee house is usually crowded with schoolgirls and boys who, in addition to yelling across the house to Joe or Jane, have to converse with the greatest degree of volubility among themselves.

The latest Mary Pickford picture, "Sparrows," is to make its premiere at Grauman's Egyptian theater, a fact that will be appreciated by those who know that only the outstanding pictures of the year are shown at Grauman's.

REX BEACH'S STORY, THE BARRIER, AT LOEW'S

"The Barrier," a stirring drama of Alaska based on Rex Beach's famous story, will appear as the feature picture attraction at Loew's Grand theater this week.

Beach's stirring novel of the Alaskan frontier, where the veneer of civilization dropped from men through their lust for gold, has been transferred to the screen with praiseworthy fidelity by Director George Hill. The work of the director is ably seconded by such popular screen stars as Norman Kerry, Lionel Barrymore, Henry B. Walthal, Marceline Day, Pat Harmon, Bert Woodruff and others. So well do these players acquit themselves that they ably deserve the title of the season's best cast.

Norman Kerry and Marceline Day are the focus of romantic interest in the picture. As Lieutenant Meade Burrell, the haughty scion of a proud Virginia family, Kerry is sent to an Alaskan army post, where he meets and loves Necia, played by Marceline Day, a half-breed girl whom he believes white, as does the girl herself, having been raised as the daughter of Gaig, the kindly old trader, portrayed convincingly by Henry B. Walthall.

Complications arise when Burrell learns the girl is not white. He is willing to overlook the barrier but the feelings of his aristocratic family must be considered. His decision is made when the girl falls into the clutches of Stark Bennett, the brutal skipper of a whaling ship.

The picture is packed with high-power dramatic thrills. The rescue of the girl from the whaling ship jammed in the ice floes, the wreck of the ship in the ice, the furious battle between the young lieutenant and Bennett in the ship's cabin, the struggle between the first mate, essayed by Pat Harmon, and Burrell's order, Sergeant Murphy, combine to keep the spectator on the edge of his seat throughout the film.

The picture contains none of the monotonous heroics commonly associated with the stories of the frontier and a well-defined vein of comedy, interpreted by George Cooper and Bert Woodruff, permeates throughout.

"The Barrier" is a picture that should not be missed.

Cameo Theater.

Richard Dix, who appears in "Let's Get Married," which will have its repeat showing at the Cameo on Friday and Saturday of this week, has in that picture the role of a handsome young man with a penchant for getting into scrapes, and as the picture starts, with some friends starts a fight at a night club, is thrown out and thrown into a series of events which makes the picture one of the most delightful ever, packed with laughs from start to finish.

The Cameo on Wednesday and Thursday will show Dorothy Mackaill and Conway Tearle in Michael Arlen's "The Dancer of Paris," the story of a girl who was the victim of the wiles of a man whose sole aim in life was the conquest of beautiful women, and who swore to devote her entire life to repaying him for the suffering he had caused.

The work of Dorothy Mackaill is the best she has ever done. Conway Tearle is very convincing in his role of the American who loved the girl.

On Monday and Tuesday Jackie Coogan in "The Rag Man," Jackie portrays the role of an escaped inmate of an orphan asylum who joins in with a dealer in junk and tries after fame and fortune in the old rag business.

Within a short time Frank Lloyd, recently signed as a Paramount producer, and E. Lloyd Shelton, who will supervise his productions, will be able to announce the title of his first production.

Raymond Griffith's next starring picture for Paramount, "You'd Be Surprised," is to be a comedy-melodrama, according to Hector Turnbull, associate producer at the Paramount studio in Hollywood. Arthur Rosson will direct.

Alamo No. 1 Theater.

William S. Hart in "The Bargain." Another Bill Hart thriller will be seen at Alamo No. 1, at Five Points, Monday and Tuesday. Story of a two-gun man in the old frontier days of the western ranges. He could draw his six-shooters with the flash of lightning; his gun held a mighty empire; when he drew he meant business. It is just one thrill after another.

"The Call of Courage," Wednesday and Thursday, with Art Acord, the cowboy who has thrilled millions, in a real honest-to-goodness picture of the great western country, with its swift action, smoking guns, beating hearts and daredevil exploits. Also Chapter No. 8 "Casey of the Coast Guard," with George O'Hara.

Jack Hoxie in "A Six-Shootin' Romance." If this western picture doesn't amaze you, no other will. For Friday and Saturday. Talk about thrills! You'll see a fight 300 feet in the air, the men in buckets that hung suspended from a cable strung across a ragged, rocky canyon. Thrilling drama, stirring romance, exciting battles, daring rescues. No wonder they called it "A Six-Shootin' Romance." Always a good selected comedy.

West End Theater.

Rudolph Valentino, Mae Murray, John Barrymore, Richard Dix, Lois Wilson and other scintillating screen stars will visit the West End theater this week in an array of motion pictures rarely equalled in a week's program.

"Masked Bride," with Mae Murray; "Monsieur Beaucaire," with Valentino; "To The Last Man," with Richard Dix, and "Beau Brummell," with Barrymore, are the features.

"The Masked Bride," with Mae Murray in the leading role is a fantasy of Paris, the tale of a glittering city in which a woman's soul is bared. A butterfly, fettered to the slums—she rose through love—a love that saved her. It's a great picture, one of the really worthwhile dramas of the screen.

This fine production is the attraction for Monday and Tuesday.

One Wednesday John Barrymore comes in "Beau Brummell." This remarkable offering in which a renowned celebrity takes the leading part, required more than three months to film and is a pot-pourri of the finer things of life—those things we all think about, dream about, wish we were and long for.

One who misses this picture will miss a genuine treat.

Rudolph Valentino in "Monsieur Beaucaire," probably never had a part that is more fitting for his great talents. He will furnish the program for Thursday and Friday, with Bebe Daniels, Lois Wilson and a score of other celebrities of filmdom. The screen's greatest lover—as Valentino has been dubbed—has a great vehicle in his latest film.

On Saturday "To The Last Man," a Zane Grey production, is certain to reap a rich patronage. Richard Dix and other notables in screendom transcribe this story to the screen in masterful style.

Pay Less Than You Now Pay for Rent

and OWN YOUR OWN HOME

in Beautiful Avondale

YES, it's absolutely true!

You can actually do this very thing. There is no mystery about it, for the new Avondale Home-Owning Plan makes it possible.

Think of stepping into a marvelously beautiful, ultra-modern, charmingly designed and perfectly appointed bungalow that would cost you from $9,000 to $10,000 and which you could not rent for less than $90 or $100 a month—all this for only $75 or $78 a month, covering all carrying and interest charges! You will be the home's proud owner in a very few years, and the home you get at Avondale for $8,500 could not be duplicated elsewhere for $10,000; the $10,000 home at Avondale could not be matched for $12,500.

"How is this possible?" you ask.

Here is the answer:

100 New Homes

The greatest residential building and development program the South has ever known is now surging forward at Avondale Estates.

One of the South's greatest building organizations, T. T. Flagler and Company, is building a minimum of 100 new homes within the year. Other well-known Avondale builders are at work on scores more.

This enormous program gives Avondale builders tremendous purchasing power. Everything is bought on a wholesale basis at the absolute minimum. Architects' fees, financing costs, contingency fees and excessive contractors' profits are eliminated. Because of the volume these builders are satisfied with one-third the margin the average builder would insist upon for a single house.

Costs Reduced to Absolute Minimum

Just as production costs have been lowered by the large manufacturing concerns of America, through mass production and efficiency methods, so have building costs been lowered under the Avondale building and home-owning plan.

This plan makes it possible for us to save you approximately 20% on the cost of your home, to build a home for $12,000 that would cost you $14,000, at least. Or one for $8,500 that would cost you $10,000, and then make it possible for you to pay for it and own it for less than you now pay for rent.

A Nation-Wide Movement

This movement is today assuming definite shape over the entire country. Great insurance companies, trust companies, mortgage and loan companies with billions of dollars in resources are seeking an outlet for their capital.

During the past five years, more homes have been built than in any similar period in the nation's history. Young business men, professional men and salaried men are at last beginning to realize that interest is cheaper than rent and that rent receipts are worthless—whereas every monthly note paid represents a definite and positive saving. Under the Avondale plan, original cash payments as low as $1,000 can be made.

How It Actually Works

Take, as an illustration, two young men of equal earning capacity; say $3,600 a year.

One decides to rent an apartment for $90 a month. At the end of five years he has paid out $5,400 and saved nothing!

The other decides to build a $10,000 home at Avondale—one he could not duplicate elsewhere for $12,000. His monthly payments, including every interest and carrying charge, are $89.84 a month—and at the end of five years' living in his home, he has actually paid everything on his home except the original loan, which he can carry indefinitely for an average of $35 a month.

Meanwhile, his home has enhanced in value as Avondale has flourished. He has likely had many opportunities to sell for a profit of $1,500 or $2,000.

The other man still has his cramped quarters, no feeling of independence, no recreational advantages such as Avondale affords—he has only a large sheaf of worthless rent receipts.

What Life in Avondale Means

A home in Avondale means more than a house and lot.

It means that you and your family will enjoy all the advantages possessed by the multi-millionaire on his lavish country estate. Your children will have the most beautiful and most completely equipped playground in all the South—for safe and wholesome play, far from traffic dangers.

Golf, tennis, boating, fishing, swimming, horseback riding—every opportunity for wholesome life.

Avondale Gardens supply freshest vegetables daily; Avondale Dairies the purest milk and cream.

Make up your mind today to stop paying, paying, paying for something you will never own. Save while you live—by taking advantage of this marvelous opportunity for great profit and life to the uttermost.

Our downtown sales offices—169-171 Peachtree Street—are kept open every evening until 10 o'clock for the express purpose of making it possible for those who are busy during the day to investigate this remarkable plan.

Avondale sales have passed the million-dollar mark and are speeding ahead at the rate of $3,000,000 a year!

ATLANTA CURIO HUNTERS ABROAD—E. P. McBurney, well-known banker, and Mrs. McBurney are shown buying souvenirs from a native at Mafeking. They were passengers on a recent cruise of the S. S. Orca to South America, South and East Africa and the Mediterranean.

COLUMBIAN VENUS ON STAGE—Miss Fay Lampbier, of California, holder of the title of "Miss America," will appear in a Public theater presentation, "Venus in Greenwich Village."

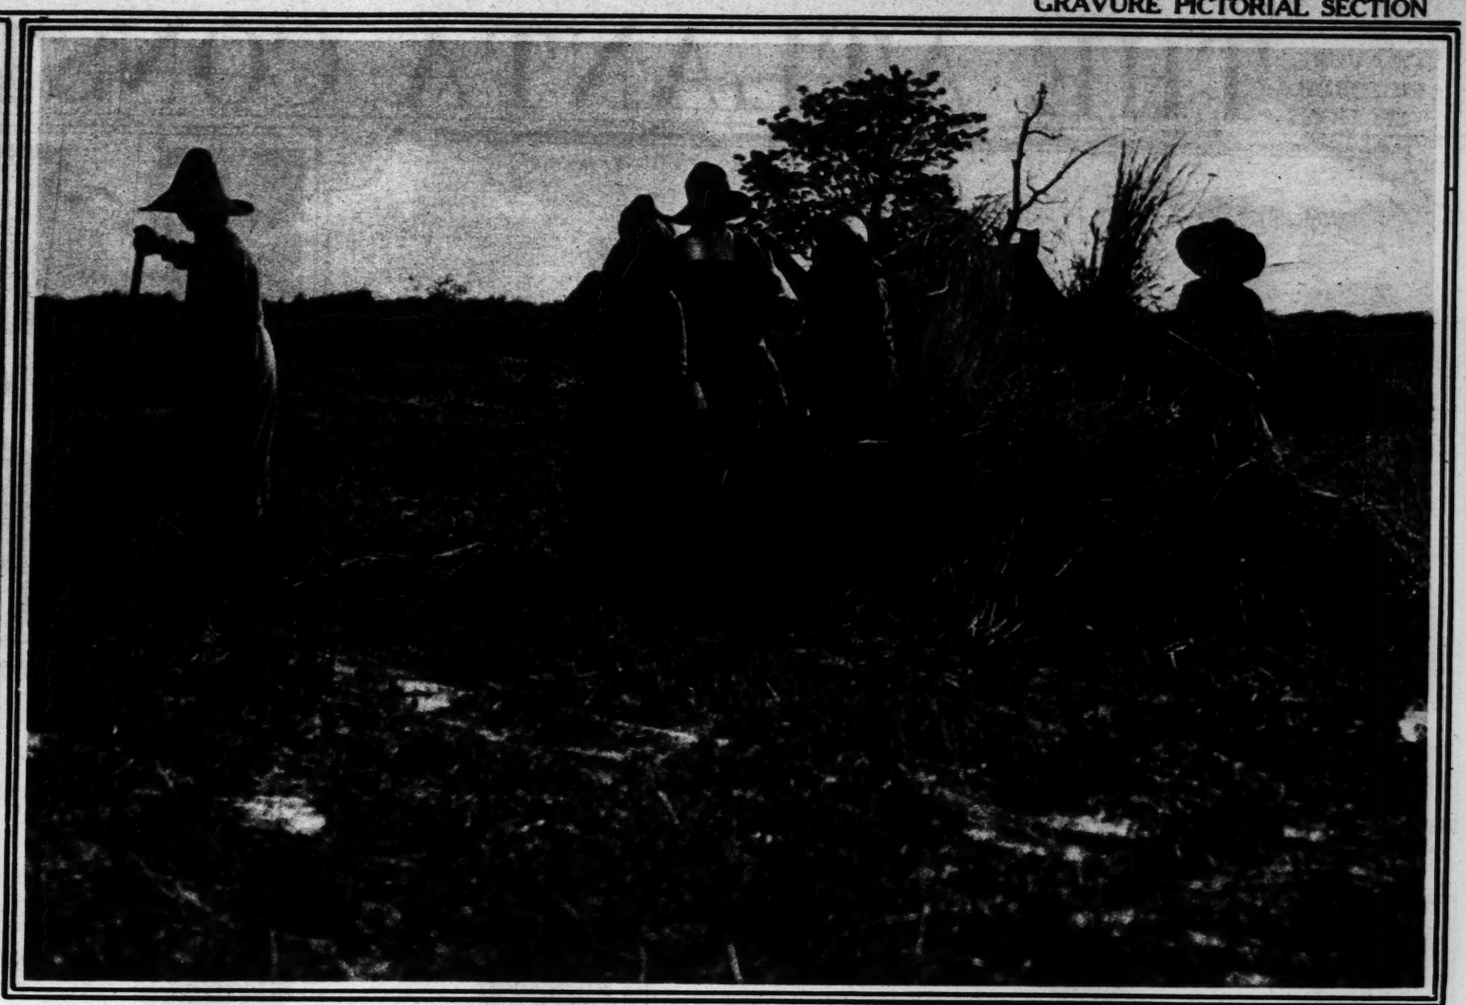

OFFICIALDOM'S BRIDE AND GROOM—Miss Ailsa Mellon, daughter of the secretary of the treasury, and David K. Este Bruce, son of a Maryland senator, were wed recently in Washington, the ceremony being an event of international society. (Herbert)

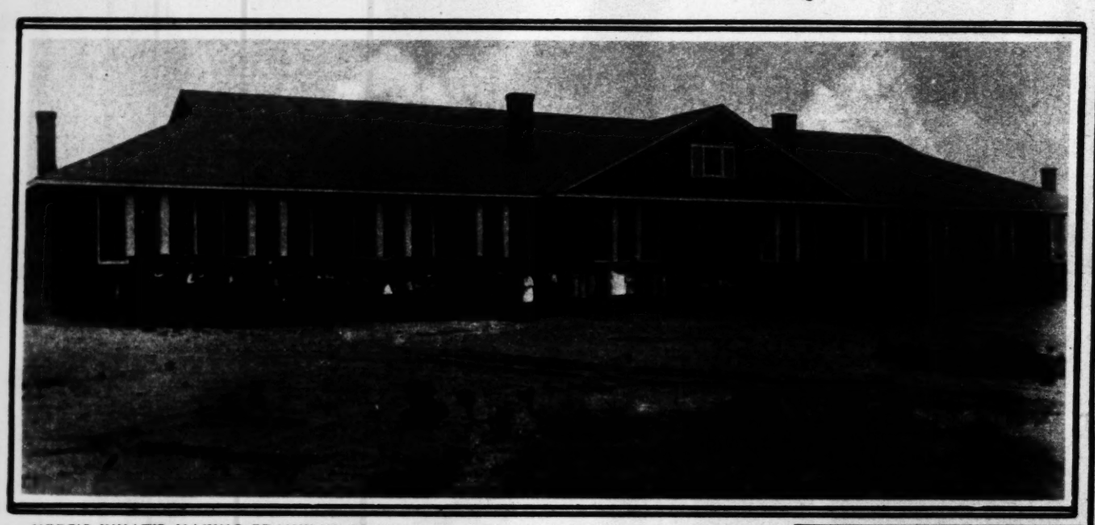

"THE NIGHT WATCH"—considered the greatest masterpiece of Rembrandt, "the prince of darkness," now hangs in the Ryks museum at Amsterdam. This has been selected as one of the world's 52 greatest. Story of this painting appears in today's Constitution Magazine.

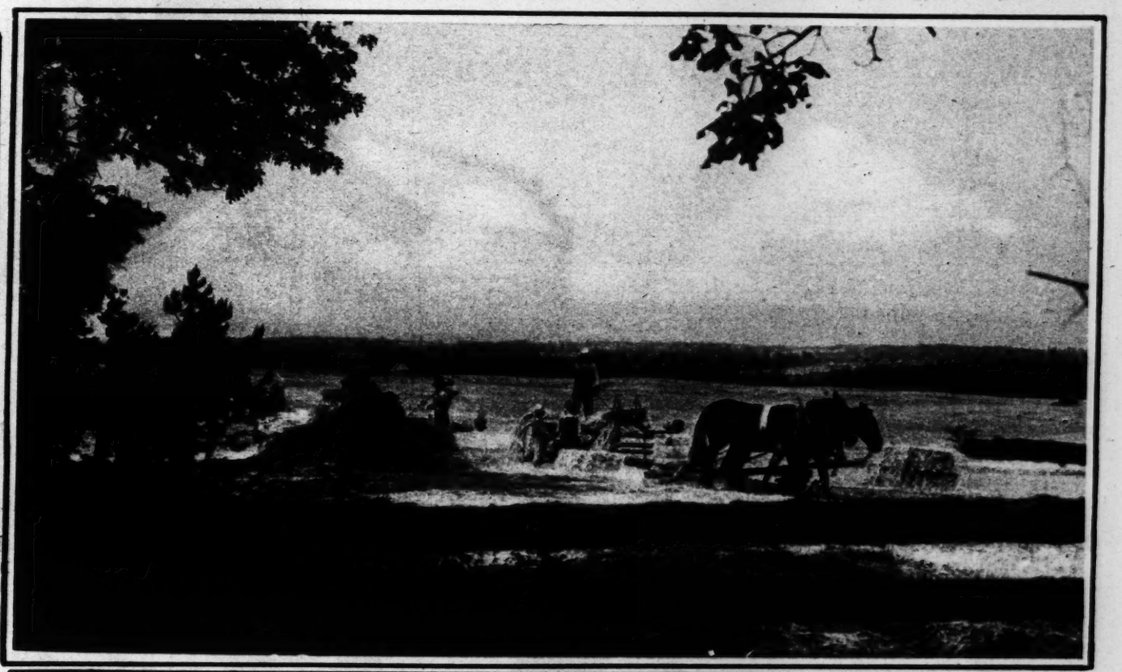

BREADBASKET SECTION OF GEORGIA—Wheat is an important product of north Georgia farms. Here is a prize field owned by J. O. M. Smith, of Commerce.

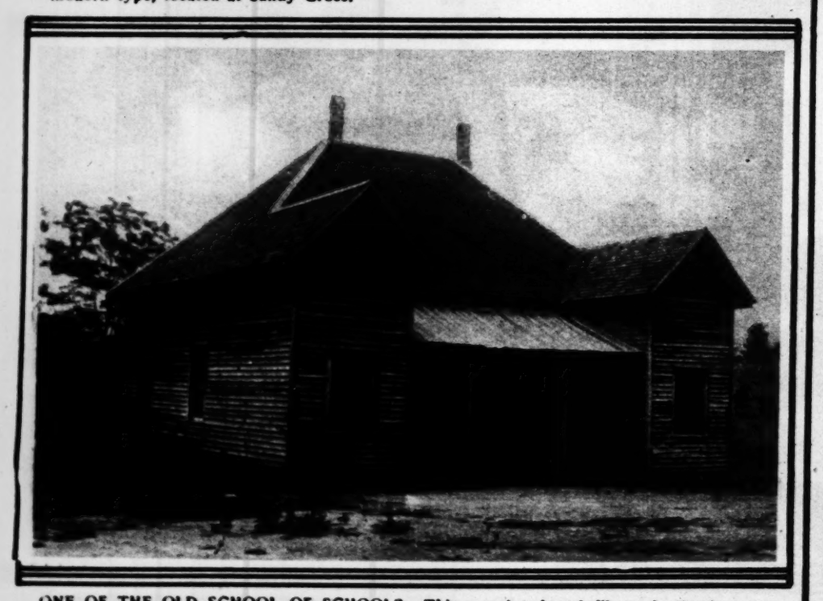

"IN DEAR OLD GEORGIA"—Might be the title of this rustic idyll. Note the quaint costumes worn by the north Georgia harvesters and the simple, rugged beauty of the setting.

HERE'S WHAT'S MAKING FRANKLIN GREAT—A typical rural schoolhouse of the most modern type, located at Sandy Cross.

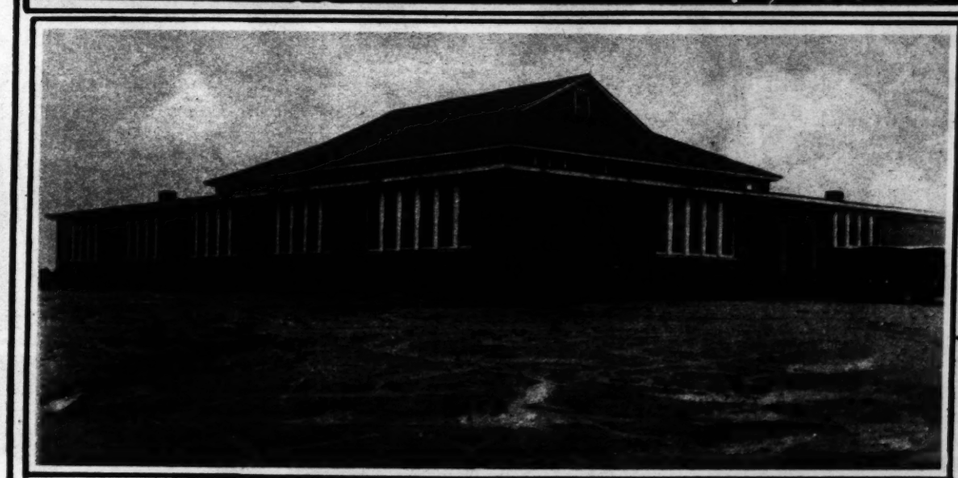

ONE OF THE OLD SCHOOL OF SCHOOLS—This unpainted and flimsy institution of learning once served as the Sandy Cross school in Franklin county.

NATURAL BEAUTY AND MAN-MADE PROGRESS

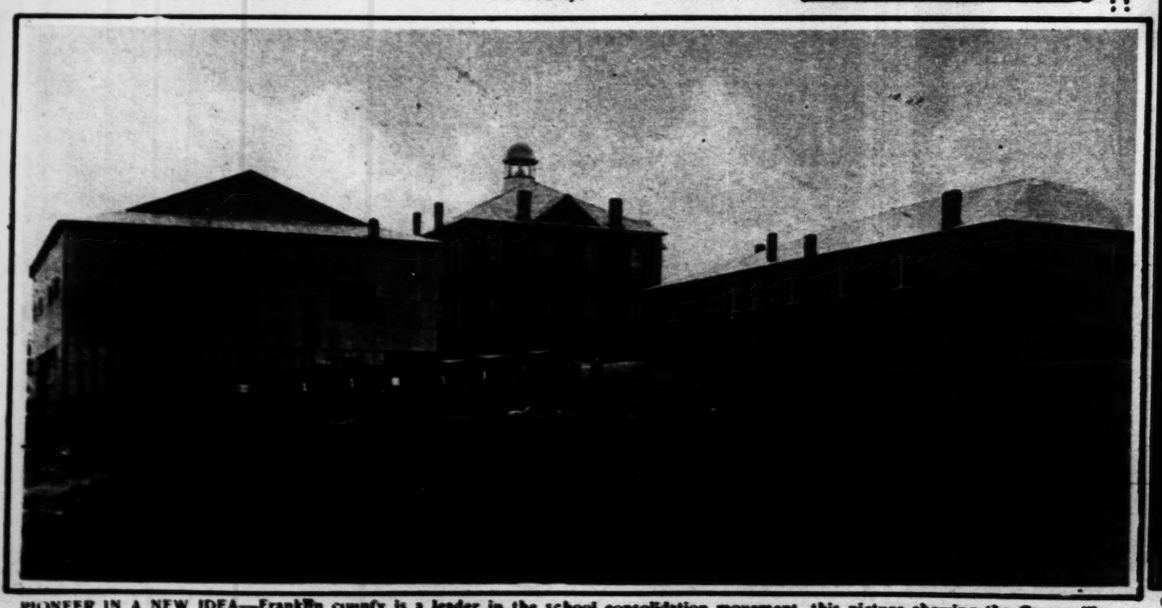

are ideally blended in Franklin and Jackson counties, which lie in the heart of the north Georgia hills. Modern schoolhouses and farm dwellings are scattered throughout the green valleys, where harvests are plentiful; where the soul leaps to the beauty of the pastoral countryside, and where "health and plenty" truly cheer the laborer. The striking illustrations of north Georgia's progress and prosperity were made by Kenneth Rogers.

CLOSE YOUR EYES AND YOU'LL SMELL THE FRAGRANCE OF NEW-MOWN HAY

In this beautiful picture laborers are baling hay in the path of the mowing machine, while in the dim distance the rolling beauties of the section fade away into the north Georgia mountains.

WHERE THE FUTURE CITIZEN IS IN THE MAKING Another of Franklin county's modern schools. This one is located at Reed Mill.

PIONEER IN A NEW IDEA—Franklin county is a leader in the school consolidation movement, this picture showing the Carnesville consolidated school, consisting of a high and grammar school building proper, a gymnasium and a fleet of busses which bring students to the institution.

HOT WEATHER LIFE-SAVERS TO MUSIC-LOVERS—Songbirds and producers of Atlanta's annual season of musical comedy soon will be heard and seen in Atlanta again, an eight weeks' program of popular and tuneful light operas having been arranged for them at the Atlanta theater beginning June 21st. A chorus of local beauties is now hard at work preparing for the season, which is expected to be the most spectacular and successful yet attempted. The Atlanta Light Opera association has announced the 1926 program, which includes such tuneful favorites as "The Merry Widow" and "The Chocolate Soldier."

ANNE YAGO—Contralto, who won wide approval here last year and who will be back for the 1926 musical comedy festival. Since leaving Atlanta last summer, she has sung with marked success with the Philadelphia Civic Opera company.

LOUIS A. TEMPLEMAN—Leading baritone, another stage veteran who has sung in popular roles in American and European cities.

LOUISE HUNTER, "ATLANTA'S SWEET HEART"—The dainty little Metropolitan Opera company star, whom Atlanta has claimed as its very own, will appear again as the leading lady in the light opera company.
(Kesselere-Famous Features)

ARTIIUR F. BERCKLEY—Leading tenor, whose repertoire consists of 116 light opera and 12 grand opera roles.

FRANCIS TYLER—Basso, who has played in popular productions with such celebrities as Marguerite Clark and Mitzi Hajos, boasting many years of successful stage experience.

MARY LEILA PATTERSON—Soprano and Georgia's own entry in the 1926 light opera season here. She was a prize pupil of Estelle Leibling in New York, and is hailed as a future star.

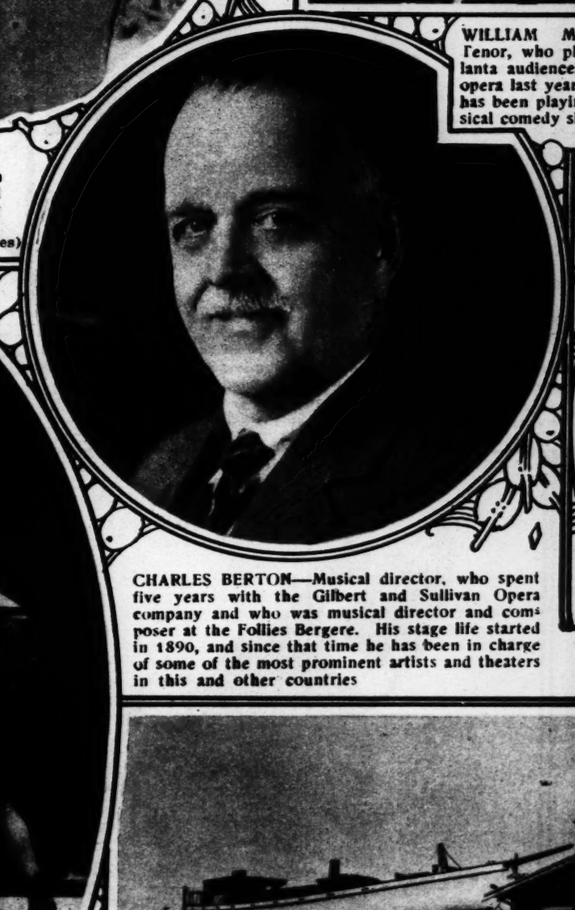

WILLIAM M'LEOD—Tenor, who pleased Atlanta audiences in light opera last year and who has been playing in musical comedy since then

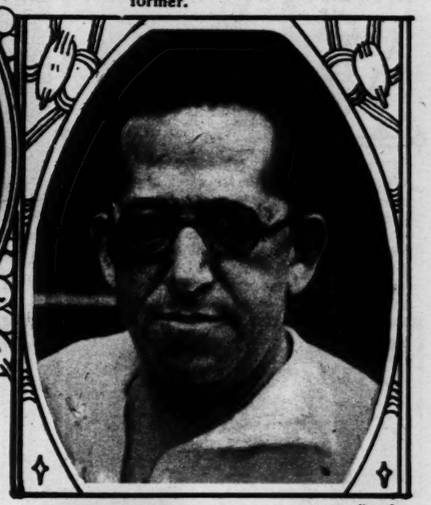

LESLIE M'LEOD—Tenor, well-known in Boston Stock company and a favorite New York radio performer.

LOU POWERS—Comedian premiere, who has become a favorite through his many appearances here, and who will carry the bulk of the comedy in this year's musical comedy season. Mr. Powers has been heard by local audiences in "Sally," "The Greenwich Village Follies," "Good Morning, Dearie" and other stage hits.

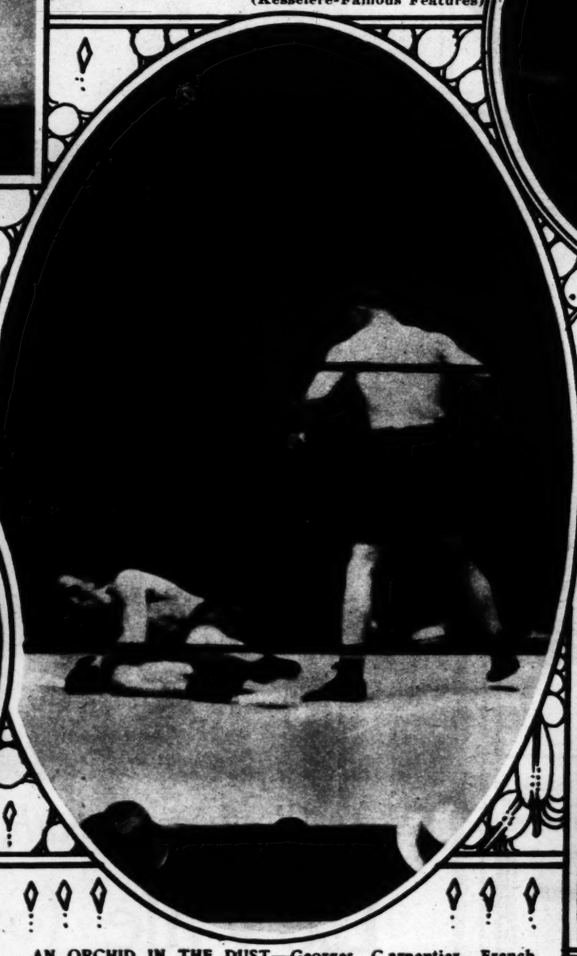

CHARLES BERTON—Musical director, who spent five years with the Gilbert and Sullivan Opera company and who was musical director and composer at the Follies Bergere. His stage life started in 1890, and since that time he has been in charge of some of the most prominent artists and theaters in this and other countries

LEWIS J. MORTON—Stage director, who fo some time past has been in Atlanta arranging for the forthcoming musical comedy season

VARE AND WETTER—That's the probi prediction of Pennsylvania following the overwhelming election of William S. Vare, running on a platform of modification of the Volstead act, to the United States senate. Vare defeated the veteran senator, George Wharton Pepper.
(International)

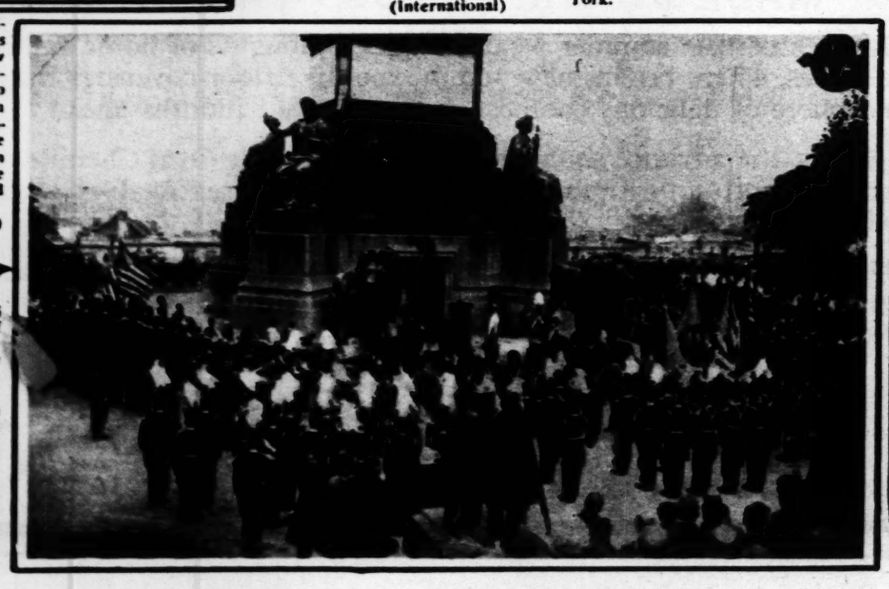

AN ORCHID IN THE DUST—Georges Carpentier, French boxing matinee idol, reclines on the canvas at an exciting moment in his fight to a draw with Eddie Huffman in New York.
(International)

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?—No, the storm didn't blow the boat on shore. It was built in a San Diego backyard, but when completed its owner found he had neglected to arrange to get the craft into the sea. So it will have to be taken to pieces and rebuilt nearer the beach. (International)

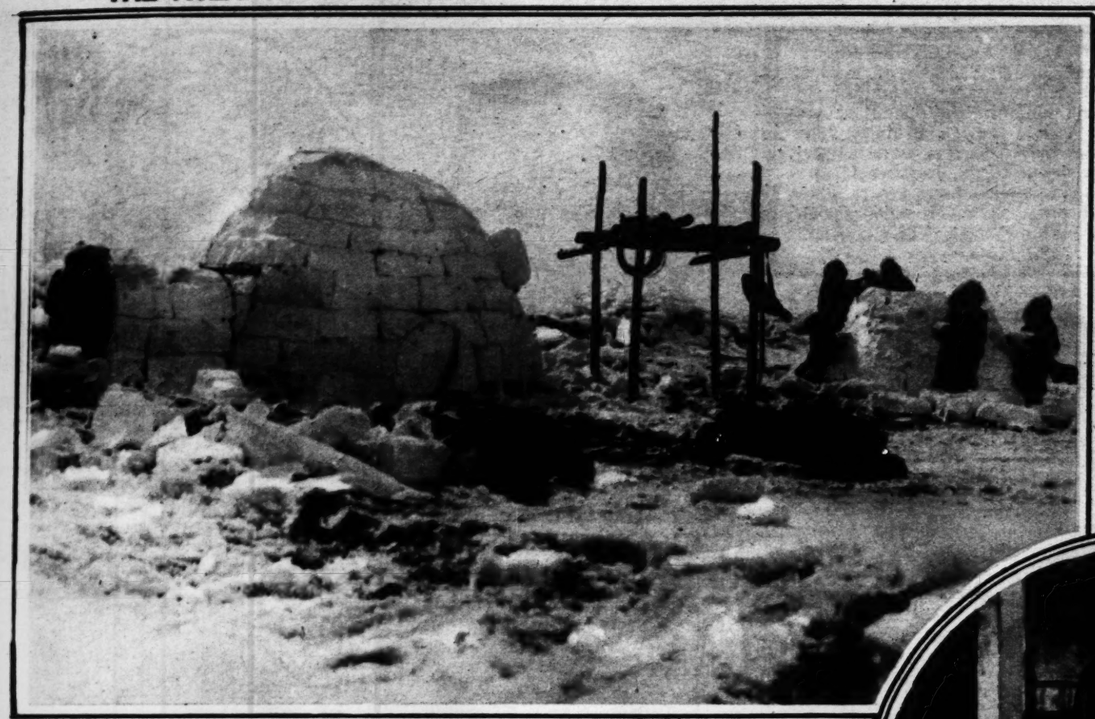

STEPBROTHER AND SISTER TO MARRY—Miss Fannie Bronstein, of New York, with her stepbrother, Harry Mednick, who are to be married in June. Their unusual romance started when the mother of the young man and the father of the young woman married five years ago.
(International)

SEEING AND BEING SEEN—King Albert of Belgium reviewed the Richmond Light Infantry Blues and the Governor's Foot Guards of Connecticut while the American military units were touring Europe on invitation of Marshal Foch. The visitors stare at the foreign monuments, and the populace gazes open-mouth at the gaudy uniforms of the Americans.
(International)

THROUGH THE WICKET—Polo is rapidly growing in popularity in Georgia and the south, army post teams leading the way. Here is a scene from a recent game at Fort McPherson, Atlanta, with P. D. Christian, Jr., making goal. (Francis E. Price.)

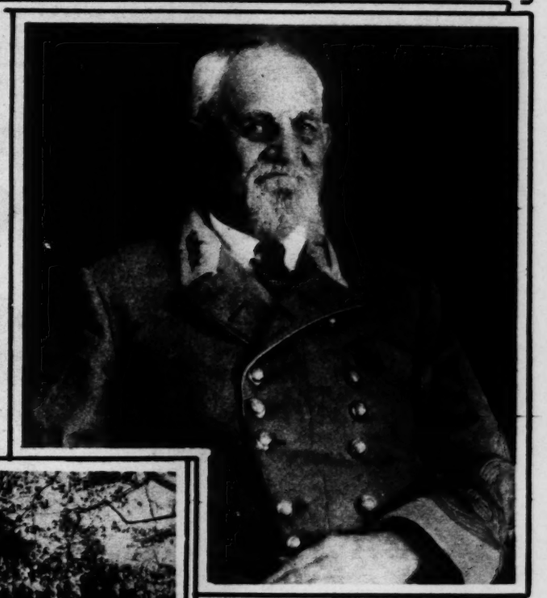

WHERE THE ICE MAN IS HOME-BUILDER—On the left is an igloo, cold-storage home of the Eskimo, and on the right an ice bungalow is being constructed. The wood structure is a "cache," or Klondike pantry, where meat is safe from wolves and polar bears. (Herbert)

CHIEF OF GRAY LEGIONS—General M. D. Vance, of Little Rock, elected commander of United Confederate veterans at the recent Birmingham reunion. (Herbert)

VICTIM OF ONE OF LIFE'S LITTLE JOKES—An interpreter made a mistake in transcribing the testimony of Rafsolo Morollo, and he was sentenced to prison for life on conviction of murdering his young bride. Morollo studied English in prison and finally has succeeded in establishing his innocence. The trial was held in New Jersey. (Herbert)

WHO'S AFRAID—Eileen Conlon, 19 months old, is the world's youngest snake charmer. She lives near the Bronx zoo, and she and the big kingsnake are fast friends. (Herbert)

SPIRIT OF '76 RIDES AGAIN—When the famous battle of White Plains is reenacted in New York. Photo shows a section of colonial troops on the advance, just as the American forces did in Revolutionary days. (International)

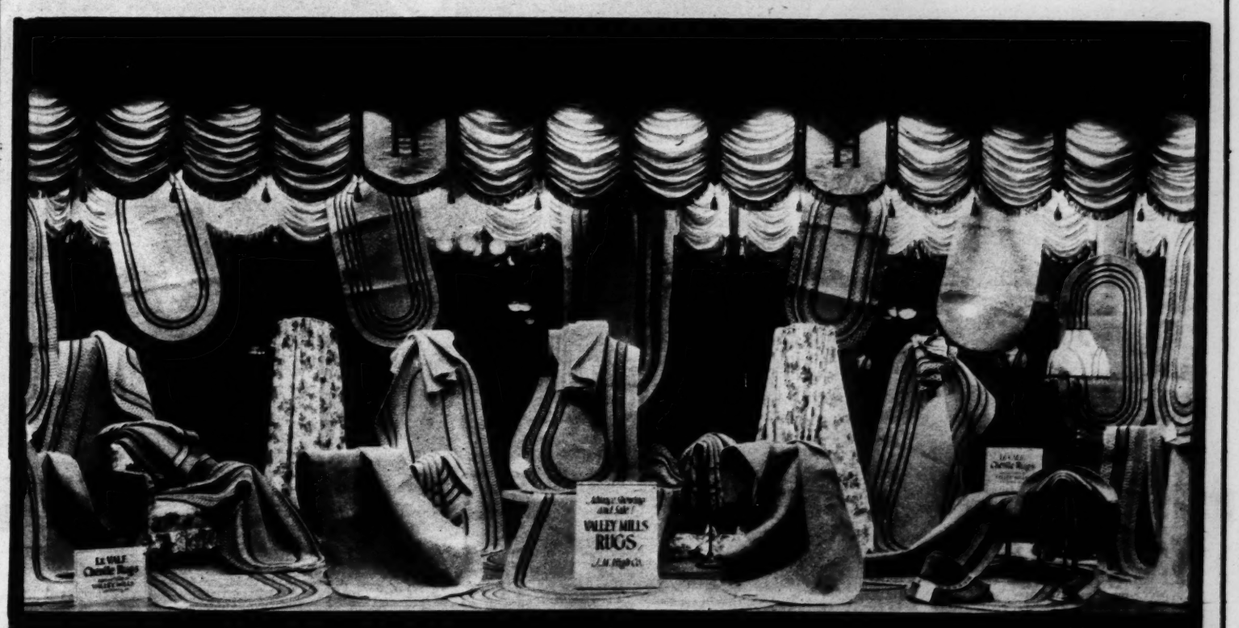

HOPE YOUR 'POSSUMS DIE—Miss Dorothy Wightman, of Washington, with two of her unusual pets perched on her shoulders. (Herbert)

HEY, BUDDIE, GIMME A FISH!—Zip, the baby seal mascot of the Long Beach, Cal., bathing beach, so importunes visitors to the waterside. (International)

LeVale (oval) Chenille Rugs

MADE BY THE FAMOUS VALLEY MILLS

This week of true summer weather brings thoughts of home's most attractive places, where bright, new and inexpensive floor coverings may lend an atmosphere of delicious coolness during the hot months ahead.

At High's, the advance showing and sale of LeVale Oval Chenille rugs gives you the opportunity to purchase a beautiful and seasonable rug at a very moderate price.

A host of new patterns are here for your selection, in various sizes, and of a quality which has brought national renown to the famous Valley Mills, their originator and manufacturer.

The World Walks on LaGrange Made Rugs

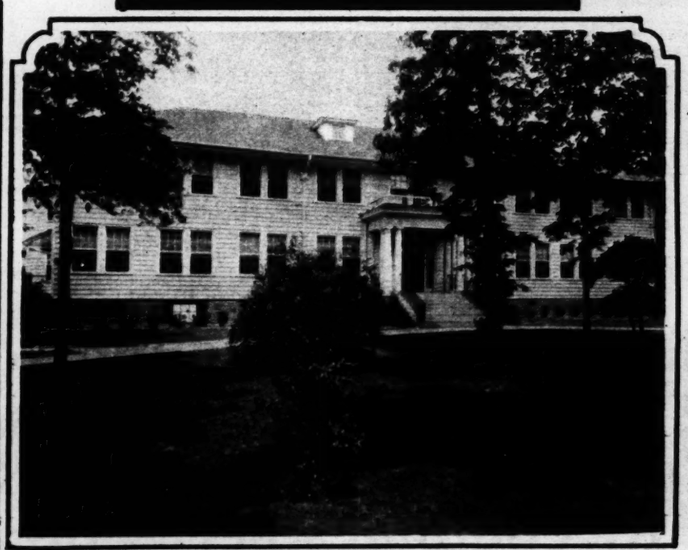

The fame of Georgia-made products is spreading far and wide.

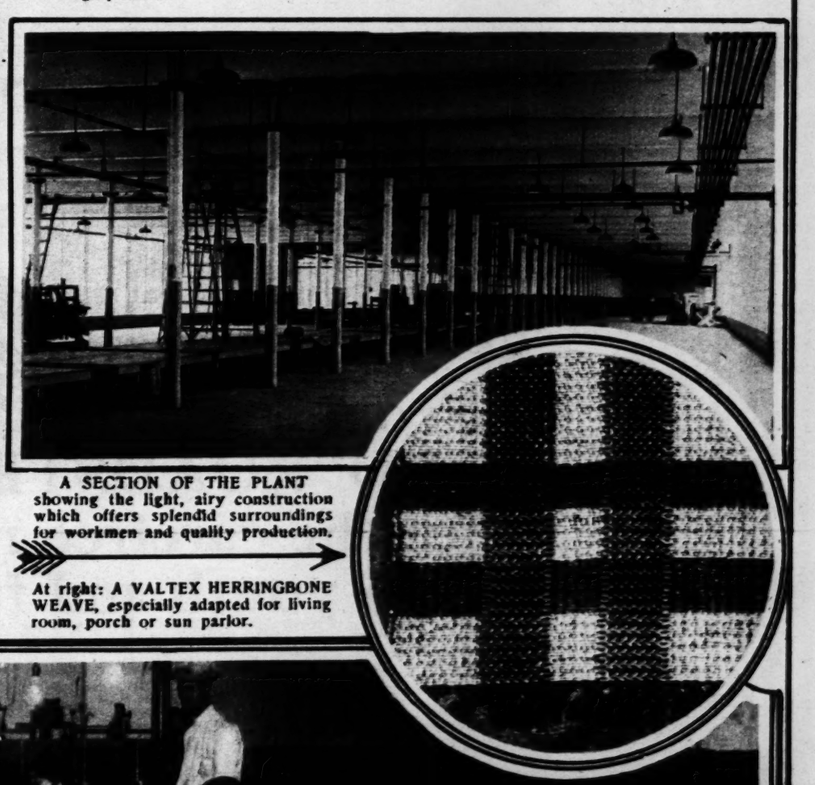

At the annual meeting of the Retail Furniture Dealers' Association held recently in Atlanta a special trip was made over the seventy-mile concrete highway to LaGrange to inspect the new half million dollar addition of the Valley Mills floor covering plant. The quality of the product already being produced in the present mill, as well as the enormous production planned, was a revelation to those attending.

OUTCLASSING THE "OLD SWIMMING HOLE"

Already this season, the beautiful Avondale pool, located in the Avondale Estates has proven one of the many popular sport centers for residents in that locality, as well as a social gathering place for hundreds of bathing enthusiasts. Its delightful and beautiful surroundings offer every inducement to enjoyment and good fellowship.

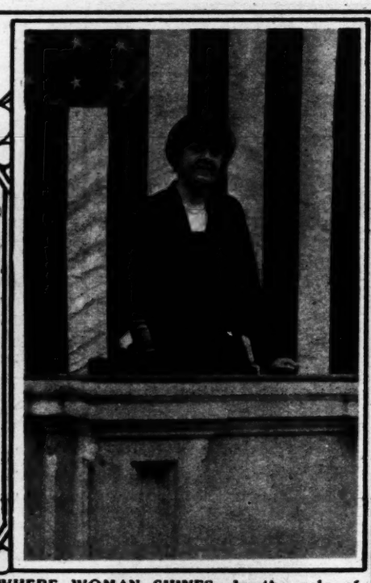

"WHEN THE COWS COME HOME"—At Woodlawn Dairy owned and operated by Grover C. Daniels. This herd of 80 cows contains some of the finest registered animals in Georgia which supply Atlanta's most discriminating families with Grade A raw milk. Mr. Daniels is specializing in the production of milk for infants and to produce milk of this quality has adopted the use of Security Dairy Feed, which is an important factor in producing quality milk.

Her BELOVED THREE

by Elizabeth Jordan

Her Husband, Her Baby, Her Best Friend—These Were Her World, Until One of Them Failed Her

HELEN ROSS walked along the dim hall of her house and crossed the threshold into the equally dim living room, telling herself that she would drop into her pet chair for a restful ten minutes before going upstairs to her room.

She had just come in from her garden, and she was uncomfortably tired but full of a vitalizing sense of well-being. She had rejoiced in the beauty of her garden—not one of her neighbors had a garden to compare with it!—in the glory of a flaming sunset, and in the familiar view across fields and meadows to distant mountain ranges. As she had stood gazing at this while the sun dropped behind the hills she was conscious of a poignant swelling and lifting of the heart. Gracefully she told herself that she was a fortunate and happy woman. She had all this to enjoy; and somewhere inside of the charming house before her, which was her home, she would find her Beloved Three—her husband, probably upstairs in his room dressing for dinner; her two-year-old son in his nursery, and her best friend.

She and Anne Ward had been playmates in childhood, and chums and roommates all through their four years at college; yet never since her marriage, till this summer, had Helen succeeded in persuading Anne to visit her new home. Anne had never even seen Junior. Anne, indeed, had never seen John Ross, senior, except on his wedding day. She had approved of him then and told Helen so. But a hundred reasons had interfered with her promised visit. Now, at last, she was here—had been here for a fortnight, and would be here another fortnight. And the visit was being such a success! Anne was her most charming self—she wasn't always that, Helen had to admit; and it was clear that she and John liked each other immensely. Young John, too, seemed to share his father's admiration for his mother's friend. He had a fashion of hovering around the guest and staring at her with a wide-eyed interest which Anne had laughingly admitted made her nervous.

"He seems to be looking through me," she declared. "He makes me think of all the sins of my past."

"He seems to be looking through me," she declared. "He makes me think of all the sins of my past. He's interested in me, but he doesn't really love me. I'm never popular with children," she ended lightly.

Helen knew that this was true. Anne was not popular with children, and not very popular with women. She balanced this by being immensely popular with men—so popular that Helen inwardly marveled over the fact that five years after her graduation Anne was still single. Yes, Anne was here. Moreover, Anne was happy here, in her odd, temperamental fashion.

"I'm always at my best when I'm with you," Anne had told her only last week. "I always have been, since I met you," and Helen knew that this also was true. She was Anne Ward's sole intimate friend, and—as Anne had no family—the only woman Anne loved. That Anne loved her Helen had never doubted any more than she doubted her own love for Anne—though she admitted to herself that the latter was a blind love which closed its eyes to her friend's faults and deliberately magnified her virtues. Helen herself was not an indiscriminate giver of affection. John, Junior and Anne were the three persons in the world she really loved; for, like Anne, she had not other close family ties. It was that fact, perhaps, which had drawn the two girls together. Again Helen experienced the slight swelling and lifting of the heart which came with the thought that the three she loved and who loved her were waiting for her now. Life was good and she was a happy woman! It was a deliberate intention to prolong this mood of well-being, and intense appreciation that drew her to the big chair by the window overlooking the garden. If she bustled about, flashing on lights and rearranging furniture according to her usual habit, one task would lead to another, her mind would fill up with details of Junior's bath and the coming dinner, and she would be hurrying out to the kitchen for a final word with the cook.

Her foot was across the threshold before she discovered that the living room was not empty. Two figures stood before that curtained window, clearly outlined by the lingering sunlight. Helen's lips parted for a word of greeting, but closed before the word was uttered. She stopped and stiffened into rigidity. The two figures, standing with their backs to her, had suddenly merged into one figure; and now she heard the soft cry of passion—and was it triumph—with which Anne lent herself to John Ross' arms and kiss. Yes, it must be partly triumph, for there was a little laugh in it—a very tender little laugh. Helen herself had heard that laugh once or twice during the long years of their friendship, when Anne had coaxed her out of some rare mood of resentment, or criticism.

Her Beloved Three

Helen discovered that she had noiselessly slipped back into the hall, and that she was moving with great precaution toward the stairway. Her heart was pounding violently, and she experienced the absurd fear that those two might hear it. At the top of the staircase she quickened her steps and, hurrying along the upper hall, entered her own room, shutting and locking the door after her with almost frantic haste. Another door communicated with John's room. She closed and locked that, too. Then the sense of urgency left her. No one could reach her now and see her stripped of poise, of dignity, even of decency—for it amounted to that, she dully admitted. Her first feeling of incredible shock, of horror, had given way to blind rage against her friend. She could have strangled Anne. A swift glimpse of herself as she passed a mirror showed her the face of a stranger, distorted and terrible.

She sat down and discovered that she was panting with excitement and fury. So it was this way! All her life she had heard and read of such episodes, had occasionally seen them in her social set; but from the day she had met John she had never experienced one moment of doubt or jealousy of him. From the first it had been as if the two belonged to each other, as if they had always belonged; and both had accepted the condition with a deep and abysmal understanding very different from the tempestuous wooing that saw around. They had been quietly amused by some of this other wooing, but they had lost nothing by their reserve. There had been plenty of fire under their surface calm.

The moments were passing and Helen was pulling herself together. She was a woman of poise, tolerance and experience, and she must act as such. Already her first fierce emotions were given place to self-contempt and chagrin. Desire and optimism grasped their opportunity and whispered their arguments. She was acting like a schoolgirl. Probably, undoubtedly, the whole thing was the merest incident—a passing impulse, already regretted by her husband and her friend—especially by her husband, Helen's loyal heart insisted. As for Anne—something cold and hard was taking the place of her first duty toward Anne—Anne was a born flirt and was merely running true to form. Probably they were both ashamed of themselves by this time.

Helen rose with a deep breath. She had herself in hand again, convinced that her reasoning was correct. She would take a bath and dress for dinner, but first she would unlock those two absurdly locked doors. What a fool she had been! John would be upstairs to dress in a few minutes and would wander in and out of her room in various stages of his toilet, sometimes for assistance, sometimes to tell her an incident of the day, as was his comfortable habit.

But John did not come up to dress. Helen, whose reason was again firmly seated on its throne, was almost dressed herself before the explanation struck her. Odd she had not thought of it before. She stopped and stared into the mirror she was facing, checking her hand on its way to her hair. John had not come up to dress because John was already dressed for the evening. He must have come early, dressed in a rush, and hurried down to the living room. Why? Because Anne, also dressed for the evening, would be waiting for him there and the two would be sure of an undisturbed forty minutes before Helen herself came down. No doubt they had seen her in the garden and had expected her to work there till the last possible moment, as she had a way of doing. And Anne was dressed for the evening! Helen recalled now a detail of the picture of those intertwined figures which she had taken in without realizing it and which returned to her with extraordinary vividness—the detail of Anne's bare shoulders, and of Anne's bare arms, clasped around John's neck.

Helen slowly put into her hair the ornament she held, taking in without consciousness the vision of her suddenly whitening face confronting her in the mirror. She finished dressing, her fingers steady, her mind busy. It had been a prearranged affair then, that meeting—or, if not prearranged, at least tacitly understood. For now she remembered that last night and the night before both John and Anne had been in the living room when she got downstairs. She hadn't thought anything about it, for she had worked late in the garden and had dressed in a rush. Probably the first encounter had been accidental. . . . Her thoughts scurried about like wild things in a trap, seeking their way out of the only possible conclusion.

When she was ready for dinner she sat down again and looked the situation straight in the face. She was cool now and surprisingly detached. She had a sense of mental and physical numbness, but she realized the importance of coming to some definite decision—of laying out a course of action, of keeping to it. Obviously the first thing to do was to discover what the exact condition was. Her new theory that it was a matter of at least several days' standing might be as erroneous as her first conviction that she had seen the beginning of it. She would go down to dinner, meet the two with perfect naturalness—and watch them! Now that her eyes were open, they would see clearly. The pair could not deceive her. At the reflection an intolerable pang of grief and bitterness shook her. That she should have to think of them thus, as conspiring against her!

She had no doubt of her ability to play her role of normal wife and hostess. Her soul was up in arms to fight this invasion of her home and happiness—if it proved an invasion, and if a fight seemed needed. But she might be exaggerating it all. Such incidents so often meant nothing serious. With any other man it might be a mere idle flirtation—with John could it be that? If it could she had never known John—and again that pang of loss and bitterness shook her soul.

She entered the living room with her usual serene smile and cheerful greeting, to find Anne seated in the big easy chair near the garden window and John standing near her, his arm on the mantel, looking down at her.

"Am I late? Sorry! But you're both such early birds," Helen said. It might be well, perhaps, to let them realize that she had noticed that.

"We haven't a garden to work in, or babies to put to bed," Anne said. She spoke as usual, indolently, and with casual eyes on her friend's face, but John did not look up. He stared out of the window, his face flushed, his manner slightly self-conscious.

"The only time I realize that John's a mere man, after all, is when meals are a few minutes late," Helen laughed. "Go on, dear, take Anne in, and we'll feed you."

John smiled, rather stiffly, still not meeting his wife's eyes. John was not a good dissembler. At the table he brightened, as if in support of Helen's diagnosis of his need of food, and exerted himself to talk. Helen supported him, and Anne let them take on the conversational burden. She herself said almost nothing, but listened and ate abstractedly, a little smile on her lips, an odd gleam in her brown eyes. Helen looked at the smile and gleam and her heart caught. Thus Anne usually smiled and gleamed at the beginning of a new affair. Helen had seen the look often, around her lips and in her eyes. Anne had indulged in many of these affairs. Helen heard her own voice harden suddenly as she talked. John must have noticed the hardening, for he shot a keen look at her. After dinner, thank heaven, they were going to an open air concert. That would give her time to think. An evening at home would have been unendurable.

At the concert Helen put John between her friend and herself; and for the rest of the evening, though his shoulder and arm touched hers, she was alone, and she knew it.

Perhaps the music threw Anne and John off their guard. Certainly both ceased to be conscious of her. John, who loved music and at certain favorite passages always turned to Helen to be sure that she was swept by them as he himself was, had turned to Anne for that assurance and received it. Anne loved music and understood it, and this music, by a visiting orchestra from a big city, was surprisingly good. Anne had the effect of being in a blissful, waking dream. The little smile still lingered on her lips. The elfish gleam in her dark eyes had given place to the soft brilliance seen in the eyes of a happy child.

Helen Ross went to her room that night accepting the seriousness of the situation and the fight that must be made. Anne was in love again, or imagined she was. Ross was intrigued, fascinated, frightened, yet responsive, and, to an amazing degree, reckless. It was the last quality that frightened his wife. How much this episode meant to him she did not know. He was not an easy person to read. But he had the breathless, excited air of the steady man suddenly confronted by danger and thrilling to it. That being so, the fight was on. Anne's passion might burn for a week, or a month, or a year. Whatever its duration, it would blaze fiercely at first—and then die. John's—might be different. To Helen, Anne simply did not count. She was no longer a rival Helen feared and hated. She was no longer the friend Helen loved. She hardly seemed to be a woman at all. She had become merely a menace to John Ross—a deadly thing to be removed from his path lest it destroy him. The method of removal was all Helen thought of that night. A foggy dawn laid wet fingers on her window panes while she still considered it.

The next morning, at the breakfast table, she made a casual suggestion. "It's an ideal fishing day," she told her husband. "Why don't you and Anne take a lunch with you and go up to Rushing brook and catch some trout? I've got to go to town and spend the morning in a dentist's chair."

John turned a radiant face to their guest. For the instant he was wholly off his guard. If his wife had suspected nothing up till that instant she would have read the truth in the look he gave her friend.

"That's a great idea," he said boyishly. "Let's go!"

But Anne hung back.

"I'm no good at fishing," she confessed. "I hate to see the worms. Besides, I haven't clothes or an outfit."

"Then bring a book and read while I fish," John urged. Helen said nothing. John, she knew, would do the rest. "We'll have luncheon together," he added, "and believe me, Helen puts up a good one. You might give us a bottle of that old claret of father's," he told his wife.

It was settled, and Helen contentedly watched them go off. Anne, as she had warned her host, was dressed most unsuitably in a light tailor-made gown, with low shoes and silk stockings. Anne, emphatically was not an outdoor woman. Helen knew how those clothes would look when Anne came home. She also knew how Anne would feel, and she had more than a suspicion of what her husband's reaction would be as the hours passed. In the open John was merciless. He expected a woman to be as good a sportsman as himself and to "rough it" as gamely. Helen was that sort. Indeed John, in his rare experiences with women, had known no other sort.

Helen's experience in the dentist's chair was not agreeable, but she hardly felt the probe and drill. She lunched at her club, did some shopping in the afternoon, and reached home with only enough margin of time to look in on Junior for half an hour before she dressed. She was not surprised to hear John moving about his room when she returned to her own and before she had been there five minutes the connecting door was flung open and her husband strode in, wearing between his eyes the deep groove of his depressed moods. His face was shaved on one side and lather covered on the other, but his errand was so urgent that he ignored this detail.

"Have you got any Jamaica ginger or anything of that sort?" he asked Helen.

"Of course. Are you ill?"

"Certainly not. It's for Anne—Miss Ward. Her feet got wet, naturally, and the bottom of her skirt, too, and she thinks she's got a chill."

"I'll mix a dose for her," Helen promised.

As if the expression of this need had removed his sense of urgency John sat down astride a chair, a damp towel in his hands, and, resting his arms on the back of the chair, gloomily surveyed his wife.

"She seems half dead," he went on, in tones partly puzzled, partly irritated. "She evidently isn't used to fishing. In fact, she said she'd never gone fishing before—and that she'd never go again," he added ruefully. "I'm afraid I was rather hard on her, but of course I didn't realize how soft she was. Better send her dinner upstairs and let her rest," he ended urgently. Helen's lips twitched. It was so obvious that he wished to avoid an immediate encounter with his exhausted companion.

"If she wants to rest she can, of course," Helen casually remarked. "I'll go and see."

Anne did want to rest. She was huddled in an easy chair, half undressed, and looking very much as if she had been dipped into a dirty pool and hung up in the rain to dry.

"Good heavens, you must get off those wet things and get into bed," Helen exclaimed with real contrition. "Meantime, drink this."

Anne extended a vague hand. She seemed almost too tired to raise it, and her teeth chattered against the rim of the glass as she drank.

"That man must have walked me eight miles," she contributed in a flat tone utterly unlike her usual crisp accents, "not to speak of dropping me into the stream a few times when he was supposed to be helping me over stepping stones and logs."

"He's used to women who are used to fishing," Helen explained as she took off the wet garments, found a night-gown and dispassionately helped Anne into bed. "Keep quiet now, and perhaps you can drop off for half an hour before dinner."

"I've 'dropped off' enough times today to have formed the habit," Anne admitted, slightly cheered by her present warmth and comfort.

"I'll send your dinner up at seven.

Ed Wynn's Question Box :: :: —BY— ED WYNN

Dear Mr. Wynn:—In the government income tax notice, mention is always made of "A Full Return." What do you think that means? Sincerely—D. LINQUENT.

Answer:—To me "A Full Return" always means when a man comes back home drunk.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—Will you please settle a dispute between my wife and me? My wife has a brother who always goes to other people's houses just so he can get drinks of whisky for nothing. I claim a fellow who does a thing like that is a "sponge." My wife says he is not a "sponge." Who is right? Yours truly—A. GNOG.

Answer:—Your wife is right. Her brother fills up on whisky while a "sponge" generally fills up on water.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a boy 15 years of age. I applied for a job in a grocery store, and when the grocer asked me how many ounces make a pound, I said 16 ounces. He wouldn't give me the job. I wonder why? Truly yours—D. LIVERYBOYE.

Answer:—The next time you ask for a position in a grocery store, if the grocer asks you how many ounces make a pound, just say 14 ounces, and you'll get the job.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I have heard several authors of books referred to as "chemists." I know some authors have different degrees conferred on them, but never "chemist." Can you tell me what makes an author a "chemist"? Truly yours—I. REED ALOTT.

Answer:—An author is called a "chemist" when his book becomes a drug on the market.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—My sweetheart and I are going on a hike next Sunday. We intend walking cross-country. My girl weighs 197½ pounds. What I want to know is this: When we come to a fence, is it my place to "help" her over the fence? Turly yours—P. DESTRIAN.

Answer:—My dear boy, as your girl weighs nearly 200 pounds, it is your place to "help" the fence.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—A friend of mine says he knows a pair of twin girls that, whatever you tell them, must be told to them together. Why is that? Yours truly—RAY D. OHE.

Answer:—That's because the twins look so much alike, they can't be told apart.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a poor woman and sell doughnuts for a living. I charge 3 cents apiece for the doughnuts. One man says he will buy a dozen doughnuts every day if I will take off 1 cent from the price of each doughnut, for the hole. I can't afford to sell them cheaper than 3 cents and would like him for a customer. What shall I do? Sincerely—OLIVE OYLE.

Answer:—The next time you see him tell him you have decided to give him 1 cent for each hole—when he returns the holes.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—What is meant by "Race Suicide"? Yours truly—POLLY TISHAN.

Answer:—When a man goes to the track, bets on a horse, loses all his money, becomes despondent, and kills himself—that's "Race Suicide."

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—Is Florida a good place for one's nerves? Yours truly—JACK SUNVILLE.

Answer:—I'll say it is. I know a man who went to Florida five years ago and opened a hotel. He used to charge $2.00 a night for a room and bath. Now he has the nerve to charge $10.00 a night for the same room.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—My father is always kicking about people looking through our windows while we eat. Our dining room is in the front room. I washed the windows yesterday. I only washed them on the inside so we could look out, but left them dirty on the outside so the people can't look in. Don't you think I am bright? Yours truly—I. M. KLEVVER.

Answer next week.

Abe Martin :: :: On Gray Hair

THERE is more worryin' o'er gray hair t'day than there is over all other real or imaginary troubles combined," declares Dr. Mopps, ear, eye, beer, nose, an' throat specialist. "Th' prevailin' craze t' look young an' peppy is leavin 'a trail o' scalp inflammation in its wake that's keepin' th' medica fraternity on th' jump Many o' th' modern high powdered hair dyes contain poisons that irritate the scalp an' undermine th' whole human system. Fer many years attempt after attempt has beer made t' dye gray mustaches a soft, natural black, but th' most heroic efforts have failed t' produce anything betterin' a dusty buzzard black. Perhaps th' best results have been obtained by usin' shoe blackin', but th' steam from th' nose soon fades out th' center section, givin' th' job an unfinished appearance. Gun metal mustaches are easily obtainable by usin' emery dust an' light oil, but they are easily detected fer as fer as three blocks, an' are decidedly unnatural lookin' under electric lights, rarely foolin' th' most unobservin'. But th' great damage that's bein' done by hair dyes t'day is amongst th' women, an' t' my notion ther's no more pathetic sight that a seventy-two-year-ole woman wearin' nude hose with her hair dyed a battery cell black. Women should know that gray hair is not a sign of advanced age. Many men an' women are gray before ther twenty-five. Gray hair is hereditary. Neither piety or a fast life bother hair. Ther's few things as strikin' as a purty face set in gray hair, an' few things as awful as an' ole mug crowned with dyed hair. People used t' powder ther hair t' make it gray, an' who'd trust a banker that wuzn' gray around th' temples? Women are successful enough in hidin' ther real dispositions, but they've never yit fooled anybuddy by dyein' ther hair. Jest as a gun metal mustache emphasizes a red nose, so does imitation raven hair, or any o' th' assorted colors, emphasize an' ole face. Ther's so much personal camouflagin' 'mongst men an' women these days, so many veneered wrecks floatin' about, so many reconditioned belles an' beaus on th' market that it's no wonder so many modern weddin's are only rude awakenin's."

A Fascinating New Serial

INSTALLMENT XIX.

Virginia Falls In Love.

THE harrowing experiences of the day were not sufficiently harrowing to dull Mrs. Crayton's interest in the dinner that now appeared. She had changed into dry clothes, and with the warming glow of the wood fire came a sharp reminder that she had not eaten for a very long time.

The waitress drew up a little table before the fireplace and arranged the inviting repast. Mrs. Crayton was amazed.

"Why, how attractive!" she exclaimed. "And how appetizing! I feared the worst in this little out of the way hotel."

"Your chauffeur ordered it just before he went to the hospital," remarked the waitress. Rasher, in ordering the dinner, had recalled the things Virginia had particularly liked on the voyage across, and some of these dishes were now before her. This thoughtfulness was not lost upon her. She was deeply touched that he could have remembered such trivial matters at the time when he was suffering from a bullet wound.

"You see, mother, how you have misjudged our chauffeur. This afternoon you suspected him of running away with our bags and trunks—instead of which he was here arranging for our comfort. You even thought his wound was pretense, and yet at this moment he is in a hospital. By the way," she asked the waitress, "which hospital is he in?"

"There's only one, the St. Elizabeth, three blocks down Main street."

"Ah, yes," murmured Mrs. Crayton absently, as she poured her tea. "We must telephone tomorrow morning and inquire about his condition." She did not observe the sudden flash in Virginia's eyes.

After the dinner things had been removed Mrs. Crayton prepared for bed and Virginia retired to the adjoining room. "I'll close the door, mother; I may read for a little while." When Celeste came in she was in a dressing gown, apparently ready for bed.

"We'll not need you any more tonight, Celeste. Good-night."

For a long time Virginia sat looking out on the deserted street. Then she turned out the light, and after assuring herself that her mother was asleep, she locked the connecting door. A moment later she threw off her dressing gown, revealing herself fully clothed, and noiselessly stepped out into the hallway. She gained the street unobserved.

There were a few dimly lighted windows in the little three story hospital. An automobile stood at the curb. Virginia paused before the door, wavering in her purpose, then hastily entered. The office was empty, but a light burned at a desk. An odor of disinfectants was strongly in evidence.

She rapped timidly, then more loudly, and after a time a woman in nurse's uniform appeared.

"I've come to inquire about the young man who was brought here this evening," said Virginia.

"Just a moment, please." Presently she returned. "The doctor says you may go up. Just follow me, please."

"O, but I didn't expect to see him," exclaimed Virginia. "I just wanted to inquire about him."

The nurse smiled sympathetically.

"He's expecting you. The doctor asked if he felt well enough to see a visitor, so it will be quite all right for you to go up."

Virginia was conscious of a sudden now too late to turn back.

Rasher was lying on a cot in a small panic of embarrassment, but it was room, depressingly bare. He was smoking. The nurse, noting the pleasure that lighted his face, beamed knowingly at them and then rather pointedly withdrew, closing the door softly behind her. The significance of this action drew a flame of color to Virginia's cheeks, which Rather affected not to notice.

"Well, this is worth getting wounded for," he exclaimed, laughing. He made a motion as though to get her a chair, but she pushed him gently back in the pillows.

"You must be quiet," she cautioned, "otherwise you'll make me sorry I came. Remember, you're an invalid." Her voice changed to solicitude. "What does the doctor say? Is it very serious?"

"Not very," smiled Rather. "The knock on the head was the worst, but there's no fracture. As for the bullet wound, it is clean and ought to heal in a short time."

"And how long will you be laid up—here?" She looked around at the bare cheerlessness of the room.

"Perhaps a few days; but you mustn't let that interfere with your plans. I'll try to arrange for a new chauffeur so you can go on tomorrow without loss of time."

She looked at him solemnly for a long time.

"You're an awfully nice boy," she said, irrevelantly. "So you think we ought to run off and leave you?"

"Why not? There's nothing to worry about. I'll be all right in a little while."

"You must think we are a heartless lot," she said bitterly, in a low voice. Her lips quivered, and to hide her emotion she arose quickly and walked to the window. For a moment she gazed unseeingly at the street below—a dreary view for a convalescent—and then her gaze was suddenly concentrated upon two people who passed under a street light. It was the Count talking earnestly to Celeste, the maid. An exclamation of surprise burst from her.

"What is it?" cried Rasher, rising.

"O, nothing," she hastily answered, but so unconvincingly that Rasher, throwing a blanket about him, sprang from his cot and was at her side.

"O, De Barsac and Celeste!" he exclaimed. "They're old friends."

"Old friends? What do you mean? Why he hardly knows her and never saw her until a few days ago! But here, this is terrible! You mustn't leave your bed. I'm ashamed of you!" She led him firmly back to the cot and arranged the covers about him. He closed his eyes so submissively that she was swept by a wave of tenderness. Her hand was pressed softly against his forehead and his sought it and covered it. The ticking of a clock, hitherto unnoticed, now sounded loudly. Slowly her head bowed until her cheek rested upon his hand.

"I'm a perfect idiot to do this," she murmured. "You don't care a bit about me and I shouldn't care about you." She abruptly arose. "I must go now." He still held her hand, and his eyes, serious and unsmiling, were turned upward appealingly. "You mustn't look at me like that," she whispered, barely audible. She closed her eyes tightly. Her breast rose and fell in tumultuous breathing, and then with a half sob she dropped to her knees and buried her face in the pillow.

Twice the nurse had peered through the door, but had gone away. Now there came the sound of several hasty footsteps and a confused murmur of voices. Virginia looked up, alarmed, but with a reskless singing in her heart. Nothing mattered now.

Broadway Banter

—By—
FORNEY WYLY

HERE beginneth the summer edition of "Broadway Banter." This is the time of year when it is quite the thing for theatrical writers to close down their columns and hail the first boat for Europe. I cannot see where I would gain anything in trying to strike this fashionable pose. The only boat which would answer my cry would be the Jersey City ferry, but that vessel, alas, recalls too clearly those carefree pre-Hudson tube days when amidst a congenial crowd of horses and mules you came over to New York from Jersey City. Revues and musical shows are invariably putting on a "summer edition" of something or other from June to September. So throughout the hot weather, "Broadway Banter" will try to adopt the "summer edition" policy of being brighter, shorter and more painless.

* * * *

There are few more irritating people than those of the "I told you so" school. Dislike it as you may, you must admit I have been trying to tell you for months past that Grace Goldsmith and Charlie Cox were eventually going to take themselves seriously and get married. The Sunday papers deluded themselves into believing they were telling you for the first time a few Sundays ago.

Grace, so I hear, is not to have a church wedding. Certainly it would be over-run with matrons-of-honor. The elusive Grace chances to be the last single girl in her crowd. She held out as long as she could but after Sara Schoen gave up the struggle and married it seemed rather pointless to continue the thing alone. Grace's wedding will allow the former Miss Schoen to make her first triumphant return to Atlanta since she annexed the Duggan to her name. I offer the suggestion that Miss Goldsmith allow Mrs. Duggan to wear her own wedding togs in the Goldsmith-Cox affair. Then Atlanta might get over not having seen Sara as a bride. Should Miss Goldsmith go in for attendants at her June home ceremony, her wedding party would, I imagine, be sprinkled with such social celebrities as Alberta Lewis Campbell, Charlotte Meador Fletcher, Nellie Dodd Orme, Babylow Sanders Blakeman and Caroline Shivers Hardwick. This group could, I feel, look as well as it is possible to look under those flower-swamped wedding hats always in evidence in wedding parties.

Among the outstanding hits in "The Garrick Gaieties" is the "Mountain Greenery" song, a number I'm inclined to believe will rival last year's "Manhattan" before it's over. Sterling Holloway and a pretty brunette put over the song in a thoroughly charming manner. The Gaieties this year contain a burlesque of the "the average American musical comedy." They sing a poisonous song about flowers, ending up with the inevitable "American Beauty Rose" number and the chorus prance about in the most atrocious flower-costumes you ever saw. In the same number they use a song about "It may rain when the sun stops shining," and resort to the million worn-out tricks musical comedies are always falling back on.

* * * *

And "Kitty's Kisses" does quite seriously everything the Garrick Gaieties are making fun of. Musical comedies of this sort are bound to come along this time of year. They are plainly designed to delight summer tourists and the funny part of it is they do. For my own part, "Kitty's Kisses" is just another one of those shows. Its music is only passable, and it lyrics are without rhyme or reason. A most personable miss, Dorothy Dilley, of "Music Box" fame, appears as Kitty and manages to rise above it all very nicely. "Kitty's Kisses" is afflicted with a leading man who is convinced he is appearing in grand opera. Such facial contortions and gesticulations have seldom been seen out of the Metropolitan and the Auditorium.

You're none the better or worse after an evening of "Kitty's Kisses."

* * * *

The revival of Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" makes it plainer than ever just where it is modern playwrights go to get their material. For in this brilliant comedy I heard lines which many so-called new plays have been using all winter, as though entirely original with their authors. It is nothing short of remarkable the way Wilde's plays refuse to age. This play is as smart, as scintillating, and as modern as though written yesterday.

* * * *

The same cannot be said of "The Servant in the House." This old play fairly creaks and groans with age, and would do well to have its face lifted. It is acted beautifully by Walter Hampden and unbeautifully by most of the other members of the cast, but at that there is very little about the play to become wrought up about. "The Servant in the House" belongs distinctly to the old school, and may most emphatically be said to have had its day.

And so those of you who have been delighted over the thought that you'd heard the last of "Broadway Banter" are placed in rather an unhappy position. You might be right in your contention that there is a limit to everything. But regardless of that, this column shall continue merrily along struggling to fulfill its mission. If there is anyone who has discovered just what that mission is, let nothing prevent you from enlightening me on this point. I, too, would like so much to know.

—The Story of William H. Turner

Insurance Murders Nearest to Perfect Crime—But Slip Sometimes Foils Cunning

This is the story of the money murderers and their efforts to commit the perfect crime. Most cold-blooded of all slayers, they will kill some chance victim for the purpose of substituting the body as their own, usually mutilating the remains beyond recognition. Thus they hope to profit by the insurance on their own lives, and at the same time relieve themselves of irksome responsibilities and debts, and possibly wives.

A few days ago William H. Turner, a Kentucky mine foreman, was sentenced to life imprisonment for his part in one of these affairs. He was accused of deliberately killing two men in a framed-up mine explosion. His appeal is pending. Joe Jacks, his father-in-law, was sentenced to two years in prison, but won a new trial. Mrs. Turner was arrested and charged with conspiracy to murder, but it is announced she will not be tried.

THERE are murders and murders. Some are crimes of revenge, some of jealousy. Usually they are personal affairs, with the victim intimately involved. Almost always there is justification, at least in the eyes of the killer. But here is a variety of murder, horrible beyond all others—here is murder in the nth degree. It is the murder committed deliberately to profit by insurance.

Quite a number of these crimes have figured in the news. From the very nature of things they have been interesting cases, for they are usually well thought out schemes, executed with fiendishly cold-blooded cleverness. In some instances only a slight slip-up, some one neglected detail, has stood between the murderer and complete success. It is said these insurance murders are the nearest approach we have to the so-called "perfect crime."

Within the last few days the most recent of these cases culminated in Pikeville, Ky., when William H. Turner was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment for the killing of two miners in an explosion last year. Turner was accused with his father-in-law, Joe Jacks, and his brother-in-law, Joe Jacks, Jr., of deliberate murder in connection with an $85,000 insurance swindle.

That the plot was not a complete success was due largely to Turner's loneliness and isolation in his role of a living corpse. Just as in other cases of this sort, though the insurance had been paid on his own life, and many months had passed, the inevitable slip-up came.

Terrific Explosion.

Early in January, 1925, the owners of the Auburn coal mine at McCarr, Ky., decided to open up a new cut in the hope of reaching a fresh rich vein of coal. To do this it was necessary to blast through a hillside. Among those engaged in the project were Bill Turner, lanky mine foreman, and the Jacks.

The work went on for several days. Then, on the afternoon of January 17, a terrific explosion occurred. Two men had clambered down into the cut to attach the electric wires from a battery to the charge of dynamite. The current had been turned on when it was supposed to be off. Whoever had gone into the cut most certainly must have been killed.

Feverishly the miners worked to clear away the debris. While they toiled the report got about that one of the victims was Turner. The Jacks, father and son, were quite sure Bill had gone into the jagged hole in the hillside. A hasty check-up showed that neither Turner nor Henry Wilson was present.

In this region an explosion is by no means unusual. Hardly a family in Pike county that isn't mourning as they are, the tragedies never lose some relative killed in a premature blast or sudden cave-in. But frequent their horror. And in this instance the sight that met the eyes of the rescuers, when they finally reached the spot, was one to make even these hardened miners turn pale and weak.

Mrs. William H. Turner and husband she thought had perished in mine blast.

Instead of bodies they found misshapen masses of torn flesh. One victim was identified quickly as Henry Wilson, because of a crooked foot, but the other was beyond recognition. Poor Bill! The Jacks betrayed some emotion, and said they would take care of Bill's remains.

Double Funeral.

So they did. They packed the body in a coffin and brought it home to Mrs. Turner, mother of five children. And in a day or so there was a double funeral, and the bodies were laid away in the little hillside cemetery at Matewan, W. Va., just over the state line, where so many other victims of mine tragedies had been laid in the past.

Mrs. Turner erected a neat headpiece to her late husband in the cemetery and then moved away with her young ones. It was reported she had received a tidy sum from the insurance company. No one knew just how much.

As a matter of fact, she received $25,000, while Mrs. Hattie Farley, a sister of Turner, received $60,000. Some time before the tragedy Turner had taken out an accident policy for $30,000, naming his sister as beneficiary. The policy provided that the company would pay double in case of an accidental death. With the money Mrs. Farley was able to settle in Miami, Fla., while Mrs. Turner bought herself a comfortable home in Trenton, N. J.

The break came in October, nine months after the explosion. Out of a clear sky the news came that William H. Turner, a man supposedly in his grave, was in custody in New York, charged with one of the most dastardly crimes. He had been in Germany and had written a friend in Pikeville. This letter had set the authorities to working on the case, and Turner was arrested as soon as the liner Resolute reached quarantine.

"Hello, Hat!" Turner greeted Taylor Hatfield, deputy sheriff of Pike, and member of the famous family of feudist Hatfields. "How's everybody back home?"

Turner said he had come back to tell the whole truth about the case. He insisted he had been forced into the plot by the two Jacks, that after the deliberate killing at the mine Jacks, Jr., forced him to go to New York at the point of a gun. He had been given some money and packed aboard a ship. As a further touch, he said they had gotten him drunk and kept him that way.

In the meanwhile Mrs. Turner was being seen at Trenton.

"It can't be my husband," she insisted. "My husband lies in a grave in West Virginia. His body was so torn to pieces in the explosion they wouldn't let me see it. This man must be a fake."

Simple Case.

But she went to New York and she found that Bill Turner wasn't in his grave. When she met her husband face to face, Mrs. Turner fainted and, recovering, moaned:

"O, Bill, why did you do this to me? Why did you do this to our children? We had a happy home, Bill, such a happy home!"

And then they brought Bill Turner back to Pike county. On the way he explained that he had been given a very rough deal by the Jacks. He had been close to starvation in Germany. If he was to be punished, he would see that they got what was coming to them, too.

Turner declared his wife and sister had had nothing whatever to do with the scheme, but there were conflicting reports. It was said that Mrs. Farley, shortly after the insurance companies had paid the awards, had turned over $10,000 to Turner in Florida and that Turner had then gone to see his wife in Trenton. This bit of evidence was elicited from one of the Turner children, according to the police.

In the trial of the mine foreman, the state demanded the extreme penalty, but the jury, probably with the idea of rewarding Turner for his confession incriminating the Jacks, gave him life imprisonment.

Frederick G. Beale, who turned grave robber for insurance.

The insurance companies are still fighting to get their money back.

If this case was complex and involved, the Schwartz case in California last year was simplicity itself. From beginning to end it was as compact as a one-act play. It moved swiftly for ten days or so and then ended in a climax which cleared up everything. There were no loose ends.

Found- Last Of the Artist's

Lucky Chance That Brought the Viennese Artist a Lovely Working Girl Who Proved Just What He Wanted

AS THE noon whistles blew just the other day Louise Clerc, one of America's million working girls, hurried out from a busy dress designing shop to join the midday throng in one of New York's crowded cafeterias.

Pretty Louise paused a moment to count the coins in her purse before stepping in line at the crowded counter. The tomato salads and cucumber relishes were iced and luscious but Louise took her usual sandwich and soda. These rations she could consume in fifteen minutes and that left forty-five minutes for window shopping on Fifth avenue.

As Louise perched herself on a stool and sucked her soda through a straw a dozen young men who ate in that particular beanery every noon for the express purpose of refreshing their orbs with a view of comely Miss Clerc looked hopeful. But the little dress designer was as prudent as she was pretty.

Just then her next neighbor at the oilcloth covered board, a young man who might have been a bookkeeper, spread out his newspaper over his corned beef and poached egg. One page of the daily was flapping over Miss Clerc's rye bread repast and fastidious Louise was about to protest when her azure blue eyes sighted a story screaming forth in headlines.

Professor Ernst Linnenkamp, a Viennese artist, was in New York to end his quest for the fifteenth young woman needed to complete his galaxy of American beauties. At that moment, it related, the great artist was holding his beauty court in the Hotel Astor. Here hundreds of girls were being turned away as unfit every day.

Louise dropped the sandwich from her fingers and leaned closer. She wanted to get all the "dope" on this new kind of beauty contest that was so hard to win. The article further reported that the foreign gentleman had been two and a half years in the United States picking fourteen of the famous beauties and now but one remained to be chosen.

Louise's eyes popped out still further as she read how society's loveliest debs, the stage's most noted beauties and all the bathing beach paragons had failed to supply the fifteenth paragon that Dr. Linnenkamp was hunting for.

Necks were too thick, the eyebrows grew too bushy and the feet weren't triple A, while some of the ankles looked like grapefruit. In fact, Dr. Linnenkamp was almost in despair in this search for supreme pulchritude. Somewhere in New York he hoped to find the girl. But where?

And at that very moment he was waiting in his luxurious suite at the Hotel Astor to name the fifteenth if she should appear. But the famous Viennese was beginning to doubt the existence of another woman worthy to stand alongside the fourteen already chosen.

Little Miss Clerc jumped up without eating more lunch, paid the cashier five nickels and tripped out. She had intended to go window gazing up the avenue, but now she strolled along in a daze without seeing a thing but the sky above the skyscrapers.

In her blonde head was revolving a vision of the good fortune that would come to the fifteenth beauty. In one day the whole country would know about her fame and everybody would be looking at her picture on the front pages. The mail would bring movie contracts and mash notes and cosmetic firms would make high bids for her signature.

When Louise had walked ten blocks deep in this pretty dream she was rudely jostled by an arm-in-arm trio of shop girls who pushed her toward the curb with a sharp thrust of the elbow. This caused her visions to evaporate, and she suddenly remembered that a dress designer's life is enough to make anybody sore on the world.

At this moment her eyes turned toward a shop window. She felt a tear in her eye when—suddenly—she caught a good view of her full length reflection. For a minute she couldn't believe that the seductive person was really herself. It certainly was a comely figure. The legs seemed perfect. Her profile was more than pretty good and the whole ensemble might be called—beautiful.

Then followed swift recollections. In all her nineteen years she had never had any reason to dread the rise in the fashionable skirt length. She couldn't help knowing that what her short skirts revealed often drew envious or admiring glances.

And at the Art Students' league where she studied somebody was always suggesting that she drape herself for the class model. At least a hundred people had suggested that she try for the musical comedy stage. Her ankles, she knew, could be spanned by a thumb and little finger and her pink knees were more like Eve's than any front row girl's. Maybe she was that fifteenth beauty—who could tell?

Forty-five minutes before the gong struck in the dress manufactory where Louise worked, she took one more look at her reflection and headed through the crowds toward the Hotel Astor. If the artist wasn't in, she she never, never would have the nerve to present herself again as one of the world's greatest beauties.

Headlong she dodged through the traffic. She could scarcely hear the rumble and roar. She pushed people aside li to get gone.

aside like sacks of salt because she had to get there before her courage was gone.

Biting her lips to keep from panting and breathing hard, Louise rapped on Artist Linnenkamp's door. It was a secretary that answered. As Louise was invited in she was sure that the thumping in her chest was louder than her voice.

She was told to wait. Sitting down

Miss Harriet Camac, the New York society girl whose classic profile greatly appealed to Mr. Linnenkamp and whom he gave a place among the fifteen beauties.

Louise's cold fingers dragged a powder puff from her waist. A mirror told her that at least her face was clean if not beautiful.

Just as she was on the verge of St. Vitus the door swung back and the secretary was bowing and motioning her in. Louise swallowed a big lump and threw back her shoulders to brace herself for the biggest stage entrance of her life. Just as she was stepping over the threshold she wondered if her stockings could be twisted around her ankles or if there could be a smudge on her neck.

All at once Louise was in the middle of the big floor space. Her black satin spring coat was wrapped closely about her shapely figure. At the neck the black and white collar was draped in graceful folds and a silver fox fur fell jauntily from one shoulder. Her little black Milan straw hat was pushed back far enough to exhibit her g listening gold hair.

She couldn't see the artist and the secretary had disappeared. She began to have the awful nightmare that even if her figure was flat and slim as any on Broadway there were thousands of such girls. Her transparent complexion might be taken for clever make-up. Even her beautiful hair that fell to her knees might be termed an encumbrance.

Then Louise's gaze fell on Professor Linnenkamp. He was looking out of the window and finally he turned slowly around. He seemed startled. His jaw dropped and his fingers were passing swiftly through his hair. At last he came running toward Louise Clerc, the little dress designer, and literally fell on her neck.

"You are as beautiful as my wife and I never told any woman that before," Professor Linnenkamp almost shouted. Then Louise heard faintly words poured forth as in a delirium.

But she felt only chills and goose pimples for she wanted to know in plain words instead of frothing superlatives what the result was. It seemed that the artist was never going to stop raving over her pulchritude. She heard that her skin was alabaster, that her lips were crimson scallops and that her ears were delicate shells fashioned by Benvenuto Cellini.

"Am I the fifteenth beauty?" Louise asked hysterically as her face faded to chalk whiteness and she felt the need of smelling salts and an ambulance.

The artist stared and then began to laugh. Louise felt a deluge of tears coming on. Had this man turned into a brute? Probably that was the way he took to cure disappointments. He praised you and then showed you the door.

Now he was piloting her to a divan. Louise wanted to say "Quick" because the room was sailing around and any moment her heart might stop beating and she would never know. As she sat down the faintness increased and in a terrible fog, Louise half grasped the fact that she was the greatest beauty in the United States.

But the chimes of a clock somewhere in the recess of the studio brought the fifteenth beauty to life with a jolt. Her forty-five minutes were up and being the greatest beauty on earth wouldn't save her from a good bawling out from the boss.

So Louise Clerc, now the fifteenth beauty in the United States, headed for her job. Sixty minutes before she had been just one of New York's women wage earners. She was just like all the others who worked eight hours a day with only the noon hour to peek in the shops where they sold finery that her poor pay envelope could seldom reach.

Now there isn't a Park avenue society girl that wuoldn't give ten years of her life to be Louise Clerc, the little dress designer, who, Professor Linnenkamp says, shares with his wife the honor of having the most nearly perfect figure and face of any woman.

Miss Louise Clerc, the humble dress designer whose face and figure share with those of his wife, Mr. Linnenkamp declares, the distinction of being more nearly perfect than any other woman's.

A Swiss publishing firm sent him on this quest of beauty at the time little Louise was a sixteen-year-old student at Washington Irving high school.

Since that time the professor has had the awful task of turning down hundreds of thousands of aspirants to the title. Sometimes for fear of being besieged by applicants he has traveled incognito.

To his astonishment he learned that many American society girls like a little publicity. At first he approached social gatherings with diffidence. He thought that presenting a beauty crown to a fashionable deputante would be a delicate matter.

Instead, he learned that it was possible to became a very rich man if he wanted to open his ears to some good-sized bribes that were hinted at. However, the professor believes that these ladies represent the synthetic society of the United States and not the four-generation, Mayflower aristocracy.

Some of the fifteen chosen by the professor have been working girls like his last long sought one, Louise Clerc. But the majority were chosen from fashionable circles in New York and other cities.

Her Beloved Three

Perhaps you'll feel like dressing and coming down about nine."

But Anne didn't. She stayed in bed, while at the table, and later in the living room, Ross monologued about the day. He admitted that he hadn't caught a trout.

"And the brook was full of 'em," he said regretfully. "It was just the right kind of a day, too, as you said. But Anne frightened 'em all away by talking. She simply couldn't seem to remember that one has to be quiet. However," he added tolerantly, cheered by his dinner and his wife's serene companionship, "one can't expect everything. I suppose Anne's the home type of woman—the ministering angel, and all that," he ended thoughtfully.

It was an unfortunate remark, for it recurred to his wife's memory the next morning when John admitted that one of his sick headaches was coming on.

"I guess it was the hot sun yesterday, and the nervous strain," he privately confessed to Helen. "Anyway, it's going to be a regular rip snorter. I'll have to stay home and be coddled."

"Then Anne will have to coddle you, poor boy," Helen told him in regretful tones. "I've got to go back to the dentist today. He put in a big wedge yesterday morning, and twenty-four hours is its limit. Besides, there's more work to do, and I've two dress fittings in the afternoon. However, Anne will look after you. It will give her a chance to show you how perfect a ministering angel she is," Helen could not help adding.

John grinned, looking self-conscious but resigned, and his wife's conscience assailed her. John's headaches were very real things—agonizing things, as the day wore on, and already his eyes showed that this was to be one of his worst attacks. At such times Helen had always established him on the big divan in the living room with herself and a great bowl of cracked ice and soft towels beside him. Cold water compresses were all that helped, and the ice had to be constantly changed. Something told Helen that it would not be constantly changed today, and again conscience pricked her. But she gave John a maternal kiss and left the house immediately after breakfast, resolutely closing his eyes to the look of strain her husband's face and eyes were taking on. Anne, having breakfasted in her room, was herself again and had gaily announced her willingness to look after the sufferer. It was clear to Helen that Anne rather fancied herself in the new role, and welcomed the opportunity of wiping out the memory of yesterday's fiasco.

But when Helen returned at five o'clock that afternoon she found Anne swinging idly in a porch hammock, and John in bed in his own room.

"Thank God, you're back!" was his greeting.

"Didn't Anne take care of you?"

"She tried to." John was pathetically loyal. "But she has never had headaches herself, so it's simply impossible for her to realize what they are. After she had put on one or two ice packs she expected me to be cured and she talked till I wanted to throw things at her. Of course, she meant awfully well," he quickly added. "She simply didn't understand. She thought I needed to be amused and—by Jove" —he groaned at the memory—"she even expected me to amuse her. I suppose she thought my headache was only an excuse to loaf at home," he went on, with touching unconsciousness of the importance of this admission. Helen's lips twitched again. Men were such children! She began to wonder why she had ever let herself be unhappy over this one. Yet, also like children, they would get into mischief if they were not watched and prevented.

"You're a lot better now, aren't you?" she asked. "You always are, in the evening."

"O, yes. It's practically over. I'll be down to dinner."

"That's good. I've telephoned Bert to come in for dinner and bridge. We won't play late."

"All right," John spoke with such alacrity that Helen's lips twitched again. It was clear that he welcomed the presence of a newcomer to help wipe out the memory of a second humiliating day. It had occurred to him that for some reason he and Anne were not getting on well together.

Herbert Mason, John's classmate and chum at New Haven, would have been a satisfactory addition to any party. Tonight he was welcomed with special enthusiasm by each of his three companions. He was a big, upstanding, handsome chap with a grin like that of a friendly bulldog, and he played an excellent game of bridge. So did Miss Ward, and she and he defeated their host and hostess so badly that the former pleaded his headache as an excuse to drop the game in favor of talk or music.

Helen, announcing that she had neglected him all day, took him to the divan and propped him up with pillows, while the rest of the program moved along its inevitable course. Anne Ward would flirt with any man at sight and she was already attracted by Mason, whom she had met frequently during her visit. Moreover, tonight she was a victim of wounded vanity and pique and the conjugal tableau on the divan excessively annoyed her. Though she was conscious of the unwisdom of such action, and at first was more or less on her guard, she ended, as John Ross mentally put it, by "bringing out her whole bag of tricks" for the benefit of his friend.

They were good tricks, but familiar ones. John had seen them all during the last fortnight when they were used on him. He watched Miss Ward rather somberly at first, his eyes cold, the characteristic little ridge between them. Then, suddenly he turned to Helen with a chuckle.

"So that's the way they always do it, those women," he said in her ear. "I thought they'd have more subtlety, more finesse, and, above all, more variety. I thought they changed their methods with different men. But she's the same, I see, with every one." And again he was blissfully unconscious of the admission he had made.

The next morning Anne came to Helen in her garden.

"Come and sit down," she began, drawing her to a bench under an apple tree. "I want to talk to you." And as they sat side by side, she added, without preparation: "You win! I'm going away!"

"Really! Before your visit it over?"

"It's over, and well you know it's over," Anne mocked lightly. "I shouldn't have come," she went on more seriously. "If you feel that too deeply, Helen, please remember that I held off for three years."

"You mean——" For the first time Helen turned and met her eyes.

"I mean exactly what I say. I've held off for three years. I was attracted by John the first day I met him. I knew exactly what would happen if we saw much of each other."

But this was too much for John's wife. She stiffened.

"Don't you think you're making a great deal of a trifle?" she asked coldly. "I think you'd find that you could stay on with us indefinitely and quite safely."

Anne laughed. "I suppose I could, really, now that you're on the warpath," she admitted. "I realized as soon as you started that I'd be no match for you. You knew me too well, and you're on your own ground, and you fight without mercy. You'd show John every weakness I have before you got through; and while it's barely possible I might make a better showing when I got my second wind it really isn't worth the trouble."

She yawned. "You see, my dear Helen," she continued, "I don't want your John, anyway. He's not my type—and there are too many other men in the world. As a matter of fact," she indiffirently ended, "I never want any of them very long."

"I wonder if you know," Helen Ross said slowly, "just how horrible you are!"

Anne, who had been digging a hole in the grass with the tip of her parasol, turned and looked at her. "I suppose that means good-by," she suggested without resentment.

"Not necessarily. I have no fear of you," Helen hastened to say. "You couldn't get John in a thousand years, however much you wanted him. A remark he made last night showed me that all the time, even when you thought you had him in your hook, he was merely studying you as a new type. You see, he had never met your sort before, though he had so often heard of it. You gave him his one chance to see a vamp in action, and being a normal man he took it. But he wouldn't have gone very far."

Anne rose. "That's as it may be," she remarked conversationally. "Neither you nor I will ever know, my dear Helen, how far John Ross would have gone if you hadn't caught on so quickly. But I agree with you that he has stopped short, and in any event I'm off. I telephoned for a taxi before I left the house and I've just time to get the noon train."

She held out her hand and Helen got up to take it. "Good-by," she said. Anne hesitated, bent as if to kiss her, and suddenly straightened without carrying out the impulse.

"I've always loved you, Helen," she muttered.

At the words Helen's eyes met hers with sudden intentness, as if she were seeing this friend for the first time.

"I think you have—a little," she admitted.

"A great deal—for me. More, really, than I've ever loved any one else."

"Need we talk about that?" Helen turned away and fixed her eyes on her home. It was still left to her, with the two she most loved. "You see, that's all over," she ended, quietly.

"Yes, it's over—and I finished it. I threw it away in exchange for a week's flirtation that meant nothing to me but a temporary excitement. Well," Anne hesitated, looking at her curiously, "that's the sort I am. I'm a rotter, and you've always known I was one. Yet you loved me, and forgave anything and everything I did till it touched you. That always surprised me. I suppose you won't believe it, but part of the stimulation of this little game I've played lay in finding out whether you'd forgive me even this. You won't and now I know it. But if ever I get in a hole (and I'm pretty sure to land in one before I'm through) I'll call on you, Helen—and you'll come!"

Helen's gaze did not shift from her house. She was telling herself that nothing else mattered so long as the foundations of that home remained firm, but she was conscious of an intolerable sense of loss and loneliness. "Yes, " she conceded in a low voice, "I suppose I'd come."

"I know you'll come. Good-by —till then!"

Anne walked away, and Helen watched her till she disappeared into the house. She had always loved Anne's walk—that free, splendid stride which was one of the many misleading things about Anne, suggesting, as it did, the outdoor life Anne had never lived.

Helen sat down on the bench again and waited. She could not re-enter her house till Anne had left it. Then she would go back and open all the windows and let the fresh morning breezes blow through its rooms. The house had not been as well aired as usual while Anne was with her. Anne objected to drafts. Helen's thoughts ran on. Tonight she and John would go to one of the summer concerts—but could she bear music tonight? She had not realized how strange life would seem without Anne. It was as if a third of her heart was very cold and very empty. Something which had filled that space had been torn out of it with violence.

She heard the taxicab drive up, the front door of the house open and close. She could have seen the last of Anne by turning her head, but she did not turn it until the taxicab wheezed away. Then she rose and went back into the house with dragging steps.

As she entered the hall she had a sense of its desolation, and something of the feeling followed her into the living room and across to her pet chair. When she sank into the chair's soft depths and closed her eyes the peace and serenity of the familiar atmosphere enveloped her like a rising sea. Here she belonged, safe and happy with her Beloved Two, and there were all sorts of pleasant duties before her which she had been neglecting for days.

She rose briskly and hurrying to the various windows opened each of them in turn to the morning breeze. Some dust on John's writing table caught her eye. Jane, a well-meaning but temperamental duster, had overlooked one corner. Helen took a dusting cloth from a convenient drawer and dusted the spot. Anne's photograph smiled at her from the mantel above the fireplace. She picked it up, tore it into small pieces, and dropped the fragments into the empty grate. She could not so easily dispose of the old brass fire set and samovar Anne had sent her from Russia, nor of the oriental rug given her as a wedding present. Indeed, she now remember, the house held dozens of Anne's gifts. Anne had always been very generous. She must eliminate these souvenirs of Anne, one by one, doing nothing that would attract John's attention. In the meantime they would be here to remind her.

A sudden sense of the irony of life took her by the throat. Why, of all the women in the world, should the only one she loved have to be the one she could not trust? She hurried to the nursery.

"I'll have my lunch with Junior," she told the nurse. "Please tell the cook to send me up some tea and sandwiches."

She knelt down beside Junior as she spoke, passionately kissing the back of his fat neck as he bent over his blocks, and Junior responded with an affable but preoccupied grunt. He was very busy building a railroad and it was no time for caresses, but all the grownups around him were given to caresses at inopportune moments. This grownup, for example, was now hugging him and crying over him and getting his face wet. Junior sighed. She had never got his face wet before, except by washing it, so something must be wrong. Whatever it was Junior knew he possessed an infallible cure for it. With a final, regretful glance at the unfinished railroad, he put his arms around her neck and made her a collar of kisses, while she laughed at him through her tears.

Things New and Old About the Bible :

Objections to Divine Fatherhood.

Rev. W. P. King

THE justification of suffering as a disciplinary agency may be further illustrated.

6th. Suffering is the stimulus of all progress, social and individual. A world without trouble and suffering would be a world without progress. Our modern liberty was purchased with blood on a thousand battlefields. Without the shedding of blood there is no freeing of slaves, no emancipation of serfs, no liberty of thought or speech, and no remission of sins. The blood-soaked battlefields of Europe are one great Calvary, out of the agony of which there shall spring forth a fairer, better world. It is the way of personal growth and progress. Softness and ease hold no spiritual stimulus. The young man strives to make his fortune. But it is necessity that makes him industrious. It is want that makes him struggle to create his own opportunities. And when at fifty he stands forth a giant, the father reverses the divine method and shields his son, builds for him a hothouse against every chilly wind, hires servants to wait on the child, and makes him soft and pulpy. He sends the boy to college when he does not want to go, and the young perfumed fashion-plate drifts into the classroom occasionally for the intellectual drippings that fall from the professor's desk. He sums up his college career with the sentiment, "It is better to have come and loafed than never to have come at all." And then the father in his old age, broken-hearted over his son, asks what he has done that God should disappoint him in his chcildren, and says with Aaron of old, "I poured in the gold and there came out this calf."

God makes men perfect through struggle and suffering.

"Then welcome each rebuff
That turns earth's smoothness rough,
Each pang that bids nor stand nor sit but go."

7th. Suffering purifies and develops the soul. Suffering subdues the stubborn will. Sin is self-direction, self-will. It would not do for God to let us move on smoothly in all our ways. When there are no changes men fear not God.

Scientists tell us that bird music, which is one of nature's foremost charms, has arisen out of the bird's cry of distress in the morning of time; that originally the music of field and forest was nothing more than an exclamation caused by the bird's bodily pain and fear, and that through the ages the primal note of anguish has been evolved until it has risen into the ecstacy of the lark, melted into the silver note of the dove, swelled into the rapture of the nightingale, and unfolded into the vast and varied music of sky and summer. The spirit of man has never given forth its sweetest, purest tones until touched by the hand of the divine musician.

"But know for all time this,
There's blood upon the way the saints have trod,
The singers of a day shall pass and die,
The world itself shall pass, who passed them by,
But they of the exceeding bitter cry,
When death itself is dead and life is bliss,
Shall stand in heaven and sing their song to God."

In nature's fierce heart, carbon is turned into diamond. Under the surface of the soil, heat and pressure convert limestone into blood-stained marble. The fruit is made sweet by the frost. Iron with the fire makes steel. The marble with the chisel makes the statue. The crushing of the grapes makes wine. Raw human nature with trouble and disappointment makes supreme manhood.

"Life is not as idle ore,
But iron dug from central gloom,
And heated hot with burning fears,
And dipped in baths of hissing tears,
And battered by the shocks of doom,
To shape and use."

I am claiming to offer no final and perfect solution to this world problem of suffering. But since its result is to lift men godward, we can wait on certain mysteries. "When He hath tried me I shall come forth as gold." "And now men see not the bright light which is in the clouds but the wind passeth by and cleanseth them."

"But now mine eye seeth thee."

"The cry of man's anguish went up unto God;
Lord take away pain,—
The shadow that darkens the world thou hast made,
The close coiling chain
That strangles the heart, the burden that weighs
On the wings that would soar,
Lord take away pain from the world thou hast made,
That it love thee the more."

Then answered the Lord to the cry of His world,

"Shall I take away pain,
And with it the power of the soul to endure,
Made strong by the strain?
Shall I take away pity, that knits heart to heart,
And sacrifice high?
Will ye lose all your heroes that lift from the fire
White brows to the sky,
Shall I take away love, that redeems with a price
And smiles at its loss?
Can ye spare from your lives that would climb unto mine,
The Christ on his cross?"

The Worlds' Greatest Pictures

"THE NIGHT WATCH" :: :: :: By Rembrandt

This is the sixteenth of a series of 52 greatest paintings, which represent the choice of the art directors and connoisseurs throughout North America. Reproduction of this art masterpiece appears in today's rotagravure section of The Constitution.

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY.

'Tis a long bridge that spans the life of a home-loving husband with that of a nomad, and equally wide is the gap that separates the system of the master painter, who calendars his appointments for sittings months in advance, from the common painter who peddles his wares from house to house; again, 'tis a long weary journey from the position of affluency to the deathbed of a pitiful pauper, whose friends contribute the sum of seven dollars and fifty cents to assure a decent burial. Yet, strange and far-fetched as it may seem, Rembrandt, the "prince of darkness," traversed the bridge, leaped the gap and covered the journey in the course of his sixty-three years in this world.

"The Night Watch," now hanging in the Ryks Museum at Amsterdam, was painted in the year 1642, when he was at the height of his career. It is considered his greatest masterpiece, yet it was instrumental in checking his progress. Following an established precedent Captain Banning Corq arranged for Rembrandt to make an oil painting of his company of Musketeers, which was to be paid for by subscription among the soldiers. The scene shows the company issuing from their quarters. The captain is shown in the foreground giving orders to his lieutenant. When the painting was finished the soldiers, outside of four or five whose features were easily discernible, searched in vain for their likenesses lost in the shadows of the composition. The artist's first idea was to compose a picture. He was willing to incur their enmity by sacrificing personalities for aesthetic consideration. The soldiers' prides were injured and they voiced their disapproval.

"The Night Watch," as it now stands, measures eleven by fourteen feet. In 1715, the picture was moved to the Town Hall of Amsterdam, and in order to fit it in its assigned place, parts on either side had to be cut off.

Like Hobbema, no real record of Rembrandt's early youth is available. To state the date of his birth is to hazard a guess, but it is generally believed that he was born on July 15, 1608, at Leyden, Holland, being the fifth of six children born to the wife of Harmen van Rijn.

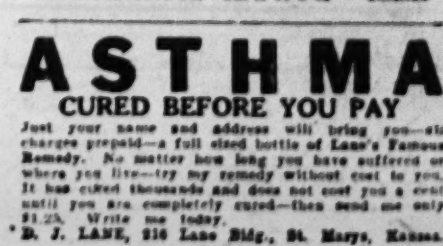

After studying art for several years under capable teachers in both Leyden and Amsterdam, Rembrandt converted a large room in his father's mill into a studio, which was lighted by a single small window built high on the wall. It was here that he made his ingenious discovery of the effects of lights and shades by noting how the dim light from the window fell on the face leaving the rest of the body in darkness.

In 1630, at the age of 22, Rembrandt returned to Amsterdam to make it his permanent residence. In 1632, he finished his first great picture, the "Lesson in Anatomy." In this same year he married Saskia van Ulenborch. Their short married life, which ended eight years later in 1642 when death claimed her, seems to have been the only period of happiness that entered the life of this great painter. This was the same year he finished "The Night Watch." The death of his wife and the soldiers' disapproval of the painting dampened his zeal. At this juncture, gloom enters his life and happiness departs never to return. Those unrelenting years brought sorrow after sorrow to make his last days upon this earth more miserable. Embarrassed by financial troubles, stripped of his properties, further saddened by the death of his second wife and of his son, Titus, his vision impaired, his once vigorous constitution now a wreck, forced to change his lodgings with uncomfortable frequency for failure to provide rent, Rembrandt gladly welcomed death in the poorly furnished room on the Rozengraft that early October morning in 1669.

BARRACUDA :: :: A Blue

INSTALLMENT XIV.

WHEN he awoke with a start dawn showed under the window shade. He oughtn't to have fallen asleep! Anything might have happened! It was already a quarter past six—a new day. In gray dawn his little yellow house looked as lifeless as when he had last seen it. He climbed the steps and rapped persistently on the front door.

The most dear of faces was looking out at him through the glass panel. The bolt was drawn and he slid in. She was in a loose house dress, stockings and slippers; her hair had not been taken down. She must have spent the night sitting up or lying dressed on the edge of a bed. The questions were in her eyes. Speaking low he gave her the substance of the adventure so far as he knew it.

She pulled off his hat and looked at the purple patch in his hair. "You must go to the other doctor—have it dressed properly. Will you?" There was something intoxicatingly possessive about that, as though she claimed a right to look after him; but as he nodded assent she went on:

"A man telephoned here only a quarter of an hour ago. I turned the key on Selma, as you said. I think she tried the door some time in the night, but I'm not sure. Nothing else happened all night. Then only a quarter of an hour ago the telephone rang. I went to answer it. It was a man's voice. It said, 'How's de honey?' I said, 'Fine. How's you?' I tried to make it sound like Selma. Then he said nothing for a moment and I was afraid to say anything. And then he said, 'Goin' to de picnic?' and I said, 'Yes,' and hung up." She made a confession, "Selma wouldn't have said, 'How's you?' She speaks quite correctly."

He smiled over the apology: "It doesn't matter. You wouldn't have fooled him anyhow. I can find out where that came from. Central has instructions from the sheriff to watch this telephone as long as you are here. . . . A quarter of an hour ago!"

"About," she replied in suspense.

Suspicion Veers to Donahue.

In a sort of suspense Dr. Latham wondered, had that telephone message come from the "other man"? Selma might have a negro suitor—but hardly one who would be calling on her at down. It sounded much more like Donahue or the "other man." . . . What had Snyder discovered regarding Eelma by questioning the negro, Sam? There had been no time and opportunity to ask Snyder in the woods. . . . Questions danced through his head.

After all, the plot had missed fire. He had counted heavily on catching the villains in the woods, and now all was uncertainty again. He muttered: "I bungled it. I ought to have caught them. I was a fool to fire. . . ."

She was laughing at him again, low, leaning to his breast. He was trying to laugh at himself—for what could be more absurd than wrinkled brow and muttered regrets now! . . .

"Anyhow, the fingerprints will clear Wheedon and put a noose on Donahue," he said after a moment.

"It could never have been Billy," she replied. "He was a good fellow."

But whatever else was uncertain, she was safe, and it would soon be full daylight, with people passing whom a shot or a shout would call in. Then she could unlock Selma's door and, while daylight lasted, would have nothing more to fear. . . . Quite safe, and in his arms for the moment.

Yet it was not the moment of victory and fulfillment that it should have been, for he had failed. He had come back to her defeated—she was unrelieved from the sheriff's suspicion still with an invisible and brutal foe waiting to strike her again. He had failed her and failed himself.

He went out to the street with the touch of her lips again soft and warm upon his; but his eyes were brooding. He was sort of swindling her—passing bogus coin upon her. . . . Only half past six, and really little to do for a while except wait and wonder.

When he went into the Seminole House dining room at seven the little table under the window at which Donahue and Yim Benson usually sat was empty; but as he was finishing breakfast at which he was in no hurry, the ex-laundryman came in and turned the usual stream of garrulity upon him:

"Good morning, doctor. How's your corporosity this morning? Pete ain't down yet." By this time he had, of course, taken to calling Donahue by a diminutive of his first name. "I bet mebbe that geezer was playing poker last night. Wonder he wouldn't give me a chance to set in." The babble ran on, Latham once or twice making a random reply. He lingered over his coffee; but the freckled detective did not appear. With a certain malicious satisfaction Latham suspected that he was up in the woods—and had been ever since dawn—poking among the palmetto.

His head hurt, and with nothing else to do except wait, he could at least have Dr. Sassoon look at the wound and put on a proper dressing; besides, the good old doctor was entitled to know what had come of the plot to which he had lent a hand. He found the doctor finishing breakfast; his business there took nearly half an hour.

Leaving the doctor's, he went over to his uncle's deserted house and got the car out of the garage. The use of this machine now and then was the only privilege he had asked as the dead man's next of kin in that locality. Putting it into the little brown, vine embowered shed and taking it out again always gave him a pang, bringing back good old Uncle Mark. In this car he and Uncle Mark had ridden up toward Little Bayou that Friday afternoon—a week ago today—when the fatal business started, for on the way they had met Louise and Wheedon, with a brief case. He remembered clearly how the machine had stood in front of the bank, only a quarter of an hour or so after that encounter on the road, when he left Uncle Mark discussing ways and means of getting out of town with Wheedon and Louise. . . . Bringing it all back vividly! A week had gone by and the murderer was still at large, secure, grinning at them.

He wanted the car now because he had that feeling of urgency—something might happen any minute which would require its use, and it might as well be standing on Main street as up here in the garage. He drove it down, therefore, leaving it in front of the bank, and returned to the hotel, where he took a chair on the veranda and vaguely wondered at the commonplace sights of Main street—going on in its langurous fashion, under a high blue sky, just as though nothing out of the ordinary ever had happened or ever could. And time seemed still more languid—almost asleep; hard to stick in the chair as slow minutes dragged. Had anything happened in the woods since he left? What had Snyder learned from Sam? Was Donahue suspicious of him? All that went round and round in his head while he waited; and in his impatience he had to remind himself that Lem White and Basset had no doubt been up all night, watching, in the woods, so they were entitled to some sleep this morning.

Half past ten—a quarter to eleven—ah! There was the lank and gangling figure crossing the street, unlocking the door to the real estate office, going in. Still no sign of Donahue; but he best wait a little longer to avoid the appearance of having had an appointment with Lem. . . . Then there was the wiry little deputy sheriff also crossing the street, entering the real estate office. Latham waited two minutes more; then sauntered over to the bank with an air of leisure, and went around through the parlor into the back room of the real estate office. Bassett was there. Even sitting alert, and he spoke up immediately, with a nod toward the desk:

"He's got a wire. You was wrong."

A yellow telegram lay on the desk. Picking it up, Latham took in the message at a glance; his heart turning heavy with disappointment. He sat down on a corner of the desk, staring stupidly at the deputy sheriff.

The telegram was dated at Tampa an hour earlier and addressed to Lemuel P. White. It ran: "The man is not here." The signature was "Ed."

In handing Donahue the sheet of letter paper on which Snyder had sketched a clock and a pine tree at the inquest, Latham had noted carefully where the detective held it, and marked off that region with a lead pencil when he turned the sheet over to Lem White. By that time he had fully adopted Mrs. Snyder's view that Donahue had "planted" those fingerprints. A clever man, having access to Andrus' room before an alarm was given, might easily have done that. In the bank, under Latham's inattentive eyes,, it would have been easy enough for Donahue to imprint his own fingers on that big document envelope and on the metal lock of the portfolio and then hand them over to Latham. The more Latham had thought of it, after knowing that Andrus himself had been murdered, the more convincing that had seemed. So he had set a trap to get Donahue's fingerprints on that sheet of letter paper with the clock and pine tree.

But this wire from Tampa meant that the expert had examined the fingerprints on that sheet and found that they did not correspond with those on Andrus' things and on the document envelope. In short, Latham had been wrong.

He had overstrained his credit, forcing his view on Lem White and Bassett and the sheriff. The sheriff especially had yielded, provisionally, only from a sort of excess of courtesy, or from politician's caution, not from conviction. So yielding, he had taken a long, tiresome night drive to Tampa, probably losing the better part of a night's sleep—and all on a wild goose chase, as this telegrom showed. Latham was perfectly aware how much like a mere troublesome ass he must now look to Sheriff Worrell; and probably to this good, dependable little deputy also, who had been up all night on his bootless plot, masquerading in a woman's skirt and jacket, squatting under palmetto. Probably Lem White himself thought him a credulous blockhead. Leaden hearted, he wet his lips.

"It was the other man's fingerprints, you see—Donahue planted 'em, but the other man made the fingerprints." To his own ears that explanation sounded fatuous. There he was again—with his mysterious "other man" in a red beard, whom everybody else laughed at. He himself couldn't help seeing that red bearded "other man" in a somewhat ludicrous light.

Bassett stepped to the open door, and said "Hey!" under his breath to summon Lem White, who was staying in the front office for good appearance's sake, until Latham came. The ex-sheriff's long, horsey face wore a grave air as he came in—leaving the door open so that he could see anybody who stepped into the front office. But Latham felt that he was putting on a grave face by force of will—as though, for example, the young doctor had been very tipsy the night before, or otherwise had made a conspicuous fool of himself, and Lem was keeping a straight face to save his feelings.

"I'm sorry," Latham muttered. "Seems I've made a lot of trouble for nothing. . . . But, Lem, there is another man! Somebody hit me on the head last night. I don't believe it was Donahue."

With a genuine gravity, Lem replied, "I don't believe it was, either, Lew. If Donahue trailed Snyder down from Little Bayou he must have been on the other side."

Latham earnestly followed up that advantage: "And we know somebody killed this man Andrus—same man that killed Uncle Mark. Anyhow he was killed in the same way."

"That's true, too," Lem assented. "I don't believe it was Donahue hit you last night. . . . I don't hardly believe 'twas Donahue that punched me on the jaw that day up in the bayhead. I don't believe he's got that big a punch. I ain't sayin' there ain't another man, son. But we don't get him, and it does look to me like you was barkin' up the wrong tree, tryin' to fasten this to Donahue. You got to keep in mind that Donahue wasn't in the bank last Saturday night. That's sure. He was lookin' after Yim Benson who was stewed. You can't get around the evidence on that. He's accounted for absolutely from nine o'clock or earlier till six. We don't get any track of another man. Maybe Donahue don't know any more about him than we do. You see, Lew, this fellah Andrus may just as well have gone into the water Saturday night, after your Uncle Mark was killed, as before. Doc Sassoon says he'd been in the water about a week, but there's no telling within a day or two. He may have been here Saturday night, you see. Nobody'll ever get his fingerprints again."

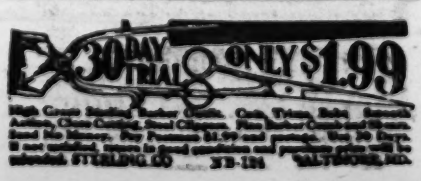

That was true, the condition of the body when taken from the water making it impossible. Therefore, Donahue's fingerprints having been compared with the others, rational suspicion still pointed to Andrus, or Wheedon—leaving it an open question how he met death afterward. The "other man" might be some false pal of his. Against that view Latham really had nothing to urge except the faith of two women, and for the present, on that head, he might as well keep his mouth shut. He already looked sufficiently foolish without asking his companions to believe Andrus innocent because Louise Sheldon and her step-sister did.

"But here's something," he said, and repeated what Louise had told him about the telephone message.

His companions listened gravely. "I can find out at Central where that came from," Bassett suggested. For the sheriff had instructed Central to listen in on telephone talks to Dr. Latham's office so long as the suspect, Louise Sheldon, occupied it. The telephone exchange was above the post-office, in a two-story frame building up the street—only a few steps. It might as well be done now: the deputy slipped out.

"I'd like to know what Snyder found out from questioning that boy Sam," Latham commented, frowning over the puzzle. But there had been no chance to ask questions in the woods. Lem could only say, "Mebbe that would help." Sometimes aloud and sometimes silently, they speculated for a few minutes until Bassett returned.

The night operator at Central had gone home, but left a note. A telephone call for Dr. Latham's office had come from the Seminole hotel at five minutes to six. The Seminole hotel! The three men looked wordless questions at one another. Right under their noses, one might say.

"Donahue may have come in early," Latham suggested—and at once felt that his companions would accuse him of being obsessed with the notion of Donahue. Then he felt humiliated, for while somebody was telephoninng from the office—there being no other telephone in the hotel—he was asleep upstairs, or just waking up. Indeed, Donahue and the "other man" were quite justified in operating under his nose and laughing in his face; no danger that he would keep his eyes open and his wits about him long enough to catch them! He looked at the floor in self-abasement; then, in a sudden passionate reaction, blurted doggedly:

"I'm going over to see if I can find out when Donahue came in."

"No harm in that," Lem replied, indulgently.

At any rate, for the moment there seemed nothing better to do. Latham went out through the bank, the way he had come in, greatly at a loss and humiliated. At the hotel he stumbled upstairs to the third floor and listened at Donahue's door—with a sort of dogged and defiant openness, as though challenging anybody to interfere. Not a sound within. The detective had taught him how easy it was to get into one of these bedrooms with the key to another; but first he put a cautious hand to the knob and turned carefully. The door yielded, swung open; he peeked in.

Just the familiar, empty bedroom; the bed not slept in. Of course, he could search to his heart's content, but there was no chance that Donahue would leave anything here that would reveal a secret to a searcher—especially as he went away and left the door unlocked. Latham closed the door and went heavily downstairs into the lounge; but half way across it stopped in his tracks for there was Donahue himself, at the door, coming in.

Usually the detective's appearance was noncommittal as a fence post; but now it told something. The man was tired. Lines in his face and some loss of color showed it. Moreover, he was untidy. Apparently he had been on his knees; there was a tear in his coat sleeve. Latham would fairly have sworn—with a certain malicious satisfaction—that since dawn he had been poking into palmetto clumps. It was now half past eleven.

But Donahue himself immediately confirmed this suspicion by saying under his breath: "I've been looking around up there since daylight. I didn't find anything." His voice sounded weary.

"Somebody hit me over the head," said Latham, and lifted his hat.

"I thought something like that had happened," the detective replied. "I heard you shooting and saw them putting a bandage on your head. I didn't want Snyder to see me—or Lem."

"No," Latham assented. "Lem told a cock and bull story, but I believe he trailed me into the woods. He's suspicious—thinks he's going to get buncoed out of his share in a big reward. He must have been watching and trailed me into the woods."

The detective's woodeny eyes looked as expressionless as two buttons. "Probably," he said; but nothing was to be made out of his intonation.

"But I don't think he hit me," Latham went on. "I can't see why he should. Somebody did. I'm wondering who the devil it was."

With an unusual gesture the detective put a hand to his brow. "I think I know," he said. "I'm dead tired now and hungry. I'm going to get a bite and some sleep." He glanced up at the office clock. "Come up to my room at three o'clock. Rap on the door if it's shut. That'll waken me. I think I know. If that's so, he'll be the man we're after."

In a sudden confusion, Latham watched him disappear into the closed dining room, where—at the kitchen door—he would get a slice of bread and butter. . . . After all, those fingerprints were not Donahue's. There was not a scrap of real evidence against the man. Why mightn't he, in respect of Mark Egan's murder, be quite innocent—and finally have the solution of the murder?

"Is Donahue going to tell me the solution of the murder?"

For an instant that question hung confusingly in Latham's mind. Then he answered it decisively in the negative. . . . Leaning to his breast smiling up at him, Louise had said, "Billy Wheedon was a good fellow." That affirmation claimed him now; he must believe in Billy Wheedon and disbelieve Donahue. Yet for a moment he had doubted—so cunning a net of falsity all around him; enough to deceive the very devil!

"You killed my uncle, or helped to do it!" he said in his mind to the image of the woodeny, freckled detective, with pale, popping eyes; and the surge of baffled anger went through his mind again. . . . Barracuda, sliding invisibly through the water, darting up to bite a man to death, then down in the inscrutable depth! Operating at their ease, striking now one victim, now another, bold to the point of impudence and always gliding away before anybody could see, leaving no trace!

In a strong inner turmoil he wandered out to the veranda and a moment later his aimless glance was sharply arrested by the sight of a small and hard-used car rolling down Main street toward the hotel. Surely that was the Snyders' machine—and surely that was Mrs. Snyder driving with her husband beside her. Cunning enemies might be watching, and good strategy required that the parties to the counterplot be seen together as little as possible. But Latham now felt a great urgency in the affair, an impending crisis. Since last night's stroke had failed, something decisive must happen very soon. With a certain recklessness, therefore, he went down to the curb, under the eyes of Main street.

as there so often are in murder cases.

Charles Henry Schwartz, a native of Germany, was general manager of the Pacific Cellulose company, which was supposed to manufacture artificial silk from cellulose after a secret formula said to have been held by Schwartz. He had borrowed considerable money and had been selling stock in the scheme. The factory was at Walnut Creek, outside Martinez, California.

To add to his difficulties General Manager Schwartz, a married man, was also being sued for breach of promise by Miss Elizabeth Adams, of Oakland. She had stated in her suit that Schwartz had promised to marry her, that she hadn't the slightest idea he already had a wife.

How long Schwartz planned his crime we do not know, but the general belief is that he had something in mind when he took out insurance policies totaling $180,000 many months before the execution of the deed. These policies were payable to his wife, Mrs. Alice Schwartz, and to the company. He was already very deeply in debt when he took out the policies.

To add color to the picture of Schwartz planning his killing months in advance, the chemist for a long while made a point of dropping into police headquarters near his home and talking over with the officers various phases of crime. He said he was a sort of student of the "perfect crime." He was particularly interested in crimes without clews.

In his talks he would submit problems to the police and argue with them about the solution.

But he, too, slipped.

On the night of July 30 Schwartz was working late at his laboratory when an explosion occurred. The explosion was followed by a small fire in the laboratory. In the place a charred body was found, so badly burned as not to be recognizable. The natural assumption, of course, was that Schwartz had been burned to death while working over some new chemical experiment.

Mrs. Schwartz identified the body at once as that of her husband. She was sure it must be Charles because he had telephoned her only twenty minutes before the explosion, saying he was working late in the laboratory.

Identity Marks.

The police, however, were not altogether satisfied. In a close examination of the body they discovered that the victim had evidently been beaten over the head. This was enough to cause the authorities to look more deeply into the matter. And the more they looked the more they found.

In the first place, acid had been applied to the face to burn away the features, according to experts. The victim's fingers, too, had been so mutilated as to remove all possibility of taking fingerprints. A tooth had been chiseled from the mouth of the corpse. Schwartz's dentist said the chemist had a tooth missing in the same place.

This, then, was not the body of Charles Schwartz. All the facts indicated that the chemist had cold-bloodedly killed a man as the one way out of his difficulties. The victim was finally identified as Gilbert W. Barbe, a sort of tramp evangelist, who had often stopped to talk to Schwartz at the factory.

But where, in the meanwhile, was Schwartz? Characteristically, he had not flown far, nor had he been able to suppress his uncontrollable impulse to talk. He had hired an apartment in Oakland and had been taking his meals with the family of C. W. Hayward, manager of the apartment house. Hayward had known the chemist for two years under the name of Harold Warren.

During his meals with Mr. Hayward, Schwartz discussed volubly the crime at Walnut Creek. Boastfully he asserted it would not take him long to solve the affair, did he care to put his mind to it. He was a student of crime, he had long devoted himself to the study, he averred.

Quite literally, this man talked himself to death.

Strange Resemblance.

For it occurred to Hayward that Warren resembled, to a remarkable degree, the published photographs of Charles Schwartz. He recalled that Warren had stumbled into the apartment early the morning after the explosion, saying he had been in an accident, and was in danger of getting into trouble because there had been booze in the car.

And the outcome of Hayward's ruminations was a telephone call to the Oakland police to come to a certain apartment and arrest a man who might be Schwartz.

The police came. They surrounded the house. They battered on the door of Schwartz's apartment, and while they were breaking in Charles Schwartz sent a bullet through his brain.

Justice was cheated but satisfied.

Face Pores Give Up Their Poisons To New Magic Milk Mask

Men and Women Amazed as New Discovery Almost Instantly Reveals a Hidden Beauty

NEVER before has the attainment of a smooth, clear, beautiful complexion been as simple, as inexpensive as now. Anyone can now have a fine-textured skin, radiant with the fresh coloring of youth, smooth and firm as a child's. In only 15 minutes mind you! In this amazingly short time you can have a brand-new, beautiful complexion!

It seems almost magical. Tired lines, enlarged pores, sallowness—all vanish. Blackheads and pimpleheads are lifted right away. Hidden beauty that you never dreamed you possessed is brought to the surface.

What Is This New Kind of Magic?

It's all very simply explained. The face is covered with millions of tiny pores, through which Nature intended impurities to be expelled. But when dust, bits of dead skin, and other harmful accumulations clog these tiny pores, the impurities cannot escape. The skin becomes dull, coarse, colorless. Soon poisons form in the stifled pores, and blackheads and pimples make their appearance.

Ordinary methods cannot relieve this condition. Water clears the surface of the skin, but cannot get at the tiny mass of impurities and accumulations beneath the surface—the bits of poison that are hidden away in the pores and that are causing all the trouble. Massage may help temporarily, but stretches the skin and eventually causes wrinkles.

Only now, after years of research and experiment, has the positive, natural way been found to relieve the condition of clogged pores at once. Certain elements, when combined in just-right proportions, have been found to possess a remarkable potency which acts on the face pores as a magnet acts on a bit of steel. These elements have been blended into a fragrant, cream-like compound, which is as easy and pleasant to use as a face powder.

Each particle of this amazing new kind of beauty mask is like a tiny, invisible magnet. When you apply it to your face, it seems almost as though millions of tiny magnets were drawing the pore-poisons and accumulations to the surface, absorbing them, lifting away the blackheads and eruptions. The feeling is one of physical relief—refreshing and invigorating.

The MAGIC MILK MASK

(Trade Mark Applied For)

That's what it is called, this remarkable discovery—The Magic Milk Mask. It is applied with the tips of the fingers, just as an ordinary cream would be applied. You may read or relax while this fragrant mask is doing its wonderful work. There will be a cool, tingling feeling as the tiny pores awaken—as the Magic Milk Mask draws the clogged-up impurities to the surface.

In fifteen minutes, simply rinse off the mask. With it you will remove every blackhead and pimplehead, every pore-poison and impurity, every bit of dust, dirt and dead skin. Your complexion will be transformed!

You will declare that a fairy must have touched your face, gently removed the blemishes and impurities, and revealed a new beauty!

MR. NICKELDICK TAKES A WALK.

BY WM. DONAHEY

Mr. Nickeldick opened one eye and iddled his ears. The sun was shing into his room, and he knew it was te and that he should be out of bed.

He had a guilty feeling, as though had been caught doing something shouldn't have done. He felt as ough some one were looking at him.

He opened his other eye and glanced rd the window. A little bird in it suit of tweeds was looking at in a most reproachful manner. bird frowned at the lazy rabbit d then began this verse:

Ain't you ashamed, you sleepy head,
o loaf away your time in bed
Then outside a lovely day begging you to come and play?"

"You're quite right!" exclaimed Mr. ickeldick, throwing back the covers. 'll get up at once."

"See that you do! See that you o!" answered the bird, and with a ttle flip of his tail he hopped off the indow sill and disappeared.

Mr. Nickeldick jumped out of bed nd popped his head through the win-ow.

It was a beautiful day. All the untryside was filled with yellow sunine. He quickly dressed himself in stylish walking suit and skipped wn to breakfast.

"Tilly!" he said to the colored cat ho brought in his cloverseed toasties. ut up a lunch for me. I'm going to end the day walking in the woods."

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh—yes, suh." swered the colored cat.

When he had finished his breakfast e colored cat handed him his lunch, ne up in a white napkin, and he set f whistling a gay rabbit tune.

All morning he wandered among e trees and over the sweet smelling over fields, and at noon he sat by a oisy little creek and ate his lunch.

It was delightfully quiet, and the ntle flutter of the leaves and the nell of wild flowers made Mr. Nickldick drowsy.

"It's just like soft, sweet music," urmured Mr. Nickeldick. He closed is eyes and he seemed to be floating n a soft green-lavender fog.

ARISE! ARISE! you sleepy head.
The sun has gone, the day is dead.
ARISE! and run with all your might,
f you'd escape the coming night."

"There's that bird again," growled Mr. Nickeldick. He opened his eyes,

Met an old turkey.

sat up and looked out, but the bird was not in sight.

"I must have been dreaming," he said to himself, and then he noticed that it was nearly night. He had slept hours, and he was miles from home.

He jumped to his feet and set off in the direction he thought was home. The road did not seem familiar to him, but he kept on until he met an old turkey coming toward him.

"Is this the road to Puckerbush?" asked Mr. Nickeldick, politely.

"PROBABLY! PROBABLY! PROBABLY!" answered the turkey, looking in the direction Mr. Nickeldick pointed.

"I'm from Puckerbush, and I've lost my way," said Mr. Nickeldick.

"PROBABLY! PROBABLY! PROBABLY!" answered the turkey.

"You don't think I'm fibbing, do you?" snapped Mr. Nickeldick, glaring at the turkey.

"PROBABLY! PROBABLY! PROBABLY!" said the turkey.

Mr. Nickeldick was terribly vexed at the answers the turkey gave, and he almost lost his temper, but he quickly saw that would be foolish, so he bowed and hurried on.

The path Mr. Nickeldick was traveling soon led into the deep woods, and he became alarmed, for he might at any minute meet a robber of a bandit. Presently he heard voices, and he just had time to dodge behind a tree before two dangerous looking wolves came into sight.

"I'm hungry enough to eat a polecat," said one of the wolves.

Mr. Nickeldick shivered in his shirt. When the wolves came to the place where Mr. Nickeldick had left the path they stopped and sniffed.

"I smell rabbit!" said one of the wolves.

"It smells like supper to me," laughed the other.

Mr. Nickeldick's shoes were full of cold sweat. He completely lost his head the started to run. He could hear the wolves running after him, and he ran as he never ran before, but with all his speed the wolves gained on him.

"I smell rabbit!"

"I've got to find some place to hide, or I'm a gonner," Mr. Nickeldick thought as he dashed along. He looked for an opening among the rocks, but he could see none small enough to keep out the wolves. Suddenly he saw a light ahead.

At first Mr. Nickeldick thought it was the camp fire of bandit wolves or foxes, and he was about to circle it when he saw the outlines of a house among the rocks. It was a peculiar looking house—in fact, it was nothing more than a great door that led into the side of the hill.

It was a strange, wild place for a house to be, and Mr. Nickeldick felt no honest person could live in such a mysterious hidden place. He felt it would be a dangerous thing to stop there for help, but the wolves were so close on his heels he determined to take a chance. The light came through the partly opened door, and he made a dash for it. It was a huge door, and it was all the rabbit could do to push it open far enough to squeeze in. Once inside, he quickly put his shoulder to the door, and it took every bit of his rabbit strength to swing it shut.

An instant after the great spring lock snapped shut the wolves threw themselves again the locked door.

Poor Mr. Nickeldick heard their swearing and snarling grow fainter and fainter. Everything grew dark about him, and he suddenly slid down to the floor into a little, limp rabbit ball. He had fainted quite away.

To Be Continued Next Sunday.

Summer Time Will Bring in Dollars If You Follow These Instructions

Perhaps you wonder just how you can pick up a few extra dollars between now and September. Probably you don't want to get a regular job, which would leave you little time to go swimming, or to play ball with the other fellows in the vacant lot, but in spite of that, you would welcome some part-time employment that would pay you well. Here are some "dollar ideas" for you. They have been used by other boys and have "worked." No doubt one or more of them would also work for you.

Mowing Lawns

First of all, there is the tried and tested business of mowing lawns. In order to make this job pay well, however, you should take it up in a systematic way. Make out a list of the people in your neighborhood whom you think would be good prospects. Then call upon them and tell them that you are making grass-cutting your regular summer job. Give them a price that will be fair, according to the time that the work requires.

You should be able to get at least a dozen customers in this way. Arrange to mow their grass each week on a definite day. Make out a schedule for yourself, and follow it faithfully The jobs can be done before the sun is too hot in the morning or at other convenient times, and you will still have much of the day for play.

Messenger Service

This is a job that is a little different, and for that reason should appeal to you.

Often the doctors, lawyers and business men in your community have errands to be done, and they must either do them personally, or pay somebody else to do them. They might as well pay you. Get a letter of recommendation from your teacher or minister, and visit the men in the offices of your town. Tell them that you will do their errands for them, and leave your name, address and telephone number. Later call upon them again so that they won't forget about you.

Soon these men will acquire the habit of having you do their errands, and the small fees charged will begin to mount into dollars. If you have a bicycle it will be of great assistance to you in a job of this kind, and will enable you to give quicker service. But even if you have none, you can still make it into a tidy little business for yourself.

A variation of this plan is that of making yourself the errand boy for the women of your neighborhood. Some of the housewives do not have sons to do their errands for them, and they would be glad to employ your services. Moreover, many of the errands could be performed while you were doing those for your mother, and would require very little extra work.

Gardens

Lots of the people near you have backyard gardens. Often they do not have the time to care for them properly. Arrange to water and weed their plots regularly. Get a seed book or book of instructions in gardening and learn your work before you begin. Then you will be able to render them good service and charge them accordingly.

Window Washing

Keeping their windows clean is one task which most women dislike sincerely. For one boy in a town in southern Illinois, however, window-washing proved a profitable summer enterprise.

His working outfit consisted of an old step ladder that he found in the basement of his home, a tin pail of water, a set of drying rags that would not leave lint on the glass, a window dryer with a rubber edge, a sponge, a piece of chamois skin, and a bottle of ammonia in the water.

This boy charged fifteen cents a window, lowering the price to a dime if it was to be washed on only one side. However, you can charge whatever is the fair and customary price.

Usually women will call upon you to wash their windows about once a month, and oftener after a few days of hard rain. If you have enough customers the profits from this business will be large enough to keep you well supplied with spending and saving money.

Flower Boxes

A boy of my acquaintance discovered last spring that nice, well-built, greenpainted boxes for the flowers looked well in the windows of his own home. He made some, and they looked so well that his mother told him that she thought other women would like to have them, too.

So he went around and asked some of the women he knew. Result—two orders for six boxes. The boy had a tool chest in the basement of his home, and with a little material, paint and care, he turned out boxes that were useful as well as an improvement to the appearance of the windows of the neighborhood.

This industrious carpenter has now gone into the business extensively, and he has enough orders to keep him busy in his spare time all summer long. Moreover, he has become quite expert in the construction of the boxes, and has made some "fancy" ones on special orders that have paid him very well.

Fruit Jar Labels

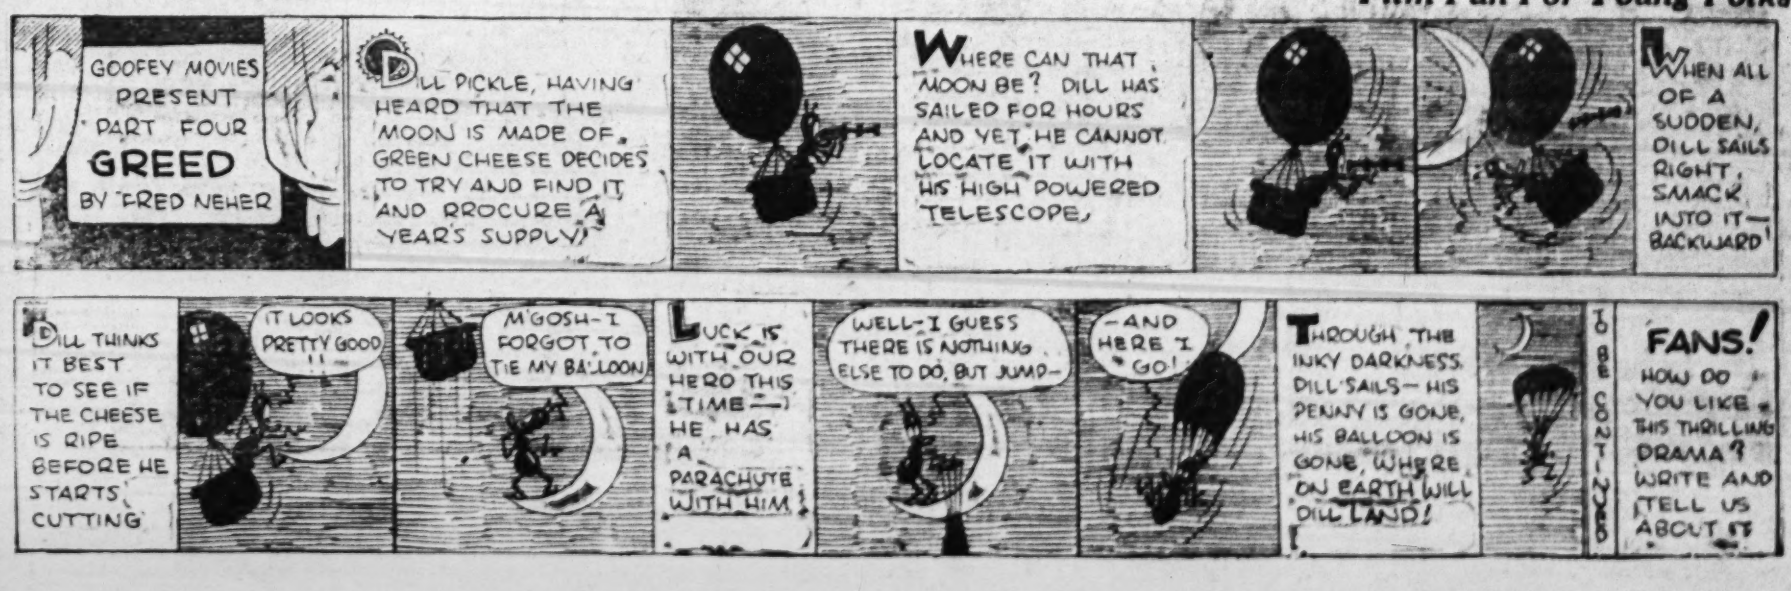

Many housewives prefer individual labels for fuit jars to those the stores sell. But when made at home they may not be satisfactory because the housewife will not have enough time to spend on them. Here, therefore, is a chance for you to pick up some money during canning season.

You can make an attractive set of labels with pen and ink, with a rubber printing set, or on a typewriter. Make a number of them for various fruits and jellies on a large sheet of paper. If you are unable to buy gummer paper at the store, you can make it at home by smearing the back of an ordinary sheet with mucilage. Apply the mucilage before cutting the labels apart.

Carry a few samples of the labels around to kitchen doors while women are doing their canning and take orders. Girls, as well as boys, can find this profitable employment.

A GOOD PLACE

Cavalry Recruiting Officer—"Where did you learn to ride a horse?"

Stupid Recruit—"On the back, sir."

Uncle Dud TELLS ABOUT IT

Well, boys and girls, this time I think I'll tell you about a trip I once made with four friends in an automobile. We decided to drive up into the Green Mountains of New Hampshire and spend a couple of weeks on the trip. So we bought an old car, packed our luggage and ourselves into it, and set out.

I can't begin to tell you all of the places we visited on the way or all of the things we did, but I remember vividly about one night spent in the Berkshire Hills in New York state. We had driven nearly three hundred miles that day, and as night came on we decided to stop and sleep under the stars, scorning a hotel. We parked the car on a little road on the side of a hill and, on the bank above, spread our blankets beneath the sweet-smelling pine trees.

We were all asleep in a few minutes. It must have been several hours later that we were awakened by the loud crash of thunder and the flash of lightning. The rain was upon us before we could move and by the time we reached the shelter of the car, dragging our blankets behind us, we were drenched to the skin. We spent the rest of the night huddled and cramped in the little automobile, and I never passed a more uncomfortable night in all my life.

At Bennington, Vermont, we climbed the tall monument that stands on a hill there, and one of my friends whose heart was not as strong as it should have been, because of the high altitude, fainted. We had a pretty busy time carrying him down the narrow winding stairway to the ground.

You all know of the famous ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Concord, Massachusetts. That was another of the interesting places that we visited. We drove our car over the very route that Paul rode as he "gave the alarm to every Middlesex village and farm." Now, that road is finely paved and covered with a constant stream of automobiles, but as we rode along I wondered if the ghost of the famous rider didn't sometimes clatter over the very route that Paul rode on that momentous night.

In Pennsylvania we spent part of one afternoon driving over the Gettysburg battlefield. We had a guide with us, and he pointed out all the places of interest. The battlefield, as you know if you have been there, is literally covered with tablets and memorials commemorating some particular regiment, officer, or group of men. The guide will tell you that a certain charge was made here, a certain officer fell mortally wounded there, and a certain company fought until hardly a man was left somewhere else. It is all very thrilling, and it makes you realize not only the bravery of our forefathers, but the horror of a war in which brother fought against brother and father against son.

You should visit some of the historic spots of our country when you get the opportunity. And now I'll have to stop for this time. I'll write you another letter a little later.

—UNCLE DUD.

What's the Matter?

Rover and the Lost Fur

Gone! It was gone! Pauline leaned against the car and tried to swallow her heart, which insisted on jumping out of her throat. Her mother's lovely fur was lost. "It just couldn't have fallen out," she thought. "It must have been stolen." Being too warm with her coat and the fur both on, she had taken it off and put it in the back of the car.

"Home again, Polly?" asked her father. "Why, what's the matter? You look as though you had lost your last friend."

"Oh, daddy. It's worse than that. What shall I ever do? I've lost mother's new sable fur."

"Whew!" whistled Mr. Black, looking serious. "That is bad. When, where, and how?"

Pauline told him all that she knew about it. Mr. Black jumped into the car. He decided that they must go back and look for it. "Where's Rover?" he asked, as they tore along the road.

"Why, I don't know," Pauline answered. "He did go to town with me, didn't he? I don't remember when I saw him last. He just won't stay with me. He always is straying off."

"Look! There he is now!" cried her father, pointing ahead of them to a dark spot in the road. "What ever is he doing to that man?"

They watched the dog, a mere speck in the road which rapidly grew larger. He seemed to be guarding something from the man. "Oh, what an awful looking tramp!" cried Pauline.

As the car drew up to them the tramp slunk away to the side of the road, Rover snapping at his heels. "What are you doing?" cried Mr. Black.

The tramp pointed at a black object up the road. "The dog won't let me get that fur me wife lost," he whined.

"Fur!" In a second Pauline was hugging her mother's sable in one arm and dear old Rover in the other. "And to think I scold because he's independent. Why, he has better sense than I."

POSERS!

C'mon, everybody! let's play the Thinking-Cap Game! Whoever can answer all of these questions wins the game besides being a very smart boy or girl.

6. Who was victorious in the battle of Gettysburg?
7. What is the difference between straight and curly hair?
8. Who began using the calendar we have now?

SHORT STORY, JR.
Ambidextrous Tommy

Tommy was "ambidextrous." He had just looked the word up in the dictionary and was almost as proud to think that he knew what it meant and how to pronounce it as he was of the fact that he could use one hand as well as he could the other.

"It's great to be ambidextrous," Tommy bragged as he changed his pencil to his left hand and started writing with it for a while. "I sure am glad I can write with both hands. Here I have been writing all day long and I never would have been able to keep it up if I weren't able to change hands every little bit."

All day Tommy had been working hard on a short story he was writing for a contest. One of his boys' magazines had offered a prize for the best story accompanying a new subscription. Tommy had always been clever at writing, so he thought he would try for the prize of $100.

Dr. Dix came into the room just in time to hear Tommy's last remark. "Well, I'd advise you to sign all your checks with your right hand," he laughed.

"Oh, sure," Tommy agreed. "I know enough to do that." His father had taken out a checking account for him. "I'm going to write them with my right hand. I just wrote my first for the subscription to the magazine." Tommy finished copying his story, folded it, and placed it with the check in the large envelope he had bought for the purpose.

He was very much excited for the next week. He knew he had written a good story. Every one who had read it had praised it, and his teacher had told him that she was almost sure he would win the prize. At the end of the week Tommy received a long envelope from the magazine office. He was very much excited as he tore it open.

This is what Tommy read:

"Dear Sir—Without a doubt your story was the best one entered in our contest. However, it is necessary to award the $100 to the second best with this explanation: Our experts on handwriting have examined your manuscript and they are all of the same opion. The story was not written by the same person who signed the check. Of course this was one of the rules of the contest."

"Did I say it was great to be ambidextrous?" groaned Tommy. "Well, it isn't. I wish I'd never heard of that awful word."

I'LL SPEAK TO HIM ABOUT THAT!

Boss: "What does this mean? Your brother just called up and said you were sick and wouldn't come to work today."

Office boy: "Why, the big boob! He wasn't supposed to call up until tomorrow!"

LUCKY HE WOKE UP!

"I had a funny dream last night."

"Yeh? What was it?"

"I dreamed that I was eating shredded wheat and when I woke up half the mattress was gone."

PAT'S TITLES

An Irishman, while walking down the street, was stopped by a gentleman who asked him if he would give him a match.

Gentleman—"Thank you. You know I'm a man of importance at home. I'm Sir John Burley, Knight of The Garter, Knight of the Iron Cross, Knight of the Golden Fleece, and Knight of the Eagle, and what's your name, my man?"

Irishman—"Me name's Michael Murphy, night before last, last night, tonight, tomorrow night, and every other night."

Jingle Bells for Muggins

Stella Van Vlick, of Jackson, Wyoming, is so fond of Muggins, her Shepherd dog, that she says she would not trade him for any other dog in the whole world. Muggins is big and fat, and he pulls Stella and her sister on a sled in winter. He has a harness with bells on it. The slightest tinkle of the bells will bring Muggins running, no matter how far away he is, for he knows that when the harness go on he gets to go somewhere. And no matter how long or how often he pulls the two girls, he never seems to get tired. If we all had pets like Muggins, we just wouldn't ever walk, would we?

The Duel at One Time Served As a Court

In olden times when two men quarreled they did not go into a law court to have the dispute settled by a wise judge, but instead they decided the matter by fighting.

The custom started when, in olden courts, one man accused another of some misdeed. The accused man would then reply to his enemy, and they would fight with their swords, trusting that God would bring victory to the man who was right.

In the 17th century dueling was so popular among the nobility in France that between 1601 and 1609 over 2,000 men were killed on the dueling ground. This needless waste of life, which really was far from real justice, soon led to the passage of laws which stopped the custom in many lands. Yet even as late as seventy-five years ago men in our country who believed themselves to be insulted would challenge their enemies to fight with pistols or even with swords.

Son of a Lame Duck

There is an interesting story connected with the pet of Frank McCullar, of Denton, Texas. Frank informs us that there is a pond near his house. Last spring when the wild ducks began to fly north, a crippled duck and its mate stopped there. Frank found them and fed them, and when the crippled duke's wing healed, it refused to leave. Later the pair had ten little ducks, but all but one of them died. The remaining one is now Frank's pet.

The little duck's name is Jerry, and Frank says that he does many tricks. "We are all proud of him," writes Frank, "and I surely am glad that we cared for that crippled duck. I have many more pets, including two ponies and a cat, but I like my wild duck best of all because it is so unusual to have a tame, yet wild, duck for a pet."

Frank is mighty fortunate in the matter of pets, but we think that he deserves to be because of his kindness in caring for the crippled duck.

A Sea-going Kitten

Most cats are afraid of water, but in Tacoma, Washington, there is one that likes to play with it! This is a little black Angora kitten, and it is the pet of Ruth E. Nelson. Kitty likes to sit on the draining board beside the kitchen sink and amuse herself with the stream of water that trickles from the faucet. And if they aren't careful Ruth says, the kitten will jump into the sink and take a shower bath under the faucet. Now who says that all cats dislike water?

THE LETTER WRITERS' CLUB

SHELBY, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: How do you feel this morning. I am feeling fine. This is my second letter. I will take for my subject "Education."

An education's value is beyond estimation. You cannot count the value of an education in money. It takes money to get an education and in return it brings money to the one who has it. But an education without plenty of good common sense is of no great value. One can get a comparatively small education and be of more and benefit more from it than a person who goes as far in book-learning as possible and doesn't use it.

When we say an education we do not mean the best of an American education then several years in some foreign country which is famous for its higher schools of learning. If it is one's desire to do so it is grand to have all this extra studying, but the main problem of our country today is the problem of giving the young people a common education with which they may start themselves in the business world and be of some benefit to their country. Then, after they get this start, they can read good books and newspapers and may have almost as good an education as the one who spends half his life in hard study.

The most important part of our education is in the grammar schools and high schools. There the young pupils are taught first of all to be mannerly and the ways of right living and to obey their parents. The first impressions given a child in school generally go with him through life.

Gee! I know you're tired, so I will tell you a little about myself and go.

I have light brown hair, fair complexion, am 5 feet, 4 inches tall, blue eyes, and weigh 120 pounds. I like to have pen friends so all you girls and boys write to me. I am 16 years old, and my birthday is May 5. Who is my twin?

Your unknown friend,
EDNA MAE BROOKS.

LAKELAND, FLA.

Hello Dear Friends: How are all of you by this time? Well, I hope. As I wrote a poem for the letter writers' club and received so many nice letters and cards complimenting my poem, "The Wonderful Country," and as some of the club members have asked me to contribute another I will try. But I cannot promise as good this time, for 'tis not at all times one can concentrate for composure. But I will do the best I can. I will thank the editor for being so generous with the club members as to print their letters. I think a lot of good is derived from the club by all who read the many letters. If the editor will scare the office cat away for a while and allow this to find its way to the press, I know all of you club members will join with me in giving three big cheers to the editor of one of the grandest publications in the sunny southland.

Ra! Ra! Ra! for The Atlanta Constitution.

THE QUIET EYE.

The orb I like is not the one
That dazzles with its lightning gleam;
That dares to look upon the sun,
As though to challenge its bright beam.

That orb may sparkle, flash and roll;
Its fire may blaze, its shaft may fly;
But not for me, I prize the soul
That slumbers in a quiet blue eye.

All letters answered.

ATLANTA, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you let a Florida girl visiting Atlanta for a while join your club? I am 4 feet tall, am 9 years old and am in the fifth grade. I went to school in Florida. I learned to Charleston and do all kinds of acrobatic stunts. I went in the ocean every Saturday and Sunday. The ocean is very pretty. When I went in I always had a good time. The Florida schools were out May 14. I have a pet dog. It is a Boston bull. I go to the Presbyterian church. I like it fine. All of you boys and girls write to me.

A new friend,
MARY STRIBLING.

Dear Unknown Friends: Step aside and let a Florida boy join your happy band. I am 4 feet, 9 inches tall, 12 years old and weigh 90 pounds. I like to go to school. I like my teacher fine. I like to read the funies.

Your unknown friend,
PHILIP EDWARD ROARK.

DUNN, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: Please move over and let a girl from North Carolina join your merry club. My birthday is August 21. I will be 15 years young. I have blue eyes and fair complexion and am in the eighth grade. My school closes June 4. I sure will be glad when it closes for I am tired of going to school but I love all my teachers. Catherine Phillips and I are cousins. We are both writing to see who receives the most letters, so you people who like my letter best please write at once, as I will answer all the letters I receive.

Dear Boys and Girls: Is there room fo one more? If there is I want to join your club. I live three and one-half miles from town and it is very lonesome out here. I am 11 years old, am 5 feet, 4 inches tall, have fair complexion, blue eyes and dark hair. My birthday is November 14. Who is my twin? All who write send pictures of yourselves and I will do the same. All boys and girls write to me and I will answer all I get.

Your unknown friend,
ALMA HIGHTOWER.

ATLANTA, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Hope there is room for another Georgia girl. I have been reading the letters on the letter writers' page every Sunday and certainly do enjoy them. I am 5 feet tall, have black hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am 14 years old and will be 15 on January 19. I go to Hoke Smith junior high school. I am in the eighth grade. I enjoy going to school and like all my teachers fine. I enjoy reading more than all. I certainly would be glad to receive a letter from any of you. All of you write to me and you will certainly get an answer. Always a friend to any of you.

CHATTAHOOCHEE, GA.

Lo! Frieds: I'll hop in your happy band again if you will let me. I have written twice before but my letter didn't appear the second time. I wrote there was a mistake about my name. It is Winnell Forester and they had it Winnell Fortson. Ha! Ha! Isn't that a funny name. I hope to see this in print. All of you boys and girls write to me and you will surely get an answer.

Your friend.
WINNELL FORESTER.

RED OAK, GA.

Dear Friends: I think it is about time for me to write again. I haven't written since I joined and that has been almost a year. Aren't you glad spring is here? I surely am. Of all the seasons in the year, I like spring best. The whole world seems to be so happy and bright. I certainly do enjoy reading the letters that you boys and girls write. I think Billy McCoy's poem "The Wonderful Country" was just fine, and I'm sure all enjoyed reading it. Have any of you the recitation, "Tommy's Prayer?" If so, will you be so kind as to send me a copy of it? If you will I certainly will appreciate it. Well, as I have been here once before I guess I won't say how I look. My birthday is May 3. Who is my twin? Any of you write and I will gladly answer.

A friend,
MERLE CREEL.

AUSTELL, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: This is our first letter to the club, and we hope to receive a cordial welcome. We are cousins living near each other. We go to Powder Springs high school. I, Jewell Williams, am 14 years old and am in the seventh grade. I like my teacher very much. Our school closed May 21.

I, Christine Thomas, am 11 years old and am in the fourth grade. We live in the country in a very thickly populated section. The land is very nice for farming as it is hilly and is clear of rocks. We would like to receive letters from any of you boys and girls that care to write to us. We hope all who write will send their photo.

Your unknown friends,
JEWELL WILLIAMS.
CHRISTINE THOMAS.

MURRAYVILLE, GA.

Dear Unknown Friends: I, too, want to join your happy club. I am a little Georgia boy 11 years old. I have black hair, dark brown eyes and weigh 86 pounds. I go to school at Manget Institute. I am in the sixth grade. For pets I have one white rabbit. What season do you like best in the year? I certainly do like spring the best because the apple trees, peach trees and others unfold their blossoms which winter blotted out with its cold winds. I like to go hiking in the spring and get wild flowers. It is not far to the foothills of the Blue Ridge and I go there nearly every spring. I hope to hear from all of my unknown friends.

A new friend,

FULTON, ALA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you permit another boy into your letter club? I am 15 years old, was in the tenth grade when I had to stop from school to help my father. My little brother was in the infirmary seven weeks and one day. My father had to stay with him all the time for he was awful sick. He has to wear crutches now, because one leg is shorter than the other. He is 11 years old and in the fifth grade. I am 5 feet, 6 inches tall and weigh 95 pounds. My birthday is October 4.

Your unknown friend,
WILBUR McMILLAN.

SILVER, S. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: May I join your club? I am 3 feet, 6 inches tall. I am 9 years old and am in the third grade. I have fair complexion and blue eyes. I weigh 63 pounds. I like to play baseball, football and go in swimming. We have a big orchard. My father and mother are living. For pets I have a cat and pig. My pig is named Billy. I like to ride horseback. We have a big grey horse. I had some pigions but they went away. We have some little biddies. I like to feed them. Some of you boys and girls write to me and I will answer all letters I receive.

THE OLD PROSPECTOR WHO GAVE CHESTER THE MAP CONTAINING THE PRICELESS SECRET OF THE CITY OF GOLD HAS LOST HIS MEMORY AND CAN FURNISH NO CLEW AS TO THE CITY'S WHEREABOUTS BUT OUR THREE FRIENDS REFUSE TO GIVE UP UNTIL THEY HAVE FOUND THE SECRET OF THE MINERS MAP

IT HAS BEEN WISELY SAID, PATIENCE AND A MULBERRY LEAF WILL MAKE A SILK GOWN —

IF THERE WAS SOME WAY OF FINDING OUT WHERE THE CITY OF GOLD IS — THIS IS MORE LIKE A PUZZLE THAN A MAP —

IF THE CITY HADN'T BEEN WELL HIDDEN 'TWOULD HAVE BEEN LOOTED YEARS AGO AND YOU MAY LAY TO THAT —

THIS COMMONPLACE ONE BELIEVES LOVE, GOLD AND A COUGH ARE THREE THINGS THAT WILL NOT REMAIN CONCEALED —

THE CHART IS SO OLD THE INK HAS FADED OUT — IT WOULD TAKE AN EAGLE EYE TO MAKE OUT THE MESSAGE NOW —

THE WRITING IS BEYOND THE PERCEPTION OF THIS PERSON'S INCAPABLE VISION —

I KNOW WHAT I'LL DO, I'LL GET UNCLE BIM'S POWERFUL MAGNIFYING GLASS — THEN I BET WE'LL BE ABLE TO READ THAT OLD MAP —

THE MAGNIFYING GLASS, SIR, THANK YOU, SIR —

THAT GLASS WILL MAKE A FLY'S FOOT-PRINT LOOK AS BIG AS AN ELEPHANT'S —

THIS ILLITERATE INDIVIDUAL PERCEIVES THAT MAP IS WRITTEN IN THE BEAUTIFUL LANGUAGE OF SPAIN —

OH, NO WONDER I COULD NOT READ WHAT IS WRITTEN ON IT — YOU TAKE THE GLASS AND TRANSLATE THE MESSAGE INTO ENGLISH —

THIS MAP WAS DRAWN BY DON PEDRO DE SALOVEZ IN THE YEAR 1520 — HE SAYS THE LAND OF MANY DANGERS IS EIGHTY DAYS MARCH FROM THE OCEAN — IT IS IN THE MIDST OF THE HIGH MOUNTAINS — IT IS ENTERED THROUGH THE VALLEY OF MYSTERIOUS VOICES THAT LEADS TO THE LOST CANYON AND DEEP IN THE LOST CANYON IS THE UNDER-GROUND GATEWAY THAT LEADS TO THE CITY OF GOLD — 400 YEARS AGO — HOW TRULY HAS IT BEEN SAID THE GREAT WALL STANDS, THE BUILDER IS GONE —

LET US QUESTION SOME ANCIENT PERSON WHO MAY TELL OF THINGS FORGOTTEN BY THE YOUNG — IT IS WRITTEN WHAT YOUTH LEARNS AGE DOES NOT FORGET —

GEE, I WISH THE OLD PROSPECTOR HAD NOT LOST HIS MEMORY —

OLD MARAKILA THE FORTUNE TELLER MIGHT GIVE US SOME INFORMATION — SHE WAS AN OLD WOMAN WHEN THE FIRST WHITE MAN REACHED THIS COUNTRY —

WE WANT TO KNOW DID YOU EVER HEAR OF A CITY OF GOLD OR A PLACE CALLED THE LAND OF MANY DANGERS? WHERE IS IT? HOW DO YOU GET THERE?

MY PEOPLE KNEW OF THE CITY OF GOLD COUNTLESS YEARS AGO — THE BONES OF MANY BRAVE WARRIORS ARE BLEACHING ON THE BURNING SANDS OF THE DESERT THAT SURROUNDS THE COUNTRY OF MANY DANGERS — THE CITY WAS BUILT BY A RACE OF PEOPLE THAT EXISTED WHEN THE OLD WORLD WAS YOUNG — THEY ALL PASSED INTO THE SHADOWS — EVEN THEIR NAME IS FORGOTTEN —

THE COUNTRY OF MANY DANGERS IS THE HOME OF WARLIKE SAVAGES — TO ENTER IT MEANS DEATH — TERRIBLE STORMS, MOUNTAINS THAT RAIN FIRE AND DEADLY REPTILES ALL COMBINED TO GUARD THE HIDDEN CITY FROM AVARICIOUS MEN —

WHO BUT THOSE OF ILL REGULATED INTELLECT DENY THAT A SMALL GIFT IS BETTER THAN A GREAT PROMISE —

THANK YOU FOR GIVING US SO MUCH VALUABLE INFORMATION —

IT IS WRITTEN A DANGER FORSEEN IS HALF AVOIDED — WE MUST GUARD OUR SECRET FROM ALL UNWORTHY ONES —

THAT MAP IS WORTH MILLIONS — MANY'S THE SAILOR MAN HAD TO WALK THE PLANK FOR LESS —

HELLO WIFEY, HOW'D YOU MAKE OUT TODAY DRIVING OUR CAR FOR THE FIRST TIME?

OH! I DINGED UP THE FRONT MUD GUARD PURTY BAD-

HOW'D YOU DO THAT?

THE CAR WENT UP OVER MRS. TATTLE'S SIDE WALK-

HOW DID IT COME TO DO THAT?

SHE WAS UP IN HER DOORWAY AND BECONED FOR ME TO COME UP,-

AND I TRIED TO, ABSENTMINDEDLY, WITHOUT GETTING OUT OF THE CAR.

THE BREADWINNER.

GAME CALLED ON ACCOUNT OF RAIN!

GEE, WHAT LUCK! I WAS BORN WITH TWO STRIKES ON ME!!

NOW DON'T YOU GO OUT PERRY! MR. AND MRS. GILTEDGE ARE COMING TO-DAY WITH THEIR BOY REGGIE! I WANT YOU TO MEET REGGIE!

AW, WHO WANTS TO MEET A GUY WITH A NAME LIKE THAT??

I DON'T SEE WHY I HAFTA WAIT FOR THEM SOCIETY DODOS IN HERE!! I COULD JES' AS WELL WAIT OUT-SIDE —

GUESS I CAN WAIT FOR THEM PEOPLE DOWN AT TH' CORNER 'STEAD OF HANGIN' AROUND HERE!!

THEM VISITORS WILL ONEY SET AROUND TH' HOUSE AN' CHEW TH' RAG - THEY WON'T MISS ME! I MIGHT AS WELL LOOK FOR TH' GANG!!

NO, HIS UNCLE TOOK HIM AN' SPUD AN' CHINK TO TH' BALL GAME! HE WANTED TO TAKE YOU TOO, PERRY!!

IS SPIKE HOME, MRS. McADAM?

HOLY SMACKERS! A REG'LAR BALL GAME - AN' FOR NOTHIN'!! GEE, I HOPE I KETCH 'EM BEFORE THEY GO IN !!!

DID YOU SEE A MAN WITH THREE KIDS AN' ONE OF 'EM HAD A SWEATER ON AN—

GO ON! BEAT IT!! I'VE BEEN WATCHIN' YOU HANGIN' AROUND HERE TRYIN' TO SNEAK IN!

ENTRANCE

WHEEE — YAY — HE'S GOT A GLASS ARM — SOCK IT ON TH' NOSE — STEAL SECOND — RUN - RUN - FOR TH LOVE OF MIKE, RUN — WOW! Y'GOT HIM GOIN' NOW!!

BALL PARK

HEY SPIKE!

HEY SPUD!

HEY CHINK! WHERE ARE YA ???

HEY! WOT DID I TELL YOU ABOUT HANGIN' AROUND HERE —

A-AAHH!! I MISSED A SWELL CHANCE TO SEE TH' BALL GAME! I S'POSE I'LL HAFTA GO HOME AN' SET AROUND WITH WINNIE'S DUMB SOCIETY FRIENDS!!

WHERE DID YOU GO PERRY? MR. GILTEDGE TOOK REGGIE TO THE BALL GAME —

AND HE WAS SEARCHING ALL OVER FOR YOU - HE WANTED TO TAKE YOU ALONG TOO!!

BRANNER.

YEA BO- ONE BUZZ BY WILL

I HAVE NO TROUBLE GETTING OUT OF BED IN THE MORNING.—

I USE TWO ALARM CLOCKS, THOUGH,—

TWO OF 'EM;

YES, A BIG ALARM CLOCK AND A SMALL ONE, TOO.

WHY USE TWO?

I'M A VERY SOUND SLEEPER,—

AND I SET THE BIG CLOCK TO AWAKEN ME IN TIME TO HEAR THE OTHER ONE —
